CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance, Lakefield.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

HONOR TO THE BRAVE.

Major Bolton, late in command of Bolton's Scouts," in the Northwest, who is over on a visit, took a run up to Lakefield on Saturday to see his former home and friends. A number of the latter, who still remember their first Reeve with kindly feelings, along with others, who have admired his course in the late troubles in the Nor'west, entertained him to a supper at Dion's Hotel on Monday evening. "Mine Host" had spared no expense or trouble and when the guests were ushered into the dining room, they found a table which would do honor to many a city or town in Canada. It is seldom there has been such a representative gathering here, as all classes from the Reeve to the day laborer met to welcome their former fellow citizen, and the Major could not help but be proud to see such a gathering to welcome him to Lakefield after some nine years absence.

Mr. R. C. Strickland, Warden of the County, occupied the chair, having on his right the guest of the evening and on his left Mr. Isaac Garbutt, while Messrs. John Dinwoodie and George Cochrane occupied the vice chairs. The inner wants of the guests was easily satisfied with the bill of fare, and the chairman gave the toast of "The Queen," followed by that of the "Governor-General and Dominion Government," which was responded to by Messrs. Cochrane and Casement.

The "Lieut-Governor and Local Government" received justice at the hands of Drs. Caldwell and Fraser.

"Army and Navy" found a champion in Capt. Fortt.

"Canadian Volunteers" fell to the lot of Dr. Bell.

"Lakefield, our home and its Interests" was ably taken in hand by Messrs. Garbutt and W. H. Casement.

Mr. Bowman favored the company with a song.

"Agricultural interests" were upheld by Mr. Golbourne, late reeve of Burleigh, and Mr. H. J. LaFevre, of Douro.

The Warden, on rising to propose the toast of the evening, "Major Bolton, our Guest," referred to his first military experience in H.M 100th Regiment, then to the Fenian raid of 1866, followed by his trials and troubles upon his first visit to the "Prairie Province," when, as a prisoner of Riel, he was condemned to the fate of Scott; his many years as a resident and Reeve of Lakefield, and his brave conduct while in command of his scouts during the late rebellion, for all of which we honored him.

The toast was drunk with three cheers and a "tiger."

Major Bolton referred to the many acts of friendship shown to him while a resident of Lakefield, then to the kind presentation of the handsome rifle and revolvers on his return from service in connection with the halfbreeds and Indians in the Northwest, and now with the entertainment of the evening when he would almost expect to be forgotten. The Major then went on and gave a brief sketch of the past, present and future of the great Northwest, of the late campaign and some of the incidents that came under his notice, and alluded in glowing terms to the conduct of the volunteers, remarking that all were deserving of praise, where all had done the duty assigned to them without shirk or complaint. He closed an interesting speech of nearly two hours by wishing every prosperity to Lakefield and its inhabitants.

The toast of the ladies followed, which was humorously reponded to by Dr. Caldwell and Mr. W. Strickland.

Our host and hostess brought a song from Mr. Bowman, and after that good old song, "Will ye no come back again," from Mr. Robt. Graham, all joined in "God save the Queen," and with many a hearty hand shake and cheers, the major started for Peterboro' to catch the morning train, while his many friends returned home, fully satisfied. Lakefield had "welcomed the coming and speeded the parting guest."

CARNIVAL.

The first carnival of the season was held in the Lakefield skating rink on Friday evening. It was one of the most successful ever held here, both in point of numbers and excellence of costumes, while the ice was in splendid condition. The manager, Mr. B. Eden, has spared no truble to make it a success, as the handsome transparency of "Welcome," which caught the eye on entering the rink, as well as the general decorations proved. The Indian band from Mud Lake supplied appropriate music, and the prizes received an additional value by being presented by the popular wife of the manager.

Years of Waiting.

Wealthy Capitalists Endeavoring to Settle the Famous Section B Contract No Satisfactory Arrangement Arrived at With the Government.

Interest in the famous Section "B" contract, which occupied the attention of the people of the Dominion some years ago, has just been revived by the presence in this city, says the Ottawa Evening Journal, of prominent contractors, including Messrs. Alex. Manning, ex-Mayor of Toronto, Jno. Shields, P. McLaren, J. J. McDonald and J. Isbester, with Messrs. John Bain and Hector Cameron, Q.C., acting as counsel. Since their arrival they have had several interviews with the Government with a view to arranging the difficulties that have hitherto existed and prevented a settlement of the now famous contract. It will be remembered that the year following Sir John's accession to power the construction of the railway between Port Arthur and Winnipeg was vigorously pushed. At the out-set the public was treated to a little sensation on the occasion of the award of the contract to a Nova Scotian Syndicate including Messrs. Grant, Fraser and Pitblado at a figure alleged to have been $102,000 in excess of the tender of a reputable New York firm of contractors. After accomplishing a portion of the work the Nova Scotian capitalists sold out to Messrs. Manning, McLaren, J. Shields, J. J. McDonald and J. Isbester. The new syndicate boomed things from the outset, and when the new road was completed transferred it to the Canadian Pacific R'y, in order to form a link of the present trans-continental line. The day for settlement with the Government finally arrived. Unfortunately, however, although a considerable amount was paid over to the contractors, various difficulties arose, on account of the addition of extras, and other causes, bringing the contract price in the neighborhood of $1,500,000. The Government and the contractors could not agree and no agreement was arrived at. It was recently decided to effect a permanent settlement. With this object in view, the present meeting of the contractors in this city took place. It is stated that the prospects for an amicable adjustment of the affair are as far off as ever, owing to the alleged persistent efforts of one of the contractors, well known as a great Conservative wire-puller, to hold out for his original demand. The contractors leave for home this evening.

Strengthening their Political Faith.

A number of Ottawa Tories who were beginning to grumble have had their political faith renewed and strengthened by orders for carpets, hardware and job work for public buildings. The accounts for such supplies and work will probably be made up after the manner in which Mr. J. Ick Evans rendered his bill for weather-strips.

The Smallest Dog in the World

"Tiny," a black-and-tan terrier, has the honor of being the smallest full-grown dog that ever lived. He belonged to the Lieutentant-General Sir Archibald Maclaine, of England, and in honor of his extreme tininess, is now carefully preserved under a glass case. Tiny was less than four inches long, and could comfortably curl up and take a nap in a common glass tumbler. An ordinary finger-ring was large enough for his collar; and when he sat up, a baby's hand would almost have made a broad and safe resting-place for him.

Died in Agony.

A Three Year old Child Choked to Death.

Parents have often been warned of the danger of allowing young children to play with pins, or any such article which could be easily swallowed. Many deaths, as is well known, have occurred from such sources. Another sad accident of this sort occurred across the river, at the Gatineau Point, last week. A little three year old girl, a daughter of Mr. Hortabise, while playing, innocently placed a pin between her teeth. At an unguarded moment she swallowed it. The pin stuck in her throat and the screams of the poor little thing brought her parents to the spot. Dr. Demers was immediately summoned, but no human aid could avail to dislodge the cruel but simple little article. The sufferer lingered in agony till Saturday, when she died. Her father and mother are naturally prostrated with grief at the sad event.—Ottawa Evening Journal.

Big Fire at Montreal.

A big fire is raging in Montreal, and at the latest time advices were received, was still going on. The damage at the time of the close of the report had already amounted to over $200,000.

Opening of Parliament.

Speaker Peel Re-Elected Without Opposition.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The Imperial Parliament opened to-day. Large crowds had congregated in the vicinity of the of the Parliament house long before the hour for the beginning of the session, and when Bradlaugh and Gladstone arrived they were loudly cheered. The vaults of the houses of Parliament were thoroughly searched this morning, but no indications of a Guy Fawkes plot were discovered. Right Hon. Arthur Wellesley Peel was re-elected Speaker.

Mr. Chamberlain, Earl Spencer and Earl Granville conferred with Mr. Gladstone today. Most of the Radical members were entertained at dinner this evening by Mr. Chamberlain. No moderate Liberals were invited. Mr. Chamberlain is attempting to form a distinct Radical party.

Mr. Gladstone, in the House of Commons, made a speech eulogising Speaker Peel. Mr. Gladstone, whose voice was husky and feeble, had a haggard appearance and seems to be aging rapidly.

Bradlaugh will take the oath to-morrow.

RECIPROCITY.

A certain set of Canadian politicians has held that as the American Government on its part terminated the Reciprocity Treaty between that country and Canada, it would be infra dig. for the Canadian Government to take the initiative in an attempt to secure another treaty. But, now that American commercial sentiment seems to be strongly disposed in favor of the renewal of reciprocal relations with Canada, and as the proposal is before, or soon will be brought before the National Legislature, and as President Cleveland has suggested reciprocity, it remains to be seen whether the Canadian Government will take action in the premises. It cannot be denied that the tax on food products imposed by Canada and the States has resulted in a considerable loss of commercial profit, especially to the maritime provinces of the Dominion and Newfoundland and the eastern States of the Union. This is, indeed, the opinion of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the most influential and important commercial organization in the Eastern States. The New York Furniture Exchange is also heartily in favor of the establishment of reciprocal trade relations with Canada. In other quarters there is evidence of an increasing disposition in favor of such an arrangement. It will be interesting to note whether our statesmen will take cognizance of this condition of affairs, and act accordingly. In this connection it may be interesting to show that there is a feeling in favor of something far wider in its scope than a simple Reciprocity Treaty. The London Advertiser states that Hon. Wharton Baker, goes much farther on the subject in a letter addressed to Secretary Evarts. His scheme provides for the establishment of a common tariff for both countries and the distribution of receipts from customs on the basis of population or on some other basis that might be thought more equitable. By this arrangement the custom houses of both countries would be along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts alone, and each group of the Canadian Provinces would interchange its products with the adjacent group of American States as freely as though all were parts of the same country.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Sir John's attempt to prove himself a great constitutional lawyer, on the head of the License Act, will cost the country, says the Brockville Recorder, about $300,000.

Hon. G. A. Kirkpatrick, Speaker of the House of Commons, says he is not in the secrets of the Cabinet, and does not know when Parliament will meet. Unless the Government be defeated on a vote of want of confidence there will not, he thinks, be a dissolution until the present Parliament expires in 1887.

Persons interested in the iron ore business hope the time not far distant when the United States Government will either reduce the duty on shipped ore into that country or take it off. The ore is now worth about $2.50 per ton in Kingston, and $5 a ton in Cleveland. The duty is 75c. per ton.

The statement of the exports of grain from New York to Europe during the year 1885, shows the fact that not a single vessel crossed the ocean last year carrying grain either by sail or steam under the flag of the United States. Thus we see that a protective policy has developed the shipping trade of the United States to nothing.

Dr. Orton, M.P. for Centre Wellington, says that his idea is that the Government should devote increased attention to the red man. This is been already acted upon to some extent. Hasn't the Franchise Bill been passed, and doesn't that mean "increased attention" by the Government's revising officers? A journal, the Indian, has been established at Hagersville in the interests of the Indians, and under Government patronage, for among its few advertisements is one, at $4 per inch, for tenders for the deepening of the Welland Canal, which is likely to find a tenderer among the readers of the Indian, as if it were printed in Sanscrit on the inside page of a Chinese newspaper. The well-known Dr. Jones (Ka-ke-wa-quo-na-by) is editor, and no doubt Dr. Orohuyatekha is a sleeping partner in the concern. Besides on November 27th the Government hanged eight Indians in the Northwest. All this argues a great deal of "attention" to the Indians on the part of the Government, not to mention the graceful attention implied in allowing Government Indian agents to deal out rotten pork and gritty flour to the red man, and pocket the amount represented by the margin between good and bad supplies.

Under the Mackenzie government the gross expenditure of Canada increased at the rate of about $50,000 a year. Under the present government it is increasing at the rate of $1,700,000 a year,, or twenty-four times more rapidly than when the Reformers were in power.

For downright hard workers, says the New York Scotsman, the Canadians cannot be beaten. They have a stern but healthy climate, whilst heroic men and women abound. Unfortunate or misfortunate Britishers that land there, speedily find that the sentimental notions of privilege do not pay. Self-reliant endurance is the popular watchword. Laggards or loiterers find no congenial resting-place.

Wales is even more decidedly Liberal than Scotland, though the Tory representatives from north of the Tweed number less than one-seventh of the total delegation to the House of Commons—10 out of the 72. Wales, on the other hand sends 27 Liberals and 3 Tories. Another feature of the last General Election in Britain is the increase of the Roman Catholic members from 60 to 83. For the first time since the Reformation Scotland has returned a Catholic M. P., in the person of Mr. Macfarlane, the crofter representative for Argyllshire, who secured his return in spite of the earnest opposition of the Argyll family.

The despatches state that the failure to effect the settlement between the government and the Section B contractors, is due to the extravagant demands of one of the contractors, a well known Tory wire-puller. This must be Mr. Shield's, who evidently bears a grudge against the government for supplying him in the Muskoka campaign, with whiskey of so poor a quality that its froze before the zealous contractor could get it to the lips of the thirsty electors. Mr. Shields seems bound to have satisfaction, even if the amount has to be charged to capital account or Section B extras; but the government holds out against his demands, evidently being advised by Prof. Foster that watered whiskey is not so demoralizing an agent to buy an elector's vote with, as whisky that is frost-proof.

The Indictment.

The case mentioned below is set down for a preliminary hearing at the coming session of Parliament at Ottawa. Hon. Edward Blake will conduct the prosecution, and the "great constitutional lawyer," who has met with such distinguished success in the briefs held before the Imperial Privy Council, has been retained for the defence:—

The Pig Iron Bounty.

The bounty of two dollars per ton paid by the Dominion Government upon every ton of pig iron produced in the country has not led to the establishment of any new smelting furnaces, neither has it aided in the mining of iron ore, but it has enabled Mr. McLellan's Londonderry Iron Company to pay off their indebtedness to the Government. When the Londonderry Company got into difficulty two years ago they owed the Government $50,000 of arrears for freight charges upon the Intercolonial. The Government carried coal for the concern at less than cost, increased the iron and steel duties enormously, bought large quantities of railway supplies from the works, and gave a bounty of $2 per ton on all pig iron manufactured; but with all these advantages the Company were not able to keep out of the liquidator's hands. The total amount paid out last year in pig iron bounties was $41,940, and of this sum the Londonderry Company received $34,795. They also received $36,646 from the Government for Intercolonial R'y supplies.

Flax Culture.

The advantage possessed by Canada for raising flax, together with the present great depression in the flax spinning business in Great Britain, which is driving the manufacturers to America, combine at the moment to afford an opportunity for establishing that industry in the Dominion. Labor is cheaper here than in the States; and if it is not as cheap here as in the Old Country, inventive genius seems to have been opportunely at work in this field to further accelerate the movements now taking place in this important industry. A machine has just been invented, which it is claimed, will almost revolutionize the manufacture of flax, by performing the processes of scutching and hackling at one end the same time, thus greatly economising labor and expense. Although large quantities of flax of excellent quality are raised in Manitoba in the Mennonite reserves, the seed only is shipped for the manufacture of linseed oil, while the fibre is thrown away or burnt for want of machinery to work it up. This seems a pitiful waste of material. The suitability of Manitoba for this industry is shown by the fact that wild flax, which a friend who has traveled through the country informs us is of excellent quality, grows all over the province. We should be glad to have further light thrown on this subject by any of our readers who may be interested.—Canadian Journal of Fabrics.

Sitka Jack's Potlatch.

Sitka Jack's house is a large square one fronting directly on the beach, and during his absence at Pyramid Harbor the square hearthstone in the middle is kept warm by the relatives he has left behind him. When this house was built, in 1877, it was warmed by a grand potlatch or feast and gift distribution that distanced all previous efforts of any rivals. An Alaska chief is considered rich in proportion as he gives away his possession, and Sitka Jack rose an hundred-fold in Siwash esteem when he gave his grand potlatch. All his relatives assisted in building the house, and this same community idea entitles them to live in it. Over 500 blankets were given away at his grand potlatch, and the dance was followed by a great feast, in which much whisky and native hoochinoo figured. Ben Holladay, Sr., with a large yachting party, was in the harbor at the time, and lent interest to the occasion by offering prizes for canoe races and adding a water carnival to the other festivities. Sitka Jack nearly bankrupted himself by his great spread but his fame was settled on a substantial basis, and he has since had time to partly recuperate. He has aged rapidly of late years, and now he delights to crouch by his fireside in winter evenings and relate the story of his great potlatch of seven years ago.

Measuring the Human Faculties.

Holding that the capacity of man, taken in the widest sense, including character and physique, was finite, and therefore, measurable, Mr. Francis Galton has suggested that a laboratory should be opened at Cambridge, England, to investigate what he calls a new science, the "measurement of human faculty." At the Johns Hopkins University, he said, physical education and hygiene were compulsory on all students, and, although the physical measurements taken were not compulsory, yet few objected, and the result was that the most valuable statistics were collected, and, in many instances, good advice given to the students in what way to counteract the effects of any abnormal development of the structure of the muscles. He asserted that by a long series of observations it would be possible to measure the human faculty as accurately as, if not more so, than our system of examinations measures the intellectual faculty. —New York Times.

Wolfe on the Plains of Abraham.

It was towads ten o'clock, when, from a hillock on the right of the line, Wolfe saw that the crisis was near. The French on the ridge had gathered themselves into three bodies; regulars in the centre, regulars and Canadians on right and left. Two field-pieces which had been dragged up the height fired on them with grape-shot, and the troops, rising from the ground, formed to receive them. In a few moments more they were in motion. They came on rapidly, uttering loud shouts, and firing as soon as they were within range. Their ranks, ill ordered at the best, were farther confused by a number of Canadians, who had been interspersed among the regulars, and who, after hastily firing, threw themselves on the ground to reload. The British advanced a few rods; then halted and stood still. When the French were within forty paces, the word of command rang out, and a crash of musketry answered all along the line. The volley was delivered with remarkable precision. In the battalions of the centre, which had suffered least from the enemy's bullets, the simultaneous explosion was afterwards said by the French officers to have sounded like a cannon shot. Another volley followed, and then a furious clattering fire, that lasted but a minute or two. When the smoke rose, a miserable sight was revealed: the ground cumbered with dead and wounded, the advancing masses stopped short and turned into a frantic mob, shouting, cursing, gesticulating. The order was given to charge. Then over the field rose the British cheer, joined with the fierce yell of the Highland slogan. Some of the corps pushed forward with the bayonet; some advanced firing. The clansmen drew their broadswords and dashed on, keen and swift as blood-hounds. At the English right, though the attacking column was broken to pieces, a fire was still kept up; chiefly, it seems by sharpshooters from the bushes and cornfields, where they had lain for an hour or more. Here Wolfe himself led the charge, at the head of the Louisbourg grenadiers. A shot shattered his wrist. He wrapped his handkerchief about it, and kept on. Another shot struck him, and he still advanced, when a third lodged in his breast. He staggered, and sat on the ground. Lieutenant Brown, of the grenadiers, one Henderson, a volunteer in the same company, and a private soldier, aided by an officer of artillery who ran to join them, carried him in their arms to the rear. He begged them to lay him down. They did so, and asked if he would have a surgeon. "There's no need," he answered; "it's all over with me." A moment after, one of them cried out. "They run! See how they run!" "Who run?" Wolfe demanded, like a man roused from sleep. "The enemy, sir. Egad, they give way everywhere." "Go, one of you, to Colonel Burton," returned the dying man: "tell him to march Webb's regiment down to Charles River, to cut off their retreat from the bridge." Then turning on his side, he murmured, "Now, God be praised, I will die in peace;" and in a few moments his gallant soul had fled.

Montcalm, still on horseback, was borne with the tide of fugitives towards the town. As he approached the walls, a shot passed through his body. He kept his seat; two soldiers supported him, one on each side, and led his horse through the St. Louis Gate. On the open space within, among the excited crowd, were several women, drawn, no doubt, by eagerness to know the result of the fight. One of them recognized him, saw the blood, and shrieked, "Oh, mon Dieu! mon Dieu! le Marquis est tue!" "It's nothing, it's nothing," replied the dead-stricken man. "Don't be troubled for me, my good friends." ("Ce n'est rien, ce n'est rien. Ne vous affligez pas pour moi, mes bonnes amies.")—By Francis Parkman in September Atlantic.

Cremation is gaining adherents in New York City.

Base ball has reached a stage where not only the catcher wears a mask, but the umpire as well. In the course of a few more seasons we predict that the spectators will wear coats of mail.

Hard Worked Soldiers.

Our little army, the greater part of which is always "in the field" in the vast west, is called upon, besides much marching and often hard fighting, to do much hard work or manual labor, and also much menial service. These last two features destroy all soldierly feeling and esprit du corps, rendering the men sullen and discontented. Take the following as an example, habitually witnessed in the army. After a long day's march, with musket on his shoulder, forty rounds of ammunition in his cartridge box, and a day's rations of pork and hard tack in his haversack, the soldier reaches camp and longs to rest his weary limbs after putting up, with his mates, the little tents and bringing his share of wood for the camp fire. This is done cheerfully. But there is no rest for him. The sergeant calls for details of half a dozen men each to put up the tents for the officers, another detail to unload the officers' wagons and another to bring an ample supply of wood for each officer's tent fire, and also wood and water for the officers' cook. In the meantime the officer for whom the soldier performs these gratuitious services, and who bore no musket, ammunition or rations through the broiling sun, and who materially reduced the fatigues of the march by alternately riding and walking and thereby remaining comparatively fresh, sits on his stool sipping his toddy in sight of the tired soldier. To refuse to perform these "menial" duties, the soldier would incur the risk of being tied to a wagon wheel, or to be bucked and gagged or, in the mildest case, to get an extra guard and be subjected to all sorts of unpleasant treatment. Again, a soldier is called upon to do too much hard manual labor. He must be, or is made to be, also a carpenter, machinist, wagon-maker, axeman, etc. Hundreds of so called "forts," consisting of officers' and soldiers' quarters, quartermaster and commissary storehouses, stables and guardhouses, have been built by soldiers, some of whom receive a few cents "extra pay" daily, while the majority are detailed as "fatigue parties," without more than their scant soldier pay. There have been built thousands of miles oads through the wilderness, and bridges as well, by our pioneer soldiery, who are often sadly overtasked.

A Boy's Ambitions.

Nearly everybody who is now a man, says the Through Mail, was once a boy. All these grown-up boys remember how they felt the first time they saw a brass band. They felt that the president of the United States was not to be compared to the editor of the bass drum, and that the drum-major was at least six inches above George Washington in the temple of fame. Oh! how they did yearn to belong to a brass band, until a circus came along, and then they longed to be the fearless equestrian or the man in the lion's cage. Congress had no charms for most of its present members when they were boys. To be a bareback rider or drum-major was infinitely better than to be a member of congress in their youthful eyes.

Then came a time when their hearts were set on becoming a brakeman on a railway train, and when the vision of a promotion to the conductorship of a train floated across their dreamy optics they were in the fifth heaven of delight. Time wore on, only to rub the glitter of the railway service off, and supply its place with grand aspirations for the position of umpire of a base-ball game, which was rapidly succeeded by an inordinate ambition to be the victor of a prize-ring. After being knocked out in one round by nearly every boy in the community, ambition again underwent a metamorphosis, and the one thing of all things desired was to be the reigning monarch of a barber-shop, or the untrammeled commander of a volunteer fire brigade.

In due time all the tinsel of these high callings was but dross to them, and to die on the battle-field, breathing some patriotic sentiment as the sands of life ran away, was the one high aim of existence. After one encampment with the home militia, with beans and hard-tack for menu, and a finger accidentally shot off for fun, no further anxiety to spill blood by the gallon for their country was manifested, and they longed for more agreeable pursuits incident to the tranquil surroundings of peace.

At about this point their desires took a different turn. Their hearts glowed with a nobler impulse, and there was a trifle more determination to do in their composition. One determined to teach school, and did so. To be sure he was surprised that life was not one continual round of uninterrupted joy in his new calling, but he worries along and the next spring enters a law office and becomes a disciple of Blackstone. The next autumn he reverts to school-teaching, and school-teaching is sandwiched into his life in various ways and at numerous periods afterwards, until he becomes an editor, and the prize-ring experiences of his youth are repeated again. Some years later he is elected to congress, and then all the old ambitions are forgotten, and give place to designs on the senate. Only a few of them ever get there, and they at once feel the humming of the presidential bee in their bonnets, and eventually become candidates before the national conventions of the great parties, and all but two get—left; and when the election is over one of these two is also left.

Strange Similes.

What strange similes people do make use of, to be sure! They say that a thing is as black as the ace of spades, when their comparison would be much stronger did they say as black as the ten spades, which is ten times blacker than the ace. A man tells you that he has been working all day like a dog, when you know and he knows that a dog doesn't work at all. He tells you that the sky last evening was black as ink, leaving your mind in a state of uncertainty whether the sky was blue or red, either of which it might have been according to his simile. Then he tells you that Soandso is as mad as a hatter, as though hatters were more prone to anger than the average human. When he says that somebody has been acting like sixty, however, you know that he is only speaking figuratively and of course nobody can take exception to that.—Boston Transcript.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

VALEDICTORY!

Good-bye! Good-bye, old year!

Another milestone has slipped behind us.

Another leaf in the Book of Life has closed forever.

The past is able to take care of itself. The future is in our own hands and may be what we chose to make of it.

We have again reached the Merchants' reckoning season, or stock-taking time, when we purpose balancing accounts and bringing all things into line for opening a new year.

Previous to our taking stock we will Clear Out all our winter goods at Cost, and will try to carry over as little as possible into another season.

During this month we will make an extra effort to close out the small balance of Winter Goods to make room for New Spring Goods, expected in early in February.

Six Water Mains Bursted.

Yesterday evening about six o'clock water began to rush with considerable force from under the east end of the crossing on George street, at Simcoe street, in front of Ormond & Walsh's drug store, the water main at that point having bursted. It attracted considerable attention and a flood was expected. Mr. Henderson of the Waterworks Co. was informed of the accident. The water was immediately shut off, and men were set to work to excauate at the spot where the break was located. They worked all night and have based about ten feet of the water main. The pipes was found to be cracked from the joint about four feet north. The whole pipe will not be taken out, but will be cut off where solid and at the joint, and a piece of the proper length put in, the joint being covered with sleeves for th. purpose. It is thought the work of repairing will occupy all day, and probably all night.

Missionary Meeting.

The Woman's Foreign Mission Society of the Presbytery of Peterborough held its fourth annual meeting yesterday, in St. Paul's Church school room. A business meeting of the managers took place in the forenoon, at which the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—President, Mrs. McEwen, Lakefield; Vice-Presidents, Mrs. Fairbairn, Peterborough; Mrs. Henderson, Lakefield; Mrs. Galbraith, Port Hope; Mrs. McCrae, Cobourg; Secretary, Mrs. Craick, Port Hope; Treasurer, Mrs. Henderson, Cobourg. The Secretary reported 253 members on the roll, including 72 members of the general society and 3 life members. Amount of contributions for the year, $683.46. The afternoon meeting was presided over by Mrs. Ewart, of Toronto, in the absence of the Presbyterial president, and was well attended by a large representation of the ladies of St. Paul's Auxiliary, and a number of delegates from other parts of the Presbytery. After the reading of the various reports, interesting and instructive papers on mission work and its aspect in relation to women at home and in India, were read by Mrs. F. W. Haultain and Mrs. McEwen, of Lakefield. The ladies then adjourned to the parlor where tea was served by the young ladies of the mission band. In the evening a public meeting was held, the Moderator of the Presbytery presiding, at which able addresses were given by Rev. Mr. Hay, of Cambellford, and Rev. Mr. McEwen, of Lakefield.

Pontypool.

One of the smallpox victims at Pontypool, Wm. Douglas, sr., has succumbed to the disease. He died yesterday, and was buried during the afternoon in the village cemetary. There are no new cases. It is reported the school will be open before long.

Curling Shots.

The Oshawa and Lakefield curlers will contest for the Tankard and Caledonian medal at the Peterborough rinks on Friday afternoon and evening next, the 15th.

The Peterborough club expects to play a [illegible] with the Cobourg club this week. Arrangements are being made, but the date has not been decided on yet.

Police Court.

George Andrews, lately from Norwood, was brought before Magistrate Dumble charged with vagrancy. He admitted the charge. He said he could not get work. He had tried all over town. He would sooner work than go to jail. His home was in Lowell, Mass. He is a woolen finisher by trade, but had worked at farming, navvying, firing in a mill and what not. The Magistrate sentenced him to one month in jail.

Day's International Theatre Co.

"The Danites," a sensational drama, was given in the Opera House last night by Day's International Theatre Company in their usual superior manner. All the parts were well taken. There was a good house and applause was frequent, and all agreed that the company sustained its reputation of being one of the best companies that has visited the town. The principal characters were well represented by Miss Lindeman as Billie Piper, and Miss Annie Bird as the brother, Miss Marion Percy as Hulda Brown the widder, (who, by the way, might improve her, otherwise well sustained, role by not going beyond it to rather too smilingly enact the fascinating widdow.) Fred Hooker, the parson, George Woodward, the judge, Wilson Day, Alex. McGhee, Basset Willard, Limber Tim, and Miss Marie Newman as Capt. Tommy, while the support was excellent throughout. The audience was well pleased with the performance and there will no doubt be a big house to-night to witness the presentation of "The Banker's Daughter."

President vs. Vice-President.

The annual match between sides chosen by the President and Vice-President of the local Curling Club was commenced last night. Twelve rinks will enter in the contest. Six rinks played last night and six will play to-night. The Vice-President's rinks have a lead on the President's of 19 shots. The greatest excitement prevails in curling circles, and no doubt the rink will present a lively scene to-night. The rinks who contested last night and their scores are as follows:—

In the High Court of Justice.

The motion to prohibit the Police Magistrate of Peterborough from hearing information against Mr. J. M. Irwin, for obstructing navigation, was argued in the High Court of Justice, at Toronto, yesterday, before Chief Justice Cameron. Mr. W. H. L. Gordon, of Wells, Gordon & Samson, Toronto, appeared for the motion, and Mr. E. B. Edwards, of Peterborough, opposed it. The Globe contains the following notice of the case:—

RE IRWIN.—W. H. Lockhart Gordon moved absolute a rule nisi for a prohibition to the Police Magistrate of Peterborough to restrain the hearing of an information against James M. Irwin, under 36 Vic., ch. 65, for obstructing navigation of a river, upon the ground that such information cannot be prosecuted by private persons. Edwards (Peterboro'), for the private prosecutors, showed cause. Motion refused with costs.

The following notice also appears in the Toronto papers:—

REYNOLDS V. ROXBURGH.—Edminson (Peterboro') and W. Nesbitt, for the defendant, moved absolute an order nisi to set aside the plaintiff's verdict and for a new trial. D. W. Dumble (Peterboro') showed cause. Reserved.

SHERIDAN V. PIGEON.—W. Nesbitt, for the defendant, moved absolute an order nisi to set aside the plaintiff's verdict and for a new trial. Masson, Q.C., and W. Masson (Owen Sound), for the plaintiff, showed cause. Reserved.

Did Not Decide.

At the meeting of the Masonic fraternity held on Monday night, definite steps were not taken with regard to the selection of a site, and erection of a building. The matter is yet under consideration.

So did the "juniors."—The other curlers.

The score in the match now going on doesn't show a proper degree of respect for my position.—The President.

Its perfectly regular and legal. You have a chance to wipe out the disgrace to-night.—The Vice-President.

I'm the sawdust.—The Town Solicitor.

Now we'll make them "get up and sawdust."—The Association.

For the Holidays.

Call in and see the stock, it is really handsome and cannot be surpassed in town. In every department they carry full lines, but make a specialty of fine hand-sewed work for ladies and gentlemen.

Vick's Floral Guide.

Vick's Floral Guide for 1886, the pioneer and facile princeps seed annual, of the United States, received with delight. It is a real gem, both as regards typography and illustrations and contents. It is not a mere dry catalogue, but has over thirty pages of interesting reading matter, including practical articles on roses, house plants, cheap greenhouses, onion culture, manures, and hints to young gardeners. There are also about 150 pages containing beautiful descriptive catalogue prices of every extant variety of seeds, plants, bulbs, etc., etc. This little volume is a most meritorious artistic work as well as a valuable encyclopedia of practical information on the subject which it treats, and it is a mystery how the firm can afford to practically give away so valuable and costly a work. Send ten cents to James Vick, Seedsman, Rochester, for a copy and deduct this amount from the first order for seeds.

Mr. Chas. Porter, of the firm of Porter Bros., left on Tuesday morning for the west, on business in connection with the carriage top manufactured by them. The Porter Bros. are very energetic in their business and it is to be hoped they will be successful in securing western orders.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

The Fatal Coal Stove.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Jan. 13.—Two girls named Derosia and Young were smothered to death this afternoon on Perth street, by gas escaping from a stove.

Norwood.

It is our sad duty this week to chronicle the death, on the morning of Tuesday last, of an old and highly respected resident of this village in the person of Mr. D. Brennan, until a few months ago the genial proprietor of the Norwood House. His death was not unexpected, as for some years past he has been suffering severly from asthma, although the variable weather of the present season undoubtedly hastened the sad event.—Register

A Church Boiler Explodes.

Two People Killed and the Sacred Edifice Wrecked.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Jan. 13.—This afternoon the boiler in the basement of St. Mary's Catholic church exploded with a terrible crash, instantly killing the engineer and a little school girl and entirely wrecked the beautiful edifice. A few moments afterwards fire broke out in the ruins. The clergyman's residence adjoining was badly wrecked.

The Dead Restored to Life.

In yesterday's issue appeared a news item announcing the death of a child from swalling a pin. In connection therewith the following despatch came from Ottawa: A three-year-old girl named Hortuboise, of Gatineau Point, reported as having been choked to death by swallowing a pin, has miraculously come to life again. She apparently died after suffering indescribable agony for 24 hours, and the parents were frantic with grief. Preparations were made for the funeral, but after watching the body for several hours signs of animation were visible, and it was at once ascertained that she had been only in a comatose state. By careful treatment the little girl was gradually brought around, and the pin, after a series of attempt, was dislodged from the throat. She is now convalescent.

The Colonial Exhibition.

A Large and Representative Display from Canada Assured.

OTTAWA, Jan. 13.—A meeting was held in the room of the Minister of Agriculture today of agents and other gentlemen engaged in collecting exhibits for the Colonial and Indian exhibition, which opens in May next. Among the gentlemen present were Dr. Selwyn, Dr. Dawson, Messrs. S. C. Stevenson, L. G. Desjardines, A. W. Wright, R. Pringle, Alex. Leith and W. Saunders. A careful review was made of the progress so far, and it was found that all fears of not filling the very large space allotted to Canada were not only dissipated but a new question arose as how to put all the exhibits offering within the space allotted. It was discovered that the exhibits already offered are thoroughly representative of the whole Dominion.

Imperial Politics.

No Irish Legislation Probable This Session.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The Duke of Westminster, in a speech at Chester, said he deplored the fact that Parnell had deluded Ireland. The British right arm was still powerful, and England would never grant home rule to Ireland.

The Irish local government bill will be delayed until the English bill is settled. Although promised in the Queen's speech, the Irish measure may not appear during this session of parliament. The Parnellites are not eager to force the government to declare its Irish policy. Mr. Gladstone and Lord Hartington, it is said, disagree as to the home rule platform, and the Duke of Devonshire is urging Lord Hartington to an open rupture with the ex-premier.

Wm. E. Leckey, the historian, has written a letter on the Irish question, in which he declares that any English statesman who advocates handing over the property of the Government in Ireland to the Parnellites is either a traitor or a fool. To set up an Irish Parliament, he thinks, would be an act of fatuity and wickedness unparalleled in Irish history. What Ireland needs, he says, is the restoration of the liberty of the people to pursue their lawful business and fulfil their lawful contracts. Unless the law of the empire be restored in Ireland, he says, industrial ruin is inevitable and will be followed by anarchy, which can only be quelled by the sword.

A meeting of the Niagara Falls Park Commission was held yesterday.

Lindsay.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.—The notorious "Mick" Carlin, of Lindsay fame, leader of the "tar gang," on Tuesday night at that burgh tried to put an end to his miserable existence by taking "rough on rats." Medical aid was procured in time to save his life. On recovering, he complacently informed the doctor that he deserved six months in gaol for his services. He (Carlin) had actually been thinking, and came to the conclusion that he was only a curse to his fellow townsmen and relatives. He has gone unpunished for many atrocious crimes, and there is reason to suppose he will now get punished for the only meritorious act of his life.

Campbellford.

The brotherhood of the three links recently formed in Campbellford, is increasing in membership, and flourishing like a green bay tree. The lodge is now getting well established, and there certainly must be a future of growth and prosperity. It has well-founded laws and excellent principles, and as a benevolent institution it certainly ranks with the first in the world.

The Campbellford and Havelock stage which connects with trains leaving the latter place, continues tri-weekly trips, and promises to become a permanent line. Scores of travellers eastward and westward bound—for Ottawa and Toronto—have favored the stage, and the trade and passenger traffic between the two places will doubtless increase sufficiently to bring a good round income to the proprietor.—Herald.

Keene.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Our esteemed townsman, Donald Anderson, whose illness we mentioned in our last, succumbed to his disease on Friday morning last, and was buried in Keene cemetery on Monday, the Rev. Mr. Andrews conducting the services. The concourse was large, as Mr. Anderson was well known and widely respected for his many sterling qualities, being a most industrious, upright and honorable man, a loyal and trusty citizen, a devoted husband and father, and a sincere Christian. He was a faithful member of the Presbyterian church, and will be much missed in its gatherings. His last illness was borne with much fortitude—its incurable nature, being a cancerous condition of stomach and liver, caused unusual sympathy—the more so, as he labored faithfully in his usual avocations until within about 3 or 4 weeks of his death. He was 61 years of age.

Another old settler in Otonabee has gone to join the ranks of the great majority. Peter McIntyre, senior, a Scottish Perthshire farmer, died last Sunday evening, aged in the neighborhood of 75 years. The history of his illness and death is peculiar, so we may be forgiven for being more particular than usual in describing the circumstances. Over seven years ago Mr. McIntyre was hurt by a sudden and powerful blow or stroke immediately behind the left knee, from a vicious ram. The limb from that instant became paralysed, apparently from the injury to the main nerve, and from that time he required the assistance of a crutch and staff in order to get about. About a month ago he began suffering intense pain in the toes and instep of the lame foot; the pain was followed by mortification of the two largest toes, and soon the gangrene spread into the foot, and it became evident that amputation was the only chance for his life. Accordingly, Thursday last, Dr. Massie, of Keene, assisted by Drs. Kincaid, of Peterborough, and McCrea, of Keene, amputated the limb just below the knee, hoping thereby to prevent further absorption of poisonous matter from the decaying foot. Mr. McIntyre bore the operation well, and made a good recovery from the shock, had a vigorous appetite, and otherwise did remarkably well till Saturday forenoon, when he took a severe chill, which was followed by loss of appetite and other unfavorable symptoms, and he gradually sank, and died on Sunday evening, no doubt from previous, though imperceptible, poisoning of the whole system from the decayed foot.

Mr. McIntyre was thoroughly respected by all who knew him and was a fair specimen of the honest, kindly successful Scottish yeoman. He was exceedingly pleasant in manner, with a rare fund of quiet humor, and yet a consistent Christian citizen, a most affectionate husband and father, and a generous and obliging neighbor—upright in all his dealings—refined in his tastes, being more than usually gifted in the memory of Scottish music and song, and he was a close and careful student of the Scriptures. He leaves behind him a name that long will remain green in the hearts of many.

The Canada Methodist Missionary meeting was held Tuesday evening in the church here. Rev. Messrs. Thomas, Wallace and Johnson spoke on the subject of missions to a fair audience, Dr. Harrison in the chair.

The social at Dr. Harrison's was largely attended and a financial success.

Mr. W. G. Campbell, teacher at Mather's Corners, formerly teacher at Keene, leaves on Thursday for the Ottawa Normal School.

With regard to the "open Temple," to be held at Allandale hall next Friday evening. We correct our last week's item by informing intending visitors, that an admission fee of fifteen cents for adults, and ten cents for children will be collected at the door.

An error in last week's jottings was in the name of the contractor for repairs on the Presbyterian church—for "Muir," read Mein.

The first carnival of the season here will be held at the curling and skating rink, on the evening of Wednesday, the 20th inst. A grand time is expected. Admission fee as usual.

An Obstacle to Unity.

The Rev. Dr. Roy, of Cobourg, has addressed the students of Victoria College on the influence of language on the character of peoples. Language might be supposed to be rather the expression of the character of people than the maker of it, but in the building up of new nations, what language they speak and what literature they read matters very much. The language which has crystallized the thinking of the people accustomed to absolutism in Church and State, offers no ready instrument and no life-giving suggestions to independent thought and action. The lispings of freedom are inarticulate to those confined by it. Dr. Roy compares the genius and literature of the two languages which seem destined to continue to be as they have been leading factors in forming the Canadian people and to remain an almost insuperable obstacle to its unity.

The Montreal Fire.

Property Worth Half a Million Destroyed.

MONTREAL, Jan. 13.—The fire which started in B. & S. H. Thomson's hardware establishment last night destroyed half a dozen buildings, all of which were owned by the Hotel Dieu nuns, whose loss is estimated at $300,000, covered by insurance. The losses of the occupants were given as follows:

Thompson & Co., $60,000 to $80,000 partly insured; Smith, Fischel & Co., $8,000, fully insured; Bourret Turcotte & Co., $5,000, reported fully covered by insurance; C. Morris & Co., loss unknown. Owing to the lateness of the hour it was impossible to obtain anything like an accurate idea of what the insurance is. English companies will lose heavily, with one or two United States companies. The total loss is put down at $500,000.

So far as rumored at this moment there is $154,450 of insurance.

DIRECTLY TO BLAME.

Much has been said and written of Sir John Macdonald's high-handed interference with Provincial matters and rights. The appropriation of the control of Provincial railways was an outrage, conspicuously in a financial sense; but a case has arisen which shows that the unwarrantable proceeding has been attended with other lamentable results—deprivation of the widow of her support and the removal of protection to life and limb of railway employes. Our readers will recollect the case of the brakeman Clegg, who was killed by being caught in an unprotected "frog," at the Charlotte Street railway crossing in this town; that his widowed mother, whose support he was, brought suit and was awarded damages at the Peterboro' Assizes; that the verdict was appealed against and that, as recorded in our news columns a day or two since, the appeal was sustained, and that, therefore, the widow, who was deprived of her support, not only lost the amount of damages awarded her by the Assize Court jury, but was, in addition, burdened with a huge bill of costs. For this Sir John A. Macdonald is directly responsible. There is an Ontario statute, requiring railway "frogs" to be packed to make them safe. When Sir John usurped the control of Ontario railways this statute, so the court held, was made of none effect. The judgment of the court in effect was, that the Midland railway being a part of the Grand Trunk, and having been declared a Dominion road, the Ontario law which required the railway to pack its frogs was no longer in force, as regarded that road, and that therefore the plaintiff must be non-suited. Here we have the direct results of Sir John's impudent interference. A poor widow is deprived of her support, and is not only shut out from compensation, but in the prosecution of her rights, she is put in for a large amount of costs, while if Sir John had not gratuitously and perniciously intermeddled with the Ontario railway system, the Ontario statute would have remained in force and Mrs. Clegg would have recovered substantial damages for the loss sustained in the death of the support of her old age. And the evil remains: the statute referred to, being through Sir John's interference, null and void, there is no protection for the employes of any railway, so far as the fatal "frog," the cause of so many violent deaths, is concerned. The evil that Sir John has done is not only present with us, but it will live after him. It is high time that his power for evil were taken from him.

"Without Political Influence."

(Toronto Mail, July 8, 1885.)

"It has never been denied by the Mail that the Metis had good ground for grievances.

"By the passage of the Manitoba Act of 1870 old Canada had formally and frankly recognized the rights of the Halfbreeds of that Province to share in the Indian title, and it follows as a matter of course that if they had rights in the soil of Manitoba, those of them dwelling in the regions beyond had rights in the soil there.

"This admitted of no dispute.

"It must have been quite well understood by Parliament in 1870; at all events the records show that the Government of the day recognized the point, though a settlement was not then asked for.

"In spite of this recognition, however, and of the manifest and unanswerable logic of the Halfbreed case, the Department for years and years steadily refused to move in the matter.

"It was a tangled question; it would involve the appointment of a commission and no end of trouble; St. Albert and St. Laurent were far distant dependencies without political influence; it was a claim that would be none the worse for blue-moulding in the pigeon-holes.

"This was the way in which the officials treated the just demand of the Metis, and we agree with Mr. Blake, that their negligence was gross and inexcusable, and contributed to bring about the insurrection.

"Had they had votes, like white men, or if, like the Indians, they had been numerous enough to command respect and over-awe red tape, without doubt the wheels of the office would have revolved for them; but being only half-breeds, they were put off with an eternal promise, until patience ceased to be a virtue.

"We repeat again that the departmental system under which such callous and cruel neglect of the rights of a portion of the community was possible, was wrong, and should be censured."

A baggage car of the Vermont Central express from the east took fire between St. John's and St. Lambert, Que. The only thing saved was a piece of a half-burned trunk. One lady lost apparel valued at $150.

The water in the river at Belleville, rose two feet Monday night, largely increasing the area of the flooded district. Some loss has been suffered by the flooding of storehouses; men are at work trying to cut a channel into the bay. Thes toring of grain in the elevators has had to be abandoned.

M. C. Cameron's Masterly Address—Timber Limits Parcelled Out to Dominion Government Supporters—How the People's Money is Wasted—How the Debt is Piled Up—A Scathing Exposure of Tory Government Methods.

At the close of the year, Mr. M. C. Cameron delivered an address at Brucefield, South Huron, and it covers the political situation with which it deals so completely, and is such a withering expose of the extravagance of the present Dominion Government, that it will be re-published in these columns. As large an instalment as our space will admit of will be presented from day to day. It is well worth the careful study of every elector.

MR. M. C. CAMERON'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Cameron, after some preliminary remarks, said:—I desire, here and now, and in the face of the people of this country, to charge the present Administration with extravagance in the management of public affairs—extravagance such as no country, and especially a country situated as Canada is, [illegible] so open and so plain, that one is astounded at the bare contemplation of it. I desire to charge and I do here charge them with having prostituted the high trust reposed in them by the people of this country to the lowest and basest purposes; with having so corrupted the Tory press by direct money bribes that no utterance of the Tory press can receive at the hands of thinking men the slightest consideration; with having so debased, degraded, and corrupted the whole public service of this country that fraud and misconduct, peculation and thieving ride rampant in every department of the public service. (Cheers.) I charge them with having attempted to bribe all the constituencies of Eastern Canada by direct money bribes, in the shape of bonuses to their local railways—with having degraded the high position of a representative of a free people by direct money and other bribes. I charge them with having recklessly and wickedly squandered the resources of Canada, and with having parcelled out a large portion of the domain of Ontario among their camp-followers and political hangers-on. (Cheers.)

This indictment is a grave and serious one, and no public man should, either in his place in Parliament or on the public platform, make allegations of this kind unless he is in a position

TO PROVE THEM.

With the utmost confidence in the truth of the charges I have made, I shall now proceed to discuss them. In 1878 the people of this country—unfortunately for the best interests of Canada—defeated the Government of the Hon. Alex. Mackenzie, and permit me here to say that if an honest statesman ever swayed the destinies of this country that man was the Hon. Alex. Mackenzie. (Cheers.) When I heard of his defeat I almost felt that honest Government was an impossibility in this country.

When Sir John returned to power in 1878 the public debt of this country was 174 million dollars.

To-day, after a little over six years of Tory rule, the national debt is 295 millions.

Or an increase of 26 millions a year. That is the Tory showing for a little over six years—and that is not all. I appeal to you as intelligent taxpayers if there is not throughout the length and breadth of this country, general depression, general uneasiness in commercial circles, business men instead of unfurling, drawing in their sails, low prices for the produce of the farm, increasing expenditure, a decreasing revenue, and to cap the climax a large deficit—a deficit in last year of $2,357,470, according to the Mail's showing, but a deficit which I say amounts to double that sum; and I will prove this statement out of the public records of Parliament.

THE REAL DEFICIT.

The financial year ends on the 30th June. In June last, when we were discussing other grave questions in Parliament, the Government let it be known that they proposed increasing the excise duties upon whiskey and beer. This so terrified the manufacturers that they withdrew the liquor in bond, and paid to the Government in the month of June last, exactly a million of dollars more than they would have paid but for this threat, and exactly a million more than was paid in the corresponding month of the preceding year. Thus a million dollars was received by the Government in the financial year 1885 that ought not to have been received until 1886, and by this dishonest manœuvre the Government's deficit for 1885 was lessened by a million dollars. Again, the proceeds of the sales of Dominion lands have been credited by this Government to annual revenue. On the same principle precisely, as if one of you farmers sold your farm for $5,000 and treated the the proceeds as part of your annual income. In other words, you dispose of your capital and treated the proceeds as part of your income for the year. The receipts for Dominion lands for last year amounted to $951,636, and every dollar of it was credited to annual revenue. Now, it would not have been so bad had the Government charged to annual expenditure the expense of surveys and managing the Dominion lands; yet all the expenses of surveys, etc., amounting last year to $728,441, were charged to capital account, and by that fraudulent system of book-keeping they have lessened the deficit by $728,441. That is not all. The Intercolonial railway is owned by the Dominion of Canada. The disbursements in connection with that railway last year amounted to $3,859,558; the receipts amounted to $2,353,646, leaving a deficit of $1,505,910. What disposal did they make of that deficit? Every dollar is charged to capital account. Let me tell you that $615,330 is made up of expenses for repairs, rolling stock, local expenses and paying damages obtained by parties against the railway. All these items are just as much annual expenditure as any item can possibly be. And yet every dollar of that $615,330 is charged to capital account, and thus again, by this fraudulent system of book-keeping, the deficit has been lessened by that additional sum of $615,330. Now, if you add those three items to the deficit admitted by the Mail newspaper you will find an actual deficit of $4,701,241. I make this charge openly, and I defy the whole Tory press, from Halifax to the Pacific coast, successfully to contradict it. (Cheers,) I know that figures are not very interesting matter to deal with, but it is important that the tax-payers of this country should know how their money is spent, and therefore I propose trespassing somewhat on your patience. In 1878, under the head of ordinary expenditure, which includes the interest on and management of the debt, we spent $11,553,523. Last year under the same head we spent $14,640,237, or an increase in a little over six years of $2,980,716.

CONTROLLABLE EXPENDITURE DOUBLED.

The item of controllable expenditure is one which is peculiarly under the control of the Government for the time being; they can reduce it or swell it to gigantic proportions as they see fit. It includes the charges for legislation, salaries, and public works. In 1878 we spent under this head $6,542,510. Last year that item had risen to the enormous figure of $13,050,872. Or an increase on this item alone in a little over six years of $6,508,362. I ask the taxpayers of Canada if there was anything in the circumstances of this country which justified the Government in increasing the controllable expenditure to that enormous extent. The item of departmental contingencies in 1878 amounted to $158,174, last year it was $202,108, an increase of $44,934. In 1878 the item of travelling expenses and cab hire amounted to $13,234. Last year it was $29,940, an increase of $16,670. I have no doubt in the world that Sir John's sudden trip across the ocean to escape the vengeance of his Bleu friends, will be charged to the taxpayers of Canada.

In 1878 the number of employes in the public departments was 493. Last year there were 812 in Ottawa alone. Why you can't enter a door of the Parliament Buildings without meeting three or four fellows ready to show you in, and when you do get in there are three or four more to direct you to the Minister whom you wish to interview.

EXTRA CLERKS.

There is another system resorted to by the Government to reward their political favorites and waste the people's money—that is the employment of extra clerks at large salaries. Although the public departments at Ottawa are literally crammed with permanent clerks, last year we spent no less than $191,064 to pay a lot of broken down political hacks—Canadian and English dudes—[illegible] earned an honest dollar, to discharge duties the permanent staff was paid to perform. In addition to this we paid the permanent staff no less than $275,000 as extra allowances in the performance of duties which by law they were paid to perform and bound to discharge and thus your money is recklessly spent. (Cheers.)

The Grain Glut.

We have seen it stated that certain Ontario farmers are holding their wheat for a rise. They will probably get tired before they realize their expectations and lay it down for anything that it will bring. There is little present prospect of a great European war, and even if there were that would be no reason for Canadians to hold over their wheat. Conditions—including the character of the grain growing area—have so changed since Crimean days that such a war could not give prices more than a temporary and fictitious boom.

It may prove profitable for holders of Canadian wheat to bear in mind a few facts about the condition of the Chicago market. There are estimated to be 14,000,000, of bushels of wheat in the Chicago elevators, much of which has been there for two years, because the owners of it have been holding for better prices. Two years' elevator dues lie against this wheat, and the chances are that it will never be redeemed. The News thinks that next season it will fall forfeit to the elevators, and will be then thrown upon the market for what it will fetch. The consequences are obvious. The winter wheat crop of the west promises well, too. The European markets are glutted. The Australian harvest is ready for market, and the yield is reported as very large. India will be in the field in a few days with her enormous contribution. Look which way we will, we see no reason to expect anything approaching a scarcity of wheat between now and next harvest. Canadians who have been holding on to their grain cannot let it go a day too soon.—Toronto World.

Affection's Endurance.

A writer in a New York paper recently had a talk with an old grave-digger, and drew from him some interesting observations upon the question as to who manifest the most grief when death enters the domestic circle and carries off the loved ones of the household. He remarked: "A mother who loses her first child is about as sad a sight as you would care to see at the grave, and I am positive there is no grief to equal hers; next the daughter over the loss of either of her parents, or the parents over the loss of their daughter; then the husband over the death of his wife, and lastly the wife over the death of her husband. As for relatives any more distant than these, the grief is of short duration. Of course, there is exception to this rule, but I am speaking generally. I have seen lovers stand by the graves of their betrothed and weep more demonstrably and show the grief that filled their hearts to much greater extent than did any parent. A young lady pledged in marriage to a gentleman will show the most uncontrollable sorrow, and will often swoon at the grave, but after marriage she is the first to get over it. I think a man's grief is more lasting. Let me show you. Here is a little three-year-old child's grave; see how neat it looks and how fresh the flowers are. They were placed there by a poor mother; now on this side is a husband's grave. On the slab it says he was but 36 years old. I dug that grave, and that cross of flowers was placed there on the day of the funeral, and the wife has not been here since. Now walk up this path a little way and I'll show you a wife's grave. But wait, see that girl over near the big walk cleaning twigs off that grave with the wooden rake? Her mother is buried there and has been for five years, but every week, when the weather permits, she comes here to attend to it. Now, here's the wife's grave, and that neat little headstone and flowers were placed there by her husband. He's a poor brakeman on the railroad, and she has been dead for three years, but you drop in here any Sunday when he's off and you'll find him here, cutting the grass around it or doing something toward making it look neat, and paying what little tribute he can to her who must have been so dear to him."

Cassius Clay's Circus.

Cassius M. Clay's home is near Foxtown, twenty miles east of Lexington. To a visitor, the other evening, Mr. Clay said: "Tell me what's going on, for I'm out of politics now. I'm here almost alone—no, I'm not alone for I have my sheep, cattle, dogs, birds, flowers and books. And, by the way, I'm writing a book—my memoirs." It was a beautiful evening and the scene was one of peace. Forest and orchard trees and shrubs surrounded the house, or mansion, for such it really is. To the west is a sweep of "blue grass." At the east side are low lands, from which comes the tinkling of sheep bells. "I have four hundred Southdowns," said Farmer Clay; "my father used to be a great merino sheep raiser, but I prefer southdowns. You city people might think it curious when I say that my sheep give me a good deal of comfort. To my mind no landscape is complete without some southdowns distributed about. In England, and in the east here, they are placed in public parks as ornaments The southdowns are to sheep what the shorthorns are to cattle. I have great fun watching the lambs. Upon my word, I think the little rascals know that I enjoy their gambols. Over yonder is a circular depression in the pasture, out of which was taken before I was born the clay for the bricks in this house here. Well, I go there every day to see the lambs run races. It's a perfect circus. Sometimes I have to hold my sides laughing to see them panting and catching their 'second wind,' and then go tearing around the ring again."

We sat before an old fashioned wood fire. The logs crackled and blazed on a capacious hearth, which was guarded on either side by a huge brass "dog." Lying on the table was a thick bundle of manuscript. "I have finished writing," Mr. Clay said, catching a look of inquiry on my face, "and am now negotiating with the Harpers for the publication of my memoirs. They published my other book, edited by Horace Greeley. The events there treated were only up to 1848. The present memoirs will be in two volumes; they will include the gist of the matter prepared by Mr. Greeley, and will come down to the time when I retired from the active discussion of politics." Pointing to a box full of letters, he said he was going to try to have them all published; he had "boiled them down" as much as possible, but was even now afraid he had too many. "There are letters in that box," Mr. Clay went on to say, "from nearly every prominent man in the United States." Then Mr. Clay talked for more than an hour of what they contained and what he was going to write.—Cor. Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

"Was not Mr. George Washington Johnson afraid to die?" asked a gentleman of one of the friends of a departed colored man. "Oh, no!" was the reply, "he took more'n $10 worth of patent medsons durin' his las' sickness."

Where We Get the "Cue."

The game of billiards was invented about the middle of the sixteenth century by a London pawnbroker named William Kew. In wet weather this pawn broker was in the habit of taking down the three balls, and with the yard measure pushing them, billiard fashion, from the counter into the stalls. In time the idea of a board with side pockets suggested itself. A black-letter manuscript says: "Master William Kew did make one board whereby a game is played with three balls; and all the young men are greatly recreated thereat, chiefly the young clergymen from St. Pawles; hence one of ye strokes was named a 'cannon,' having been by one of ye said clergymen invented. The game is now known by the name of "bill-yard," because William, or Bill, Kew did first play it with a yard-measure. The stick is now called a 'kew,' or 'kue.'" It is easy to understand how "bill-yard" has been modernized into "billiard," and the transformation of "kew," or "kue" into "cue," is equally apparent.

The Knife-Grinder and His Work.

The knife-grinder has, after all, a story to tell, and a very dismal one it is. He is environed by dangers, as completely as he is saturated with the wet "swarff" (powdered stone) which dyes him a deep saffron color from head to toe. He sits over a tool which may at any moment send him through the roof with all the suddenness and velocity of dynamite, and he works in an attitude and (especially if he be a "dry" grinder) inhales a dust which he knows will shorten his life by ten, twenty, or even thirty years, as constitution and fortune may serve him. The sharp crack of a breaking stone is an appalling sound to the occupants of a grinding-hull. A bang in the trough, a crash in the roof, and a piteous moan, and all is over. If the victim be alive, he is hurried to the hospital; if dead, his crushed body is reverently carried away. No vigilance in the master, no care in the workman, seems able to avert these periodical catastrophes. The insidious water rot, the hidden flaw, and the unequal grain do their fatal work in spite of all precautions.—English Illustrated Magazine.

Japanese Executions.

"Speaking about executions," said a stranger at the court house yesterday, "as far as I can see, the mere fact of hanging, the way it is done here, does not require a great amount of courage. Indeed, I think a man has very little courage who could not go through with the short ceremony necessary. After the trap falls the victim, as we have every reason to believe, becomes unconscious immediately, and does not suffer even as much as the strain upon the systems of the persons looking on. The only agony is that borne in getting ready, and ceases when the real work commences. When it was the custom to fix the rope in such a manner that the neck of the criminal was broken, there was more of a contortion of the muscles of the body, but the present system even lessens that.

I happened to get admitted to the recent execution of George Jones, and I must say I was impressed with the extreme slickness of the work. Everything was done that could lessen the suffering, and the contortions were slight at first and only lasted a short time. I can't help but contrasting the system here and the one in Japan, where I visited some time ago. If the people who are opposed to capital punishment on account of cruelty and suffering would visit an execution there and compare the two they would get an idea what a "barbarous" execution is. While I was at Yokohama I witnessed the public execution of a criminal. He was a fine-looking Japanese, in the prime of youth and strength, and was standing under a huge post, in the middle of a posse of guards. The post had a cross-piece. Nearly nude he was standing erect, but as motionless as a statue, and gazed straight before him.

Presently his jailer moved aside, and a gaunt, repulsive-looking native, the executioner, made his appearance, clad from head to foot in a dress of dingy yellow. Two assistants accompanied him, carrying half a dozen round bamboo rods. The assistants dropped the rods and stretched the criminal's hands over the crosspiece of the post. The executioner now dallied with the bamboos, and the poor creature still looked into the shadowy distance as though he was dumb. I watched him closely and thought I detected a pallor spread over his countenance. The executioner now spat on the pointed end of one of the pointed bamboos, and with a twisting, pushing motion thrust it easily into the flesh about half-way between the hip and the arm-pit. The poor wretch turned and looked at his tormentor, and his lips slightly opened, but he did not struggle. In a couple of minutes, though it seemed longer, the bloody point of the instrument emerged from the sufferers' shoulders, and a slight exclamation of satisfaction escaped the crowd. Then the executioner went to the other side with another bamboo and did the same thing.

During all this there was not a single groan or cry for mercy from the man. At this juncture, to my surprise, the executioner and his assistants picked up the remaining bamboos and walked away. I inquired what this meant and was told the execution was over. It was customary to leave the man that way, and he would die in a couple of hours or so. The bamboo would remain in him until he had expired. A Japanese executioner is taught to avoid the vital organs so as not to bring death too quickly, and the executioner's reputation is gauged by the length of time his victim lives. I tell you that is the kind of an execution that takes nerve, both on the part of the victim and the crowd, and the ones like the last, and also that of Tuesday next, are tame affairs to that compared with my Japanese experience."—Pittsburg Leader.

On the assumption that the head lives for a short space after its separation from the body, M. Charin has introduced into the French Senate a bill substituting prussic acid for the guillotine.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

VALEDICTORY!

Good-bye! Good-bye, old year!

Another milestone has slipped behind us.

Another leaf in the Book of Life has closed forever.

The past is able to take care of itself. The future is in our own hands and may be what we chose to make of it.

We have again reached the Merchants' reckoning season, or stock-taking time, when we purpose balancing accounts and bringing all things into line for opening a new year.

Previous to our taking stock we will Clear Out all our winter goods at Cost, and will try to carry over as little as possible into another season.

During this month we will make an extra effort to close out the small balance of Winter Goods to make room for New Spring Goods, expected in early in February.

Your Influence Solicited.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Another Organ Recital.

Prof. Parker announces that he will give an Organ Recital in St. Paul's church, on Febuary 2nd, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of St. Paul's church. This announcement will no doubt be hailed with delight by lovers of music.

Prof. Dorenwend at Phelan's hotel, on Monday and Tuesday, January 18th and 19th.

Hogs by the Hundred.

Nine car loads of hogs have been shipped to Peterborough from western markets during the past week for the packing house of Mr. Geo. Matthews. Mr. W. Matthews is now buying in the neighborhood of Chatham and London and expects to ship for Peterborough next week as many more car loads.

A Neighborly Suggestion.

The Port Hope Times suggests that Peterborough follow Port Hope's example and distribute the charitable funds through the benevolent societies, instead of through a committee of the Council. The suggestion is perhaps given on the strength of the principle that misery loves company. Port Hope would doubtless like to see this town paying taxes to the tune of two cents on the dollar, which it would soon be doing if it followed that town's style of managing financial matters.

Call and see the immense stock of new and fashionable Bangs, Waves, Wigs, etc., of Prof. Dorenwend's, at Phelan's hotel, on January 18th and 19th.

For the Holidays.

Messrs. Foot & McWhinnie have in stock for the Xmas trade, a very fine line of slippers of all kinds, specially suited for presents, and at prices much below the ordinary. Call in and see the stock, it is really handsome and cannot be surpassed in town. In every department they carry full lines, but make a specialty of fine hand-sewed work for ladies and gentlemen.

She Went Home Reconciled.

This afternoon a middle-aged respectable looking woman was seen coming down George street wringing her hands and at times taking the hair from her head, crying like a child. People who heard her remarked that she must be mad. An old gentleman, with more courage than men usually have, inquired the cause of her grief. "Oh, my boy, my boy!" was the only reply she tendered. Just then a bright little fellow of about 12 years of age piped in "Mamma! I know where Feddy is; he is down at the rink skating. He says he is bound to win the skates at the Band Carnival, but I'll try and stop him, you bet!" The lady returned home quite reconciled.

Prof. Dorenwend with hair goods of every description, at Phelan's hotel for two days only, Monday and Tuesday, January 18th and 19th.

Riverside Tobbogan Slide.

Yesterday afternoon, especially after four o'clock, was a season of high carnival at the Riverside Park, and was the scene of considerable excitement and amusement, it being a free day on the slide. Hundreds availed themselves of the opportunity and freely patronized the tobbogans, the whirr of which as they sped over the ice was incessant. About fifteen toboggans were kept in perpetual motion, carrying three to seven passengers at a trip. The slide was in good trim, being ice from top to bottom. It is divided in two sections by a board partition, so as to allow two toboggans to go down together without interfering one with the other. The run below the slide was also all ice, the whole park being a gigantic rink. The park was also liberably patronized as a skaking rink. The slide was the scene of many amusing incidents during the day. Occasionally a careless steersmen was dropped off the toboggan before it left the slide, and used his trowsers as a toboggan, for the rest of the route. One young man almost went from top to bottom of the slide in this way, with great speed, going far out into the ice before he stopped. Applause was loud and long. In the evening the park was well patronized, the slide receiving greater attention than the rink. Mr. Calcutt has evidently whetted the appetities of the young people of the community for tobogganing, and no doubt the riverside slide will be a favorite resort during the remainder of the season.

Tea Social in the George Street Church.

This evening, the ladies in the George Street Methodist Church, entertain the congregation at a free tea or social in the basement of the church.

Prof. Dorenwends' new styles of Bangs, Waves, Wigs, etc., at Phelan's hotel, on January 18th and 19th.

Agency for Organs.

Mr. W. J. Green has been appointed agent for the superior instruments made by the Dominion organ and piano company, of Bowmanville. His place of business will be his clothing and gents' furnishing store, George street, opposite the Opera House.

Gentlemen who are bald should call at Phelan's hotel on January 18th or 19th, and see Prof. Dorenwend's fine styles of wigs and toupees.

Horticultural Society.

The attention of both the members and directors of the Peterborough Horticultural Society is called to the advertisement of the annual meeting to be found in our first page advertising columns. Every member is requested to be present at the offices of the Bank of Toronto to-night at 8 o'clock.

The Postoffice Extravaganza.

The Peterborough postoffice question takes on as many changes as the chameleon. A few weeks ago money was freely wagered that the site was settled on one of two places—each of which had pretty even calls in betting circles. Subsequently the plans arrived fixing the proposed building on the Hunter street site. Next Mr. H. H. Smith came and acted the peace-maker between the contending Tory factions and at last all was again reported settled and serene. But Hon. T. White, Minister of the Interior, arrived in town to give another twist to this already torturous question. Yesterday Hon. Mr. White with the Mayor de facto as well as Mayor de jure, drove about the town to spy out a new site for the postoffice. As a result of the tour of inspection, the knowing ones assert that to restore the peace so urgently needed in the local Conservative household, a site further north than either of the former sites has been selected by Mr. White. Mr. White has long been considered a Solon, but few thought he would turn out a Solomon, to bring about the solution of a vexed question by introducing a dark horse that will shut out the favorites in the postoffice race.

Victory for the Vice-President.

The match between the rinks of the President and Vice-President of the Peterborough curling club was finished last night, the Vice-President's side winning by sixteen shots. The President's rinks which played last night reduced the Vice-President's lead of the previous night by three shots. The following are the rinks of each side and the scores made:

It was a glorious victory for the Vice-President and his chosen men. Would it not be the proper thing to provide each man of the winning side with a distinguisher. A badge would be appropriate. No leather medals.

Dramatic.

A good house last night listened with great pleasure to an excellent presentation of the "Banker's Daughter" by Day's International Theatre Company. The interpretation of the play by the different members of the company, in which everyone did well, some exceptionally so, was very praiseworthy. Miss Lindeman, as Lilian Westbrook, squitted herself very creditably, especially in the parting scene in the fourth act, where she contributed a splendid piece of emotional acting. Mr. Wilson Day sustained the character of "John Strebelow" with great good judgment, quietly, effectively and true to life. Miss Newman, as "Florence Brown," distinguished herself, admirably sustaining the character of the "old man's darling" and the disconsolate widow. Her spirited impersonation thoroughly delighted the audience. Miss Annie Bird is a wonderful little creature; she sings and acts like a diva of ten seasons, and a continent might be searched without finding another child capable of filling the roles she performs to perfection. Without further particularising, it is enough to say that the "Banker's Daughter," was presented last night in a first rate manner. The efforts made by the management to present clean plays, and to preserve order will receive the approval of the public. Last night in announcing the plays for the week, Mr. Manager Day very properly referred to the noise made by the parties in the rear of the auditorum, and plainly said that though he liked to see them enjoy themselves, the enjoyment of the orderly portion of the audience must be secured, and that the amount they paid for admission was of no moment unless they could behave themselves quietly. To-night Dion Boucicault's charming play, "The Octoroon" will be presented. Prices 10 and 25 cents. Reserved seats at Mansie's Bookstore.

Goes to Lindsay.

Two rinks of the local curling club left town this morning for Lindsay, where they will play a match with the curlers of that town. The following compose the rinks:—A. Stevenson, W. VanEvery, A. McNeil, and Dr. Boucher, skip; H. B. Merrick, Geo. Walker, R. S. Davidson, and W. G. Ferguson, skip. A lively game may be expected.

Messrs. Salisbury and Bro. have received a lot of the finest Mucilage in the world. Try it.

What We May Expect.

The Octoroon at the Opera House this evening.

And the back seats to be on their good behavior.

A little boom in betting on the new post-office site.

Fresh winds, mostly southerly, generally fair weather; rising temperature.

Presbytery of Peterborough.

Report of Proceedings.

The Presbytery of Peterborough was in session in St. Andrew's school room, on Tuesday from 10.30 to 6.30 with a short interval for dinner. There was a good representation of ministers and elders, as mentioned in our report. Mr. Mitchell of Port Hope is moderator.

Next meeting was appointed to be held in St. Paul's school room, on the 9th of March, at 10.30 o'clock p.m. Session records from Percy, Bobcaygeon and Campbellford were ordered to be confirmed upon the recommendation of the committees appointed to examine them.

The new church at Havelock was reported ed to be in a good situation in view of those who are likely to worship in it.

Students laboring within the bounds will be expected to appear before the Presbytery at one or other of its meetings during the summer months.

The Presbytery recommended the Sabbath Schools to make use of the books prepared by the assembly's committee for recording and reporting Sabbath School work and attendance.

The claims of the aged and infirm ministers' fund were considered and steps taken for the promotion of its interests.

The congregation of Brighton was separated from Colborne and Lakeport and erected into a self-sustaining charge. Mr. Duncan remains the pastor of Colborne and Lakeport at the same stipend as before, $800 and manse. Brighton promises a stipend of $800 to a pastor when a settlement takes place.

Mr. McCrae, of Cobourg, is moderator of session during the vacancy.

Mr. Sutherland was appointed to preach in the united charge at an early date, and to read the resolution of Presbytery making the changes above indicated.

The remit in printing was considered and alterations made.

The state of the Presbytery fund was considered and auditors of the Treasurer's book appointed.

The Presbytery declined to make any nomination for the new chair in Knox College.

Steps were taken to further the interests of the augmentation scheme. Messrs. McCrae, Mitchell, Cleland, ministers, and Messrs. Clark, of Port Hope, and Henderson, of Cobourg, elders, were appointed a committee to arrange for a visitation of all the congregations on behalf of the scheme.

Messrs. Carmichael, Torrance and Bennett, ministers, and Messrs. Tully and Roxburgh, elders, were appointed a committee to seek a more equitable basis for all presbytery assessments.

The claims of Manitoba college were presented by Mr. Torrance.

Arrangements were made for holding a conference on the state of religion at next meeting.

Electric Light Poles.

Men are at work to-day erecting poles for the additional electric lights for Hunter Street. The poles are about fifteen feet higher than the ones on George street, being over 50 feet high. One is placed about 30 feet from George street, oppose the rear of McClelland's store, and the other is about the same distance from Water street, in front of Cavanagh's hotel on Hunter street. The last mentioned pole will hold the light for Water street as well, having a swinging arm of a length capable of holding the light well over Water street.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

THE BLAKE BANQUET.

A Rousing Liberal Rally at London.

Warm Western Welcome.

Magnificent Reception of the Liberal Leader.

A Splendid Speech.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The banquet tendered to the Hon. Edward Blake to-night by the London Reform Association was in every respect one of the most magnificant political demonstrations that ever greeted a political leader in Canada, and it will long live as a memorable occasion in the annals of Canadian Liberalism. Though preparations were made for a very large attendance, the number present far exceeded all expectations, and notwithstanding that the Princess Roller Rink, in which the banquet was held, is capable of seating between 800 and 1,000 people at the tables, the problem of how to accomodate the immense crowds who kept pouring in long after the building appeared to be filled, was one which strained to the utmost the excellent arrangements which were made by the committe who were in charge of the demonstration. The building was literally packed from end to end and for want of room. The attendance during the evening must have been fully 4,000, and it included a large number of ladies. The chair was occupied by Mr. Geo. C. Gibbons, President of the London Reform Association, and to him is due more than the usual stereotyped acknowledgement for the ability and tact with which he discharged his duties. To the right of the chairman were Hon. Edward Blake, the guest of the evening, Hon. Mr. Mowat, Hon. T. B. Pardee and Hon. A. M. Ross. To his left were Sir Richard Cartwright, Hon. David Mills and Rev. Dr. Ryckman. The banquet, which was conducted on strictly temperance principles, began shortly after six o'clock and lasted till eight. The building was beautifully decorated with flags, bunting and mottoes. The banners of St. Patrick, St. Andrew and St. George occupied conspicuous positions on the walls. The table at which Mr. Blake and the other guests sat ran north and south near the western wall. It was raised above the other tables, which ran east and west, so that when the speakers rose to address those present they could clearly be seen by all.

HUNDREDS HAD TO BE TURNED AWAY

At eight o'clock the chairman, after calling the meeting to order, read a telegram from Brandon on behalf of expressing confidence in the Opposition, and anticipating the early triumph of sound Liberal principles; also a telegram from the Halifax Young Men's Liberal Club uniting in the greeting to Mr. Blake and wishing him Godspeed in leading the Liberal party to victory, and rescuing the Dominion from the clutches of a Government based on fraud, corruption and oppression. Letters of regret for non-attendance were read from Hon. Alex. Mackenzie and Hon. C. F. Fraser. After the usual loyal and patriotic toasts were duly honored, Col. A. M. Ross delivered an eloquent speech in response to the "Army, Navy and Volunteers." The toast of "the Senate and House of Commons" was responded to by Senator Leonard and Sir Richard Cartwright.

Mr. Blake was received with a tremendous ovation, the vast audience rising to their feet, cheering and waving handkerchiefs for several minutes. This ovation was renewed when he began to speak.

The speech of Mr. Blake, to which it is impossible for us to more than refer, was from first to last a masterful effort. It surveyed the whole field of our politics with a wonderful grasp, and no true or fair-minded Canadian can rise from the reading of it without a feeling of pride and admiration that in the person of Edward Blake Canada possesses the ablest man and the foremost statesman in America.

Death From the Bite of a Cat.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—James Gregory, a boy of 13, chased a cat, caught it by the tail, and was bitten in the thumb. His mother took him to the hospital the same evening and had the wound cauterized. It healed, but the boy constantly complained of pain in the hand. When cold weather set in he began to suffer badly. He became worse and worse, and was haunted by an imaginary black cat, had repeated spasms, and finally died. The cat is supposed to have been bitten by a mad dog, which had previously appeared in the neighborhood.

Horticultural Society.

Annual Meeting Largely Attended—Officers Re-Elected and Elected—Reports—General Business.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Horticultural Society was held in the office of the Bank of Toronto on Thursday evening. The attendance, which was larger than usual, indicated the existence of an increased interest in the well-being of the society and the success of the movements that are being promoted through its influence and agency. The President, Mr. J. H. Roper, occupied the chair. The following were the REPORTS READ.

ANNUAL REPORT.

To the Members of the Peterborough Horticultural Society.

GENTLEMEN,—The year just closed has been one of particular interest to this society. For some years past the improvement and beautifying of the Court House Park has been from time to time discussed, but no definite result was attained until June last, when the committee appointed by the Directors waited upon the County Council, and made application for a grant of money to assist the society in their project, which was cheerfully granted in the shape of the sum of $75 per annum for five years, and a lease of the grounds for a term of 21 years, which was duly completed. The same committee waited upon the Town Council and, after advocating the matter and showing the advantage of having a public resort for the citizens, succeeded in securing a grant of $200 for this year (1885).

The Directors having received such encouragement, and, notwithstanding that the season was well advanced, at once proceeded to work in planning and laying out the lower part of the grounds with walks and flower beds, reserving the upper part for future operations.

The Directors having thought well to remove the fence and some of the unsightly trees from the grounds, did so, in lieu of which they had several ornamental trees planted.

A welcome addition to the grounds in the shape of a handsome fountain at the cost of $250, a Lambeth gas lamp, and a donation of $250 in cash towards the funds of the Society was made by Mr. James Stevenson, who has always manifested a practical interest in the welfare of the Society. In addition to the above Mr. Stevenson devoted a great deal of his valuable time in superintending the work on the grounds, which the Directors feel satisfied has been generally highly appreciated.

Several of our citizens have contributed ornamental trees, shrubs and bulbs for the beds and others have promised sundries for next spring planting.

Mention must also be made of the liberality of the Water Company in supplying water free of charge for the fountain and grounds. Further, of the liberal and public spirit of Mr. A. C. Dunlop, who voluntarily contributed $100 towards the improvements, also the stone steps on the east side of the fountain. It is hoped that the foregoing examples of liberality may stimulate others to assist the Society in a tangible way.

The Directors considered it advisable to appoint an overseer and caretaker of the grounds and appointed Mr. H. Nesbitt, jailor, to the position, who, after his appointment, utilized at times prison labor on portions of the work.

The annual show of the Society was held on the 8th of September in the Water Street roller skating rink which was found to be suitable for the purpose in every respect. Unfortunately the weather on the day of the show was very wet and unfavorable, which prevented a large attendance, consequently the amount received at the door was very small. Upon the whole there was a very good display made, the number of entries was 358 being increase of 64 above the previous year. The amount paid out in prize money was $182.50; the number of members on the Society's books is sixty-six and the balance of cash in the hands of the Treasurer as shown by his accompanying statement is $35.45.

In conclusion, the Directors trust that there will be this year a greatly increased interest in the operations of the Society, their only aim being to make the Court House Park, which so long lay in an uncared for, neglected and useless state, a place of attraction and comfort to the citizens generally, and while they will continue to have this object steadily in view they must, in a great measure, depend upon the hearty co-operation and assistance of the citizens in helping them to preserve and protect the grounds and their contents from injury of any kind, as in the event of damage to any part thereof, even to a small extent, would be discouraging to the Directors and those who have shown an interest in what has and is being done. Unfortunately last autumn considerable annoyance was experienced from cattle and horses straying into the grounds and doing more or less damage. It is to be sincerely hoped that the incoming Council will see that the cow by-law is rigidly enforced.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

J. H. ROPER, President.
J. D. COLLINS, Secretary.
Peterborough, Jan. 14th, 1886.

To J. H. Roper, Esq., President Peterborough Horticultural Society:—

SIR,—Herewith I beg to hand you the usual annual report of the finances of your Society, together with vouchers for amounts paid.

Yours faithfully,
F. J. LEWIS, Treasurer.

The reports were received and adopted subject to the report of the auditors thereon—Messrs. G. M. Roger and F. E. Bell.

OFFICERS FOR 1886.

The following officers were re-elected for the current term:—

PRESIDENT.—Mr. J. H. Roper.
VICE-PRESIDENT.—Mr. Jas. Stevenson.
TREASURER.—Mr. F. J. Lewis.
SECRETARY.—Mr. J. D. Collins.
DIRECTORS.—Dr. Geo. Burnham, (re-elected) Messrs. D. W. Dumble, E. J. Toker, John Burnham, J. R. Stratton (re-elected).

Rev. V. Clementi and Mr. A. Dunlop were elected honorary members, in recognition of the active interest they have for so long a time shown in the promotion of the objects and success of the society.

RESOLUTIONS.

Rev. Mr. Clementi referred to the fact that considerable complaint and dissatisfaction existed—and he himself considered it unfair—that market gardeners should compete with amateurs at the annual exhibition, as the former invariably, as was to be expected, shut out the amateurs from securing prizes. He suggested that to remedy the matter, special prizes should be offered for professional gardeners, and he moved,—That no market gardener be allowed in future to compete for any prizes except those specially offered for that class. The motion was seconded by Dr. Burnham and carried.

The question of receiving entries on the day of exhibition was discussed, and that matter, as well as the arrangement of the prize list for the coming year, and the revision of some of the rules and regulations, was referred to the directors.

A special vote of thanks was tendered to Messrs. Stevenson and Dunlop, the Town Council, the County Council, the waterworks company and the gas company for their liberal and substantial assistance they and the several corporations had given to the society in its work of improving Court House Park.

A committee was appointed to wait on the Town and County Councils with a view of securing an increase of the grant to the Court House Park improvement fund.

After the passing of cordial votes of thanks to the president and officials for the energy displayed on behalf of the Society during the past year, the meeting adjourned.

Indian Rising Imminent.

Alarming Reports Concerning Indian Intentions.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 14.—Reports of the priests and officers of the Mounted Police all tend to indicate an Indian uprising in the Northwest and it is doubtful if anything the Government will be able to do will arrest it. The southern Indian reserves, which lie between the Canadian Pacific Railway and the International boundary line, in the neighborhood of Gleichen, contain about 10,000 natives, consisting of Bloods, Blackfeet and Piegans. Further to the north are the Crees and Stonies, who were with Poundmaker and Big Bear. They number in all about 15,000 and have 2,000 fighting men. Crowfoot recently summoned a council of his head men, representing the Bloods, Piegans and Blackfeet, and the result is positively asserted to be a determination to go on the warpath.

The Poets and Poetry of Canada.

[No. 25.]

John McPherson.

"But, oh, ye high-flown quills that soar the skies
And ever with your prey still catch your praise;
If e'er you deign those lowly lines, your eyes
Give thyme or parsley wreath; I ask no bays;
This mean and unrefined ore of mine
Will make your glistering gold but more to shine."
—ANNE BRADSTREET.—The Four Elements.

The subject of this sketch was born at Liverpool, Nova Scotia, on the 4th of February 1817, and died at Brookfield in the same province on the 26th of July, 1845. He resided at the former place until his seventeenth year, receiving an ordinary English education. His biographer, Thompson tells us, "he was distinguished for seriousness, for avoidance of rough, boisterous play, for fondness of retirement and for an ambition to improve his mind, and mayhap, to win some literary fame."

In early life he received a severe personal injury in a frolicsome encounter with a young playmate. From this date he was subject to much weakness and pain, and this, and the enforced retirement caused by it, no doubt, had a controlling influence upon his after career, and gave him many opportunities for pursuing his favorite studies.

Before he entered on the duties of school teaching, (to which he devoted the best part of his life) he lived in Halifax for a short time, where he tried clerking, and shortly afterwards he took a voyage to the West Indies. He married in 1841, and taught school at Maitland, Nova Scotia, and in the immediate neighborhood for many years. At an early age he began to write for the local press, and he also contributed some sweet poems to the Olive Branch, a magazine edited by Miss Sarah Herbert.

His main hope in life seems to have been to secure a permanent home, in which ambition he was generously aided by the Literary Society of Halifax, but having secured a small cottage, his pecuniary difficulties compelled him to dispose of it, and he was left again with his purpose unfulfilled.

Very soon after this untoward event he passed away at the house of a near relative whose kindness to the poor, unfortunate poet was very great. This person sought in every way to soothe and comfort his closing days, and his efforts were not unrewarded.

His constitution was very feeble, and he was physically unfit to meet life's worries and trials. His temperament was quick and uneven, and his extreme sensitiveness rendered him very unhappy. He felt most keenly any unkind word or criticism and it had the effect of making him unhappy for a very long period.

His poem, "The Praise of Water," received a prize from a Halifax temperance society in 1843. On it he bestowed much labor and care and this first effort of his genius was generously commended by his countrymen.

His best poems were gathered together about 1862, and published under the title of the "Harp of Acadia." The editor, Mr. Thompson, gives a brief introductory memoir of the author and shows a sympathetic and kindly spirit in the task, well befitting a biography.

Miss Clotilda Jennings, speaking of our author, said:—"John McPherson's inexperience of society and unfitness for the money-making conflicts of this life, combined with weak health, were doubtless the real causes of his unsuccessful lot." Sir Walter Scott said wisely "that a man might make literature his staff, but not his crutch," and perhaps our Nova Scotian poet made the mistake too common to young writers, of expecting too much from "the vision and the faculty divine." But the story of McPherson's life, delicately and conscientiously told by his chosen biographer—its honest struggles, its unaffected purity and domestic tenderness, its reasonable ambition and its sad and baffled close, is a more pathetic poem than any he ever wrote. But He who watches over us all did not quite forget him, and the unfailing love and care of his wife enabled him to bear with gentleness and comparative fortitude the gloom, privation and pain of his latter days.

McPherson's poems are not imaginative or pictorial in any great degree, they are not aglow with gorgeous description, or the fire of sustained passion, but they are melodious, tender and original. They are not the reflex of his reading, they are his own genuine utterances. Grace and perspicuity of expression, usually one of the charms last acquired by accomplished and well-trained authors, seem to have been the unconscious possession of this one; and when we remember how little he was aided in that way by the society of fluent talkers, the suggestions of judicious critics, or the influence of early discipline, we venture to conclude that he was taught and endowed very much as the ravens are fed and the lilies clothed.

We regret that as our space is now exhausted we cannot give specimens of McPherson's poetry from the only volume which bears his name and which, we understand, is now out of print.

A Plundered Province.

M. C. Cameron's Masterly Address—Timber Limits Parcelled Out to Dominion Government Supporters—How the People's Money is Wasted—How the Debt is Piled Up—A Scathing Exposure of Tory Government Methods.

In continuation of Mr. M. C Cameron's Brucefield speech:

THE SUBSIDIZED.

I have said, Mr. Cameron continued, that no reliance can be placed on the utterances of the Tory Press, and why? Simply because they cannot afford to tell the truth; they are paid organs of the Government; they live and move, and have their being—(cheers)—solely because the public exchequer of this country is open to their calls. Thos. White is the Minister of the Interior. Thomas White, Thomas White's son, brother, and other relatives own the Montreal Gazette. It is a joint stock company, it is true, but the Joint Stock Company consists of the White family, and the White family drew from the public exchequer last year for advertising and printing $19,035. Can we expect Tom White to vote against the Government? (Laughter.) McLean, Roger & Co., the Government printers, are bound by contract to do the Government printing for certain specified rates. Their contract price is 10 cents per thousand ems. Thomas White was paid 35 cents per thousand ems. Thomas White published for the Government four editions of an immigration pamphlet. Thomas White charged for setting it up four different times, when is it well known the work was done but once. The contract price was 10 cents per thousand ems; Thomas White charged, and was paid $1.40, or fifteen times what the country was bound to pay the public contractor. For press work Thomas White charged on the immigration pamphlet, for 11,046 tokens. By actual count the number of tokens was only 5,523 So Mr. Thomas White's paper charged, and was paid for, double the work done, and in addition fourteen times as much as the public contractor was bound to do the work for. Thomas White's newspaper does not stand alone. Then the Mail newspaper was paid last year $11,134, the charges being similar to those made by Thomas White; the Hamilton Spectator, $6,804; the London Free Press, $6,428, and the Prescott Messenger, $6,224. The total amount received by the Tory press last year for advertising and printing was $201,915. Now, I say that while I have no objection to the Tory press getting the patronage from a Tory Government, I do object that they should charge from four to fourteen times more than the legitimate contract prices. I pass now to another mode adopted by this Government of rewarding their friends and of spending public money. John O'Connor had been Postmaster-General under Sir John. John O'Connor's usefulness was gone and Sir John took the first chance to rid himself of the burden. But John O'Connor knew a great many of the secrets of the Cabinet; and he let the Government understand that unless he were provided for the secrets would be disclosed. Therefore he was employed by the Government at the public expense to prepare a defence to the honest claims of Ontario to the disputed territory. He was wholly ignorant of the subject and rendered no service to the country, but for seven months' work on the Ontario Boundary Award he was paid $9,300—and thus $9,300 of public money was worse than wasted.

THE EXCHANGE BANK.

Let me give you another instance of the misconduct and corruption of the Government. The Exchange Bank has its headquarters at Montreal. It was a Bank controlled largely by the Tories. Mr. Craig, brother-in-law of the member for Montreal west, was cashier and manager. The Tory member for Montreal West was for a long time President. A Tory Senator was a leading member of the Board. In 1883 the Bank was on the verge of bankruptcy. The directors of the Bank, who were nearly all Tories, sent a delegation to Ottawa to get the Tory Government to sustain the Tory Bank with a loan of $200,000 of the people's money, and without a particle of security. The Tory Minister of Finance, well knowing the condition of the bank, loaned it $200,000. This loan did not tide the bank over its difficulty, and the directors of the bank very shortly after the first loan, appealed to the Tory Government for an additional loan of $100,000; and they got it. Thus $300,000 of the taxpayers' money was loaned by these spendthrifts to this rotten Tory institution, not one dollar of which will ever be refunded, and every Tory in the House voted to justify this loan.

THE "SECRET SERVICE FRAUD."

When Sir John was defeated in November, 1873, there was a sum of $6,600 in the Bank of Montreal to the credit of the Government, part of the Secret Service Fund voted by Parliament during Tory rule. Sir John held this money as trustee of the people of Canada, and it was his duty to hand it over to his successor the moment he was defeated. He never mentioned it to his successor. Two years after Mr. Mackenzie became Premier, he discovered that this money had been in the bank, and withdrawn by Sir John after he ceased to be Premier. Mr. Mackenzie challenged Sir John out of Parliament and in Parliament on the subject, but Sir John refused to give the slightest explanation as to what became of the money or how it was expended, and so the taxpayers of Canada were defrauded out of another $6,600.

"In Siberia you can purchase a wife for eight dogs." As long as girls can be had for the asking in this country, very few of our young men will go to Siberia to procure a wife.—Norristown Herald.

A Sad Disappointment.

At Sacramento, the other day, a man was on his last legs with pneumonia. His life was insured for several thousand dollars, and it appeared to him a little tough that he was to get no fun out of all this money. Determined to do the best he could under the circumstances, he made a will that he thought would cover a portion of the ground. His will provided that at his funeral every hack in town should be employed, and all of his friends and acquaintances invited to attend and take a ride afterward. All who attended were also invited to participate in a grand banquet in the evening at the hotel, at which a brass band, which should lead the funeral procession, was to enliven the occasion with music. After making his will he was so tickled with the idea of the whole affair, as he could see it in his mind's eye, and with a thought of what a large slice of the insurance he was thus having the fun of spending, that he at once begann to mend, and in spite of himself got well. Now he is as far as ever from the insurance money, and mourns the loss of the grand banquet, the brass band and the other big things that were to make his funeral a notable event.—Territorial Enterprise.

A Mexican priest claims to have discovered a key to the Aztec writings. He will publish a book about it.

"Have you been much out this season?" asked young West of young Crimsonbeak at the club the other evening. "Well, I should say I had," replied the young blood addressed, earnestly; "I took that little Miss Bangerbar out to a ball the other night and I was out just $40!"—Yonker Statesman.

A gentleman who observed Jimmie carefully taking the census of a company assembled in the parlor awaiting a call to supper, inquired; "Why," replied the urchin, with a troubled air, "here's nine of us, counting me, and mamma has gone and cut two pies into quarters, and that only makes eight pieces."

Handsome English Girls.

There are more handsome women in Brighton than anywhere else in the world, says an English journal. They are so common that gradually the standard of taste in the mind rises, and good-looking women who would be admired in other places pass by without notice. Where all the flowers are roses you do not see a rose. They are all plump,—not to say fat, which would be rude,—very plump, and have the glow of youth and bloom upon the cheeks. They do not suffer from "pernicious anæmia," that evil bloodlessness that London physicians are not unfrequently called upon to cure, when the cheeks are white as paper, and have to be rosied by minute doses of arsenic. They extract arsenic from the air. The way they step and the carriage of the form show how full they are of life and spirits. Sarah Bernhardt will not come to Brighton if she can help it less she should lose the high art angularity and slipperyness of shape which suits her role. Dresses seem always to fit well, because people somehow seem to expand them.

It is pleasant to see the girls walk, because the limbs do not drag, the feet are lifted gayly and with ease. Horse exercise adds a deeper glow to the face; they ride upon the downs first, out of pure cunning, for the air is certain to impart a freshness to the features, like dew on a flower, and then return and walk their horses to and fro on the king's road, certain of admiration. However often these tricks are played they are always successful. These philanthropic folks who want to reform woman's dress and call upon the world to observe how the present style contracts the chests and forces the organs of the body out of place (what a queer expression it seems, "organs!"), have not a chance in Brighton.

Girls lace tight and "go in" for the tip of fashion, yet they bloom and flourish as green bay trees, and do not find their skirts any obstacle in walking or tennis. The horse-riding that goes on is a thing to be chronicled; they are always on horseback, and you may depend upon it that it is better for them than all the gymnastic exercises ever invented. The liability to strain, and even internal injury, which is incurred in gymnastic exercises ought to induce sensible people to be extremely careful how they permit their daughters to sacrifice themselves on this scientific altar. Buy them horses to ride if you want them to enjoy good health and sound constitutions. Nothing like horses for women. Send the professors to Suakim and put the girls on horseback.

Whether Brighton grows handsome girls or whether they flock there by instinct, or become lovely by staying there, is an inquiry too difficult to pursue. There they are, one at least in every group, and you have to walk, as the Spaniards say, with your head over your shoulder, continually looking back at those who have passed. The only antidote known is to get married before you visit the place, and doubts have been expressed as to its efficacy. In the south coast of Seville there is nothing done but heart-breaking. It is so common it is like hammering flints for road mending; nobody cares if your heart is in pieces. They break hearts on horseback, and while walking, playing tennis, shopping—actually at shopping, not to mention parties of every kind. No one knows where the next danger will be encountered—at the very next corner, perhaps. Feminine garments have an irresistible flutter in the sea breeze; feathers have beckoning motion. No one can be altogether good in Brighton, and that is the great charm of it. The language of the eye is cultivated to a marvelous degree; as we say of dogs, they quite talk with their eyes.

An Invitation to Dinner.

The story is told that the playing of a celebrated violinist very much impressed one of the ladies of the audience, a well-known society leader, and she caused the musician to be presented to her.

"I was delighted with your wonderful music, Mr. S.," the lady said, "quite carried away with it, in fact."

The musician was charmed.

"If you have no other engagements for Thursday evening," the lady went on, "I would be pleased to have you dine with us."

He had no other engagements.

"And be sure and bring your violin," she added.

"Well, madam," Mr. S. replied, "I hardly think that will be necessary; my violin never gets hungry."

The horse had stopped and refused to budge, seemingly aware that the two young lady tourists were novices at driving. "Jennie, what in the world shall we do? The outrageous brute refuses to budge." "Laura, there is an awful wicked word that I have heard men use, but—" "Oh, my, we couldn't but—" "Oh, say, I'll tell what won't be wrong; I'll say one-half and you the other; Gosh!" "Darnit!" "Gosh!" "Darnit!" "Gosh!" "Darnit!" But the horse stood still. "He don't appear to understand us, Jennie," said Laura despondently. "No, the horse don't, but the devil does, Laura."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Polar Sea a Myth.

One of the most intelligent views of Arctic exploration is furnished by Sergeant Brainard, of the Greely expedition. He says that they found nothing to show that the open polar sea exists. He believes it a myth. The space beyond their highest point of exploration and the pole, he says, is open in places a little while at a time, but this space opens and shuts arbitrarily, and any vessel trying to penetrate it may meet the fate of the Proteus, and be crushed at any moment. On the other hand, it cannot be traversed by sledges, because the open water might come and swallow them up. He says there is much yet to be done in exploration, and properly supported and supplied at a fixed station, a party could stay there a long time. Had the Greely party remained at its station it would have been alive to-day, for the provisions and the fuel would have held out. But they returned according to orders, failed to find the provisions and fuel they expected below, and so miserably perished.

A Sheet-Iron Hen.

An ingenious fellow in Ohio has constructed a sheet-iron hen that promises to lay him a golden egg. It is finished up to life, full size, cackles, clucks, and looks with one eye at a time so naturally that it will deceive the oldest henhawk in the country. It is so arranged that when a hawk, mink, or polecat pounces on to it the back springs open and the wings fly up and force the assailant on to a ravenous buzz saw that makes 1,700 revolutions per minute. After moving half a minute the saw stops, the hen closes up, folds its wings, and begins to cackle as though it had just laid an egg. One winding up will answer for three massacres, providing the rather delicate machinery does not get clogged up too much with blood, bones and feathers. He sat a freshly painted one out in the sun to dry last Wednesday, which attracted the attention of a fine old cat belonging to a doctor who had poked a great deal of fun at the fool thing. The hen is there but the cat is hence.

The Deception of the Microscope.

A hundred microscopes of different sizes and manufacture were ranged in a line around the hall. Many visitors looked through them with great curiosity. Under one of the glasses was a beautiful gold bug that looked like a mountain of shining gold. A postage stamp under another lense was as large as the State of Texas. A drop of ink looked like the Black Sea. Three or four grains of sand beneath a large microscope were a Sahara. What seemed the Chicago conflagration was a firefly. A flystrack magnified one million diameters resembeled the crater of a volcano. A Jersey mosquito's bill looked like the mast of a ship. A vast ocean with whales, sea serpents and porpoises floating and gambling in it was a drop of water from an old rain barrel. Some gin fizz in a thimble looked like the great geyser in the National park.

"What is this herd of wild buffalo?" asked an old lady, adjusting her spectacles and taking her eye from the microscope.

"Those are not buffalo, madam," said a scientist. "They are insects too small to be seen with the naked eye."

"What is this that looks like the Atlantic cable?" asked a young lady.

"A hair from a young man's mustache," said a microscopist.

"Look at Jumbo!" exclaimed a little girl, as she held her up to look into the microscope at a young flea.

"It's the same elephant I saw at Barnum's show," said the little boy, greatly delighted.

"What a beautiful lake!" said two young ladies who had just looked through a microscope. They glanced at the card which labeled the object under the glass. It read: "A gnat's toe-nail."—New York Morning Journal.

True Chivalry of American Men.

Nothing is more pleasant in America, or places the civilization of the country in a brighter or more honorable light, than the universal respect publicly paid to women by men of all degrees. That there is in this something of exaggeration, and that some women abuse their exceptional privileges, demanding discourteously what men are ready voluntarily to offer, does not materially affect the question. An American gentleman who resigns his seat to a lady in a steamboat or tramcar, or who wearies himself in looking after luggage, and wrestling on her account with railway porters, does not ask even the thanks which politeness should be eager to proffer. His action has been disinterested, instinctive, and to satisfy his own sense of propriety. The difference in this respect between the French and American republics is curious indeed. A Frenchman will ruthlessly turn a lady into the mud of the street rather than step off the pavement himself, or will bribe the railway guide to induce delicate women to leave their pre-engaged carriage in order that he may not sit with his back to the engine. He will hardly assist a woman in distress unless she be attractive. The French, below the thinnest veneer, are the most impolite of civilized races. Americans, on the other hand, though without superficial polish, are warm hearted and chivalrous in the highest degree. The position in which they have placed their women is the best guarantee that the Nation will outgrow the blemishes which now disfigure it and will in the future attain a higher civilization than has been enjoyed by any people who have regarded their intellectual and political life as the undivided dominion of man.—Sir Lepel Henry Griffin.

A blushing young man called upon a Madison avenue florist, one day last week, and gave the proprietor $16 to construct a bouquet which would say, in floral language: "Dearest one, I love you—be mine," and which was to be delivered that evening, without fail, at the residence of a beautiful, accomplished, and auburn-haired girl on Thirty-sixth street. It evidently was delivered, because at an early hour next morning the young lady called at the same florist and invested $2.75 in a bouquet, conveying the message: "No, you bandy-legged clam."—New York Star.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 300 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every housewife, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and those we wish to send for a copy out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this papre who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

VALEDICTORY!

Good-bye! Good-bye, old year!

Another milestone has slipped behind us.

Another leaf in the Book of Life has closed forever.

The past is able to take care of itself. The future is in our own hands and may be what we chose to make of it.

We have again reached the Merchants' reckoning season, or stock-taking time, when we purpose balancing accounts and bringing all things into line for opening a new year.

Previous to our taking stock we will Clear Out all our winter goods at Cost, and will try to carry over as little as possible into another season.

During this month we will make an extra effort to close out the small balance of Winter Goods to make room for New Spring Goods, expected in early in February.

Your Influence Solicited.

Piano Tuning.

Mr. Olsen, Pianist, for Day's International Theatre Company, an experienced Piano Tuner, will be in town for a few days. Parties wishing to have their pianos tuned by him will please leave their orders at Mr. Menzies' Bookstore.

For the Holidays.

Messrs. Foot & McWhinnie have in stock for the Xmas trade, a very fine line of slippers of all kinds, specially suited for presents, and at prices much below the ordinary. Call in and see the stock, it is really handsome and cannot be surpassed in town. In every department they carry full lines, but make a specialty of fine hand-sewed work for ladies and gentlemen.

Prof. Dorenwend with hair goods of every description, at Phelan's hotel for two days only, Monday and Tuesday, January 18th and 19th.

The Carnival Season.

Montreal will have no grand carnival this winter St. Paul, Min., and Halifax, Nova Scotia, will in its stead have monster ice palaces and carnivals. As it will be very inconvenient for Peterborough masqueraders and pleasure seekers to attend these the Fire Brigade Band, to satisfy the desire for such amusement, will give a series of grand masquerade carnivals in the Charlotte street Rink during the winter. The first will be held on Friday, Jan. 22nd. Valuable prizes will be given.

Peterborough vs. Cobourg Curlers.

Peterborough Curlers have been drawn to play Cobourg for the Ontario tankard. Both teams wanted to play at home, and an amiable arrangement could not be entered into. Dr. Beath, referee, whose duty it was to decide upon a place of combat, chose Lindsay rinks as the field, and to-day as the date. The Cobourg men refuse to play at Lindsay. The Peterborough club sent two rinks up to Lindsay to-day, to claim the match, if not opposed by Cobourg. They will in all probability have a brush with some of the Lindsay club.

Call and see the immense stock of new and fashionable Bangs, Waves, Wigs, etc., of Prof. Dorenwend's, at Phelan's hotel, on January 18th and 19th.

The Octoroon.

The performance, of Day's International Theatre Company are becoming more popular nightly. The company's presentation of the "Octoroon" last night was exceptionally good, each member taking his or her part to perfection. Miss Eugenia Lindeman as Zoe, the Octoroon girl, who was brought up in her father's house as a lady, and after his death sold as a slave through the villainy of "Jacob McClosky," an overseer of the estate and a lover of Zoe's, were vividly impersonated by both. Salem Scudder, an inventor, another overseer and a lover of Zoe's, was well taken by Mr. Wilson Day. Marion Percy as "Dora Sunnyside," in love with Geo Payton; Bassett Willard as Geo. Payton, accepted lover of Zoe, and late owner of the plantation, were nicely taken. Carl Smith, as Wahnotee, an Indian friend of little "Paul," Annie Bird, was perhaps the best representation in the play. The performance was brilliant and realistic, tragic, and at times amusing. A southern plantation song by Annie Bird, with chorus, was very nicely executed, and received prolonged applause. Geo. Woodward, as "Ole Pete," too old to work, was the only negro on exhibition. He was amusing without being offensive. The closing scene was the death of the Octoroon girl, who freed herself with poison, and the triumph of Wahontee, who killed in a bowie knife combat McClosky, the murderer of little Paul, was a beautiful tableau. Before the close of the performance Manager Day announced that to-night will be Annie Bird's benefit night; a double bill be given, "My Uncle Will," and "Andy Blake;" in the latter, Annie Bird will sustain the leading role, as "Andy Blake."

They Cannot Always Win.

Two rinks of the Lindsay curling club were defeated at Bowmanville yesterday.

Prof. Dorenwends' new styles of Bangs, Waves, Wigs, etc., at Phelan's hotel, on January 18th and 19th.

A River Eruption.

The water in the river is rising rapidly from an increased volume from the north, and is heaving up the ice like an earthquake. Within the noon hour to-day the ice broke up from a little below Rogers' dam to far down the river.

Court House Park.

At the annual meeting of the Horticultural Society, it was decided to improve the lighting of this resort in readiness for the coming season, by adding sufficient gas lamps so that there will be a light at each corner of the park. These with the Lambeth lantern in the central portion of the grounds, and the electric light at St. Paul's church angle, will remove the complaints made last season of the park being insufficiently lighted.

Pensioners' Pay-Day.

Lieut.-Col. Milligan, Staff-officer of Pensions, of Toronto district, was at the Oriental to-day, to pay the annual allowance to the Imperial pensioners of the Peterborough outpost. He arrived in town from Belleville last night and will leave for Lindsay this evening. There are about forty pensioners who are paid at Peterborough. Lieut.-Col. Milligan is a staff-officer in the imperial service. He is an affable and genial gentleman and annually gladdens the hearts of over twelve hundred pensioners in this district.

What They are Saying.

The Blake banquet was a big success.—The Toronto News.

It was a magnificent ovation.—Toronto World.

I know of no political compacts or alliances.—Hon. Edward Blake.

We meet to-night to make a clean slate for our successors.—The old Council.

And everything is "greased for the occasion."—Janitor Beavis.

If it hadn't been for the "coffee" we would have been victorious.—Rink Number One.

The toboggan slide takes like hot cakes.—Commodore Calcutt.

Peterborough Players Defeated.

The two rinks of the Peterborough curling club who played in Lindsay yesterday with the Lindsay curlers, suffered defeat to the extent of 9 shots. The rink skipped by Mr. W. G. Ferguson was victorious by 2 shots, and Dr. Boucher's rink was 10 behind. The game was lively and pleasant. The Peterborough men complain that the Lindsay men are as good fellows as they are players, and that at curling they are hard to beat. The following are the rinks and the scores made:

Peterborough.	Lindsay.
Rinks No. 1.
H. B. Merrick	A. Lumsden
Geo. Walker	J. Dunsford
R. S. Davidson	J. Matthie
W. G. Ferguson, skip	22 J. McMillan, sr., skip 20
Rinks No. 2.
A. Stevenson,	J. Cooper
W. VanEvery	J. McMillan, jr.
A. McNeil	J. Keith
Dr. Boucher, skip	12 T. E. Bradburn, skip 22

The curlers were surprised on returning home to hear that it had been noised around town that they had defeated the Lindsay men. They could not fabricate and denied the report and gave the revised version.

The Free Social.

The ladies of the George street Methodist Church entertained the congregation of that church, yesterday evening, to a social tea in a very happy and hospitable manner and free of charge. At 7 o'clock the basement of the church was well filled. A social talk and general making of acquaintances, interspersed with excellent music by the choir, composed the first part of the programme, followed by a sumptuous repast served by the ladies. After everybody was satisfied and in good humor, the second object of the gathering was made known, viz: to consider the advisability of repairing the old organ of the church, or of purchasing a new one and disposing of the old one. Mr. J. Kendry was elected chairman of the meeting. Mr. D. W. Dumble made a short, pithy speech in favor of disposing of the present venerable instrument and the purchase of a new one. Mr. Hilliard followed in the same strain, and appealed to the audience for hearty support in the matter. The subject was talked over and the congregation was unanimous in favor of a new organ, and about $800 was subscribed towards the amount required for the proposed new instrument.

Messrs. Sailsbury and Bro. have received a lot of the finest Mucilage in the world. Try it.

A Double Match.

The Lakefield and Oshawa curling clubs each sent two rinks to Peterborough to-day to play for the Ontario tankard and Caledonian medal. Two matches will be played. At the time of going to press the clubs were engaged in playing for the tankart. The match for the medal will be played this evening. The ice is in good trim and excellent sport is expected.

NEWMARKET, Jan. 14.—A fatal accident happened at Cane & Sons' factory this morning. A man named Frank Lundy, while at work arranging the machinery, was pulled against a saw, which severed the head from the body. He was unmarried.

Lindsay.

Word was received in town on Tuesday morning that during the previous night Mr. John Moffat, who kept a brick-yard near Cameron, was frozen to death. He had been at Fenelon Falls during the day and just after dark left to walk home. About midnight he was discovered lying on the road in an insensible condition, only a short distance from the village, by two gentlemen who were driving, and was taken to Jackson Reid's hotel, where he shortly afterwards expired. Mr. Moffat was an inoffensive, hard-working man, but sadly addicted to drink.

Reconciled to His Colleagues.

Mr. Gladstone and His Lieutenants Agree on a Policy.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—It is stated on good authority that Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues have become reconciled. That Earls Spencer and Granville, the Marquis of Hartington and Sir William Vernon Harcourt have all given their assent to a course of tactics suggested by Mr. Gladstone, and that the ex-premier will take the first chance to overthrow the Conservative Government.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

TRUSTEE APPOINTMENTS.

On Monday next the first business session of the Council of 1886 takes place. Since the appointment of High School trustees will form a very important part of the session's business, it may not be amiss to reiterate what has been before said in these columns on the subject. It needs little or no argument to convince any reasonable person that it is both wrong in principle and practice, for the Town Council to appoint one or any members of that body to the vacant positions. It is contrary to legitimate Parliamentary practice—it is contrary to reason that any member of the Council should be a party (even within his strictly legal rights) to appointing himself to a position of trust, and thus making himself judge of his own fitness for the position and making himself responsible to himself—for he would not be responsible to the people—for the proper fulfilment of his duties. The idea is absurd and the principle wrong, and what is wrong in principle cannot be justified in practice, except possibly in a case of extreme urgency, which does not exist in the case in question. While admitting that the members of the Town Council may be qualified on the score of ability, it is equally admissable that there are just as good men outside the council, who do not labour under the moral disqualifications, which affect a member of the civic board. Very few men can do two things at once satisfactorily, and any town councillor, who faithfully discharges his duty to his constituents, will find little time to devote to the duties of High School Trustee, which in view of the important interests at stake, demand the undivided attention of any man, however able, who may assume the responsibilities of the position. We understand that a number of members of the council pledged themselves previous to election, in case they should be re-elected, to give their support for the position of High School Trustee, without for a moment having thought of the fitness of the aspirant, or if, a trustee, of how he had discharged his trust in the past. The promise was given out of mere good nature, and from a wish not to give offence by refusal to a fellow member of the council, whereas if an outsider had made a similar solicitation, no matter how well fitted he might be for the place, he would have been put off with some plausible excuse. This is only another example of how little thought is given to so important a matter, and of the fact that so long as members of the Council appoint themselves, they will not be appointed on their merit, but perfunctorily, or perhaps in consideration of support for some project, which may require the aspirant's assistance.

Town Council.

The Last Meeting of the Old Council—Finance and Charity Reports—Votes of Thanks to the Retiring Mayor and Councillors Replies Made.

A meeting of the Town Council was held in the council chamber yesterday evening.

The Mayor being absent at the opening of the meeting, on motion, Mr. Douglas took the chair.

There were present Councillors Cahill, Davidson, McNaughton, Kelly, McClelland, Green and Menzies.

After the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed, Mayor Cox entered and took his seat.

Later on there was a full representation of the Council.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Mr. E. Burnham, threatening individual action against the members of the Council if the costs of the Dickson Estate By-law suit were paid by the Council.—Received.

From W. Chapman, asking for a grant of $20 for damage done his property by the rise of water caused by the ice blocade under Bethune street brigde.—Referred to Finance Committee.

From E. Green asking to have his income tax refunded,—Referred to Court of Revision.

From E. Poole, W. H. Cooper, Robt. Pope and Thos. Armstrong, applying for the position of chief of police.—Referred to Committee on Appointments.

From Stone & Mason, threatening to bring action for damages against the town.—Referred to Finance Committee.

From the McCleary Manufacturing Co., of London, stating that Mr. McCleary was away from home. The town's communication, enquiring as to the requirements of the company, would be considered and attended to when he returned, and in all probability Mr. McCleary would visit the town. —Referred to the Finance Committee.

From Jas. Hays, asking for recompense for injuries received at Tighe's fire last June when assisting the firemen, and losses in consequence of such injury.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were presented for payment.

Terrance Smith	$6.30
Harry Drake	3.00
B. Shortly	2.25
George Benton	4.00
Charles Chambo	2.13
Thomas Beavis	1.35
W. Pigeon	68.50

The accounts were all referred to the Finance Committee.

DISCUSSION.

Mr. McClelland asked the Mayor who would be obliged to pay the costs of the Dickson estate by-law suit. He thought the Mayor should have consulted the Council before he instituted the action.

The Mayor said there need be no alarm about it. If the Council objected to paying the costs he would pay them and would appeal to a higher court.

Mr. Cahill said he thought it was the duty of the Mayor to defend the by-laws of the town and the town should pay the costs.

Mr. McNaughton agreed with Mr. McClelland. He thought it was the duty of the Mayor to consult the Council in such matters. The Dickson Company should pay the costs.

Mr. Cox said he was obliged to Mr. McClelland and Mr. McNaughton for informing him what his duty was, but he would do what he thought proper. He would exercise his own judgment as to what his duty was and act accordingly.

Mr. Davidson, Chairman of the Finance Committee, read the following

R. S. DAVIDSON.
Peterborough, Jan 12th, 1886.

The report was adopted after being amended by adding Mr. Rose's account of $3 for work on steps leading from the sidewalk to his house.

CHARITY REPORT.

Mr. Douglas handed in his report of the expenditures for charity in No. 4 Ward from May, 1885, until Jan. 11th, 1886, amounting to $74.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. McClelland stated that the town had been paying too much for their wood, which formed a large item in their charity accounts. They had been getting short measure through the carelessness of the teamster. He was pleased to announce that there would be no trouble during the ensuing year, as the Mayor-elect has offered to supply wood gratuitously to persons deserving charity who require that commodity. (Applause.)

AFTER ANOTHER INDUSTRY.

Moved by Mr. Kelly, seconded by Mr. Greene, that the clerk be authorized to communicate with Kerr & Co., of Paisley, whose Canadian office is Toronto, to ascertain the inducements they would require to locate their spool and cotton factory in town.—Carried.

On motion, Mr. Robert Thompson was heard by the Council.

Mr. Thompson said he had been working for the town for some time past. He thought he was entitled to $150. His time had been broken into by butter and cheese markets. He would leave it to the Council to decide what his services were worth.—Referred to Finance Committee.

On motion, Mr. C. W. Sawers was heard. He appeared for the C. P. R. and asked that an agreement between the town and company, with reference to Rink street culvert, be signed and settled. The town had agreed, when the company deepened it, to rebuild it should it ever require it. They were anxious to have it settled. The matter is in the hands of the Finance Committee.

Mr. Kelly asked if any steps had been taken by the Court of Revision with regard to Mr. Cluxton's petition.

Mr. Menzies said the Court would meet in a few days.

Moved by Mr. Rutherford, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that the thanks of this Council are due and are hereby tendered the reporters of the several papers for the impartial manner in which they have reported the Council proceedings for 1885.—Carried.

On motion, Mayor Cox left the chair and Mr. Menzies ascended to it.

Moved by Mr. Cahill, seconded by Mr. Rutherford,—That the thanks of this Council are due and are heartily tendered to His Worship the Mayor, Geo. A. Cox, Esq., for his able and impartial conduct as the presiding officer of this Council during the past two years and for his untiring zeal in the interests of the corporation.

This Council also desire to place on record the appreciation of his valuable services to the town by the liberal expenditure of his own capital, and his efforts to locate manufacturing industries here, and the Council express the hope that he will still continue—as they believe he will—his efforts in this direction and thereby confer further benefits on the people.

Before putting the motion Mr. Cahill made a short speech, referring to the prominent part the Mayor had taken in the affairs of the town. He was sorry any obstacle had arisen to mar the proceedings of the Council. He hoped it would soon be forgotten. He thought if the Dickson by-law were submitted to the people it would be carried by a large majority. He also spoke of the offer made by the town to have Spalding's bay filled. The town could easily afford to pay for it, as they received a land grant from the Government twenty-five years ago sufficient, and it would do away with a great deal of pestilence. He had made a motion offering $5,000 and land to anyone who would undertake and carry out the job. The Mayor had promised to give it his attention when he left the Council. He hoped he would consider this, and felt sure if Mr. Cox undertook to do the work he would do it speedily and well. He had much pleasure in tendering the thanks of the Council to his worship the Mayor on this occasion.

The motion was carried unanimously amid applause.

Mr. Cox, in reply, said he was much obliged to the mover and seconder and the members of the Council for the expression of kindness and courtesy conveyed in the motion, which was in keeping with the kindness and respect he had received at their hands during his term as Mayor. He also [illegible] of confidence toward him. He certainly felt that the Council had sustained him and supported him during the past two years. There had been some differences of opinion. He did not want to act or think for others. He had done what he considered the best for the town. He believed that those who were opposed to him had done what they thought was in the interests of the town. All had agreed to push the town to the front. He certainly would, he asserted, as in the past, do everything to advance the interests of the town. He again thanked them for their expressive kindness and courtesy. (Applause.)

Moved by Mr. Kelly, seconded by Mr. McClelland, that this council regret that they are about to lose two of their number, Messrs. Douglas and Green, who have always taken an active part in town affairs, and take this opportunity of tendering them the sincere thanks of the Council.—Carried.

Mr. Rutherford made a short speech in praise of the retiring councillors.

Mr. Douglas and Mr. Green replied briefly, thanking the Council for the expressions of kinkness.

The Council then adjourned.

BLAKE'S BANQUET SPEECH.

The Northwest Rebellion.

This event and the circumstances rising out of it, forming the burning, political question of the day, Hon. Mr. Blake's treatment of it in his great speech at the London banquet, will be read with intense interest. On this subject Mr. Blake said:

Now, Government all this time has been so busy with political intrigue, with schemes for retaining or obtaining political support, with jobs, with the regulation of our private business, with its attacks on the Provinces, that it seems to have had no time or energy for the discharge of its most obvious and important duties. It marked the early part of its old lease of office by the Northwest rebellion of 1869 (Hear.) It has, I believe, marked the closing scenes of its new lease by the Northwest rebellion of 1885. (Hear.)

NEGLECT, DELAY AND MISMANAGEMENT.

I cannot go into details to-night. I have done so in Parliament already. Remember that the Government was very specially responsible for diligence and liberality in dealing with the Northwest because of former events, and because it was an unrepresented country, autocratically governed. I have, nevertheless, shown beyond all doubt, out of the selected papers brought down under compulsion by Government, the most scandalous neglect, delay, and mismanagement. (Cheers.)

With an enormous Indian expenditure they had the Indians largely in a state of hunger, insubordination and disquiet. (Hear.)

With seven years' time for action, full power to act, full knowledge of the discontent and of the danger of delay, with constant petitions, resolutions, representations and remonstrances, they yet did nothing to settle the claims of the Northwest halfbreeds to like treatment as was accorded these in Manitoba from 1879 to 1885, till it was too late, till the fire was in the heather. (Hear.)

When they first acted it was in a lame, inadequate and halting sense, and with a fatal pause. Even their second step after the outbreak was unjust and unsatisfactory, and it was not till after the Commission reported that they yielded. (Hear.)

They showed also gross negligence in dealing with the claims of the Manitoba unenumerated halfbreeds, whose just demands, though pressed and proved for years, they refused to recognize or settle. Nor were they dealt with till April, 1885.

Their action as to the land office, the opening of the land for entry, the surveys, the settlement of land claims, the recognition of early occupation, wood rights, land patents, colonization companies and reserves, and their system of dealing with letters, petitions and reports were all marked for apathy, incapacity, neglect, procrastination and bungling. (Cheers.) In truth the story is almost incredible were it not proved out of the records.

THEN IN JUNE, '84, CAME RIEL.

There was ample time that summer to settle all. All might have been adjusted, the grievances which were his instruments removed, and with them his power broken. (Hear, hear.)

They knew he was there, they knew he was agitating, they knew the danger. Sir David McPherson knew it, Sir John Macdonald knew it, Sir Hector Langevin knew it, Sir Adolphe Caron knew it—the whole corps of knights knew it. They were warned time and again, they were implored, they were threatened. Nothing moved them. They were roused to action only on the eve of the onubreak. Too late; ala,stoo late.

They were as ineffective in measures of repression and defence as in those of redress. They demoralized and disbanded the local forces. (Hear.) With three years' warning they left the guns in such an unserviceable state that they became useless at Cut Knife to the great danger of our gallant troops. They chose a military post at Carlton, which was only tenable while there was no enemy, and was abandoned the first instant of the war. These are but samples of their conduct. (Hear.)

I say nothing of the cost of the war, or the management of that business now. You know

WHAT FOLLOWED THE OUTBREAK.

The loss of many lives; many wounds; much suffering; terror and anxiety among the scattered settlers; great hardships; losses to individuals; millions drawn from the public chest; the country injured; the Indians unsettled—a state of affairs produced, of which we cannot see the end. (Hear.)

I brought the subject before Parliament at the end of last session; but the House was exhausted; the papers were unprinted; the members had not read them; Government denied the accuracy of my statements; they called on the their supporters to confide in them; they declared my motion inopportune, and called on their supporters to vote it down—and voted down it was. Since then there has been time to to read the papers; the objections of last session no longer apply; some of their supporters have already declared that the Government was wrong, and I do not believe they would now repeat their vote. (Hear.)

THE INCRIMINATED MINISTERS.

What is to be the penalty for the men who have by their criminal neglect and incapacity produced these sad results? I have told them that in older days they would have been impeached as traitors to their trust. (Cheers.) These are not our modern ways. The penalty is milder; for such an offence as theirs, too mild. It is but a withdrawal of the power they have abused—of the confidence they have betrayed. This mild penalty we call on the people to inflict, and I will not so far despair of my country as to doubt the answer to that call. (Cheers.)

THE FATE OF LOUIS RIEL.

Since the close of the outbreak an event growing out of it has to a great degree engrossed the public attention, and to that I now turn. I mean the fate of Riel.

An effort has been made, for obvious political purposes, to colour the character and exaggerate the import of the agitation on this subject. Some Quebec supporters of the Government have, in common with some of its Quebec opponents, denounced its action in very strong language, and words have been used, suggestions have been made, things have been done, which do not commend themselves to my judgment. On the other hand, the most violent language has been used in the Ontario Ministerial organs; the movement as a whole has, in my view, been misrepresented, and a deliberate design is apparent on the part of the Ontario Tories to create and intensify and to obscure by this means all the real issues between parties in order to raise an issue false in itself, and which, handled as proposed by the Ministerial press, would imperil the future of our country. (Hear.)

A WAR OF RACE AND CREED,

It is quite certain that this question must, and it is desirable that it should, be shortly debated in parliament; and then those who challenge the conduct of the Government should tender a definite issue. This I hold, though I entertain very strong opinions as to the reserve which should attend criticisms on the exercise in ordinary cases of,

THE PREROGATIVE OF MERCY.

As Minister of Justice, I have had to advise in many capital cases; and I do not forget the heavy responsibility which rests on those in whose hands are the issues of life and death, and whose task is rendered all the more difficult by reason of the large measure of discretion vested in them, and expressed by the word "clemency." I know how much these difficulties are enhanced by heated partisan and popular discussion, in which distorted views and an imperfect appreciation of facts are likely to prevail. I have been falsely and wantonly accused of selling the prerogative for personal and for political gain. I deprecated then, as I would deprecate now, such attacks on Ministers unless made with good and sufficient reason. So delicate in my opinion is the exercise of this prerogative th while I have sometimes been unable to reconcile my judgment to that of the present Ministers in capital cases, I have felt it the lesser evil on the whole to be silent than to raise a debate; and I can readily conceive, in fact I have known of cases in which, though I might differ from the conclusion of the Ministers, I should yet refuse to censure them for honestly taking a line which I could not follow.

AN UNQUESTIONABLE RIGHT.

But we must be guided in each case by its own circumstances. The right of discussion, of advice, of censure, has been denied by a leading Ministerial organ. Yet it is unquestionable. (Hear.) Ministers are responsible in this as in all other cases. I was myself instrumental in procuring the reform which made this sure; and the rights which I helped to secure for my country I will help to maintain. (Hear.) But I declare that the occasion must be grave which renders discussion opportune, and the case clear which renders censure expedient. Why then do I hold that this is plainly a case for Parliamentary discussion? For several reasons.

Because the trial is for an extraordinary political offence, a great agitation has supervened, and various questions have been raised which cannot be disposed of save after full debate in Parliament. (Hear.)

Because some prominent supporters of the Government have declared that they have been misled, deceived, and betrayed by the Government; and this charge must be investigated. (Hear.)

Because these men also declare that Government acted, not on principle, but on party considerations, to punish an old offence, and to gratify the hate of a section of their supporters; a statement which demands enquiry. (Hear.)

Because unhappily at an early day, and before the trial, the Government, declining the high position of neutrality and indifference, which, as the representatives of public justice, public mercy and public policy, they should have maintained, declared that the charge which I preferred against them, of neglect, delay and mismanagement in Northwest affairs, was the defence of their prisoners, thus making themselves substantially private parties to the cause, and in effect resting their defence on the others' condemnation. (Hear.)

I have always held that both parties might be deeply guilty—Government for neglect, delay and mismanagement, and the insurgents for rising in rebellion—always a grave offence against the State, and in this case aggravated by the incitements to the Indians to revolt. But Government identified their acquittal with the prisoners' conviction, and thus disqualified themselves for just judgment. (Hear.)

For these and other reasons I deprecate any attempt to evade or delay the Parliamentary discussion, and am ready to facilitate so far as I can the ventilation of the whole question, including the sentences of imprisonment, as to which I may be allowed to express the hope that Government will without delay deal with those sentences in a large and merciful spirit. (Cheers.)

CHARACTER OF THE DISCUSSION.

But while I am of this opinion, I hold strong views as to the character, of the discussion. Much has been said of the conduct of the French Canadians in raising this question, and a wicked attempt has been made, taking advantage of some too hot and intemperate phrases, to arouse prejudices of race and creed against them because they have shown specially warm feelings in this matter.

It is true that we Canadians are, in a political sense, one people. I could wish that, without obliterating race predilections, there was among us greater unity and love as fellow-Canadians. To that end I have labored in my humble way; and not long since, when defending those of another race and creed than mine against what I believed to be unjust aspersions, I pointed out the true path of duty in a community of divers races and creeds like ours; where we must combine firmness in the assertion of our own rights with fulness in the recognition of the right of others, we must cultivate moderation and forbearance, we must hold to the ample acknowledgement of each man's individual right of conscience in religious matters, and to the common citizenship of all in civil affairs if we would make of Canada a great and free country inhabited by a happy and united people. (Cheers.).

RACE AND RELIGIOUS FEELINGS,

however, exist, and will have their effect. It is natural that those of us who are of one Province or of one blood should feel more warmly than the rest in the cause of men of our own Province or origin. Blood is thicker than water.

The condition I affix is this, that they should found their appeal on the great principles of justice, mercy, and policy applicable to all alike, and should demand no special favours by reason of Province, race, or creed.

Those of us who belong to other races or Provinces have our duty too,—to make ample allowance for warmth of utterance and hasty phrase; to calm rather than to excite race prejudice; and to decide on broad and general, just and generous views, such as we would wish applied to ourselves. Let us do unto others as we would they should do unto us. (Cheers.)

RACE AND CREED IN POLITICS.

As to the union for political purposes of one race or creed, irrespective of political principles, I am not now to speak for the first time my mind. In 1871, when expressing the strong views I felt and feel on the subject of the murder of Scott, I deprecated any attempt to decide the question on the ground of nationality or religion. In 1877, when protesting against some ill-advised pretensions, on the subject of undue influence, I declared that I should struggle to persevere, so far as my feeble powers might permit, to each one of my fellow-countrymen, whatever his creed, the same full and ample measure of civil freedom which he now enjoys under those laws which enable him and me, though we may be of diverse faiths, to meet on the same platform, and to differ or agree according to our own political convictions and not according to our religious faith, or the dictation of any other man lay or clerical. (Cheers.) And during the last few years I have more than once warned my fellow-countrymen of an insidious attempt which has been made to effect a so-called political union of all the Frenchmen throughout Canada in the interests of

THE QUEBEC TORY LEADERS.

I have pointed out that this was an unpatriotic step, fraught with danger to the Dominion, and with special danger to those who, being the minority, were asked to work together as a unit, apart from questions of opinion. But no encouragement was given by the Tories of the other provinces to these views. It was all right for Messrs. Langevin & Co. to counsel such a union, substantially in the Tory interest. But when there is a breach in the Quebec Tory ranks the cry of danger to the State at once fills the air! (Laughter.) A united French population, united in the Tory interest, would be a public blessing! (Laughter.) A more equally divided French population, since it would weaken the Tory interest, is a public danger! (Loud laughter.) I say a more equally divided French population, for it is not my judgment that the French Canadians are a unit on this question (Hear.) For the same base party purpose of promoting race prejudice, and giving ground for the cry of English against French, they are so represented by the Ministerial press. But I believe this to be but a dodge, and that there is amongst them, as among the other races, some division of opinion. So may it be. Let us unite and divide, I say once more, on grounds of reason, argument and opinion and not of race or creed. (Cheers.)

THE COMING DEBATE IN PARLIAMENT.

I hope and trust that, the excitement having somewhat abated, the further discussion in the press and among the people may be more tranquil, that rash and hasty language may be avoided and that when we meet in Parliament we may engage in debate in a temper and after a fashion suitable to our national dignity and regardful of our national unity. (Hear.)

Now, on what lines are we to deal with this question in Parliament. Those of us who have not engaged in the preliminary discussion—who are free and unfettered, to whom it is open, unembarrassed by any prior and premature declarations, to reach unbiased conclusions—have, I conceive, very special duties.

We are to help to obtain information on all points now obscure; we are to listen to the arguments of those who have taken sides; we are to consider of the whole case when presented; and we are to strive for the formation of a just and statesmanlike judgment by the House of Commons. (Hear.)

We must endeavor to eliminate, as factors in the decision, race and creed, and cause the Commons of Canada to speak with a voice and in a sense which posterity, after these heats have cooled and these mists have cleared, shall ratify and confirm. (Hear.)

NOT A PARTY QUESTION.

I believe we cannot if we would, make of this a party question. (Hear.) After full reflection, I do not entertain that desire; but were it otherwise I doubt that the result could be accomplished. I exercise no compulsive or constraining force over the opinions of the Liberal party on this or any other question; and I entertain the impression that with us, as with the Tories, there are differences of opinion in the ranks not likely to be composed, and which I, at any rate, shall make no endeavor to control to a party end. For after all, though at first blush one may regret party divisions, yet am I glad in this case of this condition.

For the reasons I have given, I do not desire a party conflict on the Regina tragedy; I do not propose to construct a political platform out of the Regina scaffold; or to create or cement party ties with the blood of the condemned. To apply words I have already quoted elsewhere, in another sense, I do not care

"To attempt the Future's portals with the Past's blood-rusted key."

(Cheers.) Now, as you know, I have been absent from Canada for some months; but since my return, I have read with care such papers as I could find. While these have produced impressions on my mind on the material issues, I have been clearly led to the conclusion that on some points is not before us. (Hear.) I think we require an authentic copy of the evidence and proceedings at the trial, and also of the papers found at Batoche, the production or which was refused by Government, but which Parliament should see, the rather that a Minister has lately made public one of these papers of great importance as affecting Riel's position, and tending to contradict the allegation that he had himself procured the invitation to come into the Northwest. (Hear.) I think we require explanations as to why, if it was intended to execute the sentence, Riel was not put on trial for murder instead of for high treason. (Hear.) Was it because it was thought inconsistent with General Middleton's letter to try him for anything save for a political offence? (Hear.) And it is proper also that we should know more of the circumstances connected with that letter so as to judge of the weight to be attached to it. (Hear.)

THE INFORMATION REQUIRED FOR A JUST JUDGMENT

What is a Monopoly?

The word monopoly is associated in the mind with the legal and artificial monopolies of the last three centuries. Such, for instance, as the Dutch East India Company, which, having the entire product of the Spice Islands, would destroy a portion of the crop rather than lower the price by bringing the whole to market. The workings of all these old monopolies were opposed to the public good, as they were operated in the maintenance of high prices. In England, under the successors of Henry VIII, they had become so numerous and grievous, that by act of James I, all monopolies were abolished excepting the right to patents. To this has since been added, in England and America, the government monopoly of the postal service.

Yet, all railroads are monopolies in a certain sense and to a certain extent; that is to say, they are without practical competition between certain points. The use of the word monopoly, however, as applied to railroads, should be qualified by the word natural. Natural monopolies are such because, under the free and equal operation of the laws of nature and of the nation, they monopolize the business by doing it more satisfactorily, more economically, and more expeditiously, than it can be done by any other means. Insomuch as they fail in this, they are not monopolies. There should not, then, be associated with the idea of natural monopolies the old and well-grounded hatred that existed against legal monopolies. The latter, under the operation of special laws, were operated for the benefit of the few; the former, under the operation of general laws, are operated for the greatest good of the greatest number. There seems no better illustration of the change which has taken place in the meaning of this term in the popular mind than its present application to free competing corporations; and that one, among the prominent measures of reform proposed by the "anti-monopolists," is the absolute destruction of all competition through the operation of the entire railroad system of the country by a great government monopoly.

Combination and consolidation being the spirit of monopoly, are supposed, in the public mind, to be opposed to the common good. But they contain the actual substance of natural monopoly, which is such from its merits and benefits, and not from privilege.—Gerrit L. Lansing, in Popular Science Monthly.

An employe on his rounds put some new carbons into an electric lamp on the Bowery and stood on his ladder looking at a crack in the globe. A man who was unsteady on the legs halted at the foot of the ladder, felt in all his pockets, found a match, held it up toward the other man and said: "Here y'are." "Here y'are what?" inquired the carbon man. "Ainsh goin' to light 'er up?" said the other.—New York Sun.

A fun-loving farmer's daughter not a thousand miles from Boston decorated a bush in the front yard with white egg shells adroitly fixed on the ends of the branches. Result: Pleasure drivers from a neighboring hotel would first gaze, then halt and often alight for a closer inspection of the curious plant, which they would describe to their fellow sojourners, who would be sold in their turn on their next drive.—Boston Bulletin.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on its merits. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $120 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

VALEDICTORY!

Good-bye! Good-bye, old year!

Another milestone has slipped behind us.

Another leaf in the Book of Life has closed forever.

The past is able to take care of itself. The future is in our own hands and may be what we chose to make of it.

We have again reached the Merchants' reckoning season, or stock-taking time, when we purpose balancing accounts and bringing all things into line for opening a new year.

Previous to our taking stock we will Clear Out all our winter goods at Cost, and will try to carry over as little as possible into another season.

During this month we will make an extra effort to close out the small balance of Winter Goods to make room for New Spring Goods, expected in early in February.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

St. Luke's Entertainment.

On Monday evening an exceptionally excellent entertainment will be given in St. Luke's school-room, Ashburnham. A programme of unusual excellence has been prepared, comprising the very best local talent of the town and village, and the entertainment promises to surpass any of the excellent entertainments St. Luke's is noted for providing.

Prof. Dorenwend at Phelan's hotel, on Monday and Tuesday, January 18th and 19th.

Weather Changes.

The following weather notes are supplied by Mr. Geo. A. Schofield, druggist:—

	Thermometer.	Barometer.
9 o'clock	18	29.20
1 "	33	29.10
3 "	35	29.05

Try the "Ten Cent" Store for fine plush articles for Holiday Presents. Toys and fancy goods by the car load.

Market Notes.

There was a good market this morning. Offerings were plentiful and the demand was lively. There is very little change in prices. Quotations are: Butter, in prints, 18c. to 20c.; firkin butter, 10c. to 13c.; eggs, 18c. to 20c.; chickens, 25c. to 45c. per pair; geese, 60c. to 75c.; turkeys, 70c. to 90c.; beef per cwt., $4.00 to $5.50; pork, $5.00 to $5.50; mutton, 5c. to 6c. per lb.; hay, $14 per ton; hard wood, $3.25 to $4.00 per cord.

For the Holidays.

Messrs. Foot & McWhinnie have in stock for the Xmas trade, a very fine line of slippers of all kinds, specially suited for presents, and at prices much below the ordinary. Call in and see the stock, it is really handsome and cannot be surpassed in town. In every department they carry full lines, but make a specialty of fine hand-sewed work for ladies and gentlemen.

Prof. Dorenwend with hair goods of every description, at Phelan's hotel for two days only, Monday and Tuesday, January 18th and 19th.

Always Awake.

Mr. D C. McDonald has been instructed by the Town Council to communicate with Kerr & Co., of Paisley, Scotland, Spool and Cotton Manufacturing Co., who are desirous of establishing a factory in Canada, with a view of ascertaining what inducements they would require to establish their business in Peterborough. Kingston and Ottawa are doing all in their power to get the factory. Ottawa offers $10,000 of a bonus, while Kingston offers a free site and exemption from taxation. Kington is preferred. The Council are of opinion that Peterborough is a more suitable place than Kingston, and can offer better inducements. The factory would employ about 500 girls, besides men and boys, and would be a desirable addition to the industries of the town.

Call and see the immense stock of new and fashionable Bangs, Waves, Wigs, etc. of Prof. Dorenwend's, at Phelan's hotel, on January 18th and 19th.

A Brakeman Killed at Havelock.

A sad and fatal accident occured at Havelock this morning, a brakeman named Sampson being run over by an engine and six cars, while shunting at that place. It appears that he was in the act of stepping from a timber car to a box car, when he slipped and fell between the cars to the rails below, the train passing over him killing him instantly. His mangled remains were taken to his father's home near Havelock. He is well and favorably know in the village.

Another Lead for Lindsay.

The Peterborough curlers who went to Lindsay to claim the Ontario tankard match from the Cobourg men, played a lively game with two rinks of the Lindsay club and were defeated. The following are the rinks and the scores made:

At the Opera House.

Last night was Annie Bird's benefit at the Opera House. The house was crowded and the plays presented were in keeping with the excellent performances given by Day's International Theatre Co. The laughable farce, "Cool as a cucumber," was given first. This was followed by "Andy Blake," in which little Annie Bird impersonated Andy, a mischievous Irish boy, captivating the audience with her usual success, and received continuous applause. Mr. Wilson Day, as Ignatius Mulrooney, the Irish school master was very amusing. The company gave this afternoon at matinee, "Paris by Gaslight" with special scenery. "Ticket of Leave Man," one of the company's most successful plays, will be presented to-night.

What They are Saying.

I do not propose to make a Reform platform out of the Regina scaffold.—Hon. Edward Blake.

If things had been different Mr. Blake's speech would have been different.—Toronto Mail.

Morituri salutamus.—The dying (civic) gladiators.

We give and bequeath our successors a clean slate and the Paisley Spool and Cotton Works.—The Council of 1885.

It will be a big thing for the town and we will do our best to secure it.—The new Council.

The friends of the brakesman killed at Havelock won't get any damages. I destroyed the Ontario law protecting the lives and limbs of poor railway employees.—Sir. John Macdonald.

Mayor Cox did nobly for two years. He worked in the interests of the town, and spent his money so that the people got the benefit of it.—Mr. Cahill's resolution.

I will continue to work for the town as I have done in the past.—Mayor Cox.

There is more money spent in charity in the high-toned ward—No. 2—than in any other ward in town.—Councillor McNaughton.

I'll give charity wood gratis this year.—Mayor-elect Stevenson.

Personal.

H. H. Burnham, Esq., of Port Hope, is in town to-day arranging for a large sale of valuable property in the village of Keene, including his grist, saw and shingle mill.

Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, Rector of St. Luke's, has returned home after a week's absence on Missionary work, and will conduct the services as usual to-morrow.

A Dexter, Maine, paper states that Mr. James Bathgate, the popular superintendent of the Cascade Woolen Mills, Oakland, was on Christmas presented by the employes with a very handsome sleigh robe and whip. Mr Bathgate is a son-in-law of Mr. Geo. Turner, Lakefield, was formerly employed in the Auburn Woolen Mills and was well known in town.

Mr. H. S. Kirby, lately with the firm of Christie & Co., druggists, of Ottawa, has accepted the situation of assistant in the shop of Mr. John McKee, George street, Peterborough. Mr. Kirby is a competent man and comes well recommended. Parties trusting their orders to him may rely on having them satisfactorily filled. Mr. Kirby passed very creditably at the recent examinations of the Ontario College of Pharmacy, and is a full-fledged druggist.

Coasting Nuisance.

A subscriber suggests that the police take steps to put a stop to the practice of coasting down High School Hill. Passengers who use the St. Paul's church crossing at the foot of the hill, are in constant danger of serious injuries from the sleighs of the thoughtless lads that bestride them.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The next inter-Provincial convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations is to be held at Hamilton on February 18th to 21st. The local Association will probably send a number of delegates. The Rev A. H. Munro has accepted an invitation to address the convention. All young men will be cordially welcomed at the young men's meeting to-night. The song service on Sunday night at 8.30 o'clock, continues to prove of interest. It does not generally exceed three-quarters of an hour in length.

The Sons of Toil.

Items of Interest to Working Men.

TORONTO.

The bricklayers' union met last Wednesday evening in Dufferin Hall, there being a large attendance. After disposing of general business, a resolution was adopted reducing the hours of labor to nine hours per day and five on Saturday during the summer months.

At the last meeting of the barbers' assembly of the Knights of Labor a resolution to do away with Sunday labor was defeated.

At the regular meeting of the builders' laborers' union on Tuesday evening last, the agreement entered into between their committee and that representing the builders, both of which were empowered to decide as to the rate of wages to be paid was indorsed by the union. The terms are that the rate shall not be less than $1.70 per day, and that, should the bricklayers' wages be advanced during the year, the laborers' wages to be advanced in the ratio of 60 per cent. of the bricklayers' wages. These terms will remain in force until March, 1887, and in the event of a change by either contracting party notice must be given.

GENERAL.

Four hundred Cuban cigarmakers, employed by Lexano, Pendes & Co., New York, are striking because, as they claim, the shop is not kept clean and well ventilated.

John Ennis, the newly-appointed fire commissioner of Brooklyn, is a shoe manufacturer, and very friendly to labor unionists.

The principal cigar factory in Springfield, Mass., has been closed and will be until the dispute about the recent reductions is over.

What is regarded as the beginning of a general strike of the cutlery makers of the Eastern States has cropped up in Shelton, Conn., where the Shelton Silverplate company's hands have demanded an advance of 10 per cent. They are well organized.

The twentieth annual convention of the bricklayers' and Masons' international union opened in St. Louis last Monday. There are eighty-seven different bodies and representing a total membership of 15,000 craftsmen.

The Knights of Labor in Lynn, Mass., are thinking of forcing liquor dealers to close up four nights a week and on Sunday.

Three thousand men who demanded an increase of pay at the Thompson steel works, Braddock, Pa., are locked out.

The brassworkers' union, New York, is working in unity with the plumbers, steam and gas fitters, and it will join the Central labor union Sunday.

The glove manufacturers of Gloversville, N. Y., have offered the Knights of Labor in their employ higher wages than paid now and asked them to resume work.

The building trades in Philadelphia are still favored with fine weather, and consequently work is going on. Shoe-making is dull.

The boycott against the Hascall & Grenshaw company, Richmond, Va., for using flour barrels made by convict labor has been raised. The Knights of Labor made a manly fight and won a complete victory, getting in the terms of settlement everything they had been contending for.

The carpenters of St. Paul report trade at present slack.

The typographical union of St. Paul gained the strike at the West publishing company's office.

The boycott which has been going on against the clothing firm of J. Kaufmann & Bros., Pittsburg, for the past five months has been raised. The firm publicly apologize and pay all the expenses of the boycott. This is another great victory for organized labor.

The contract for the state printing of New York has at last, by political action, been taken from the old establishment "rat" firm of Weed, Parson & Co., Albany. This has been a long, hard fight, but the Albany union, with the assistance of other labor bodies, has secured a grand victory. Hereafter the printing will be done in a union office.

General B. F. Butler has obeyed the boycotting of the Filth annual hotel, New York, and will not put up there until the trouble is adjusted, though he has been a frequent guest there for thirty-six years.

A co-operative stove foundry has been started at Atcheson, Kas., and a co-operative plaining mill is now proposed.

The Saturday evening Post, of Grand Rapids, has succumbed to the boycott. It has changed hands, and hereafter will employ union men, pay union wages, and conduct a fair office.

The Central labor league, of New Britain, Conn., ask all iron-moulders to keep away from that place, as there is a strike at P. & F. Corbin's foundry. The firm are black-listing the Knights of Labor.

General Master Workman Powderly was interviewed on Monday in Cincinnati on the labor problem. He said among other things: "Times are a little hard. A better feeling is coming about between worker and employer. There will be a better understanding between them. Each side will make concessions and there will be less bitterness. I find men who are cranky and unreasonable, both on the side of the employer and employe, are men who seldom read newspapers. If every laborer and employer would read a good paper and keep posted on the topics of the times I feel certain there would be less trouble."

Out of the 6,000 or 8,000 miners who struck in the Monongahela valley but few went back, nearly 5,000 having gone to the western coal mines; consequently the operators have not enough men to fill their orders.

The two Pittsfield (Mass.) shoe factories, operated by C. B. Lancaster & Co., of Boston, have been shut down on account of labor troubles, and 450 hands are out of employment.

Universally acknowledged to be the finest 10c cigar manufactured. Don't be persuaded to take other brands. No chemicals or artificial flavoring used.

Fluid Lightning is simply a marvellous Rheumatic Remedy. I was for two months a cripple, unable to get out of the house from Sciatica. One bottle gave me instant relief, and placed me on my feet again. I have driven fourteen miles to day (something I could not possibly have done were it not for Fluid Lightning) for the express purpose of procuring another bottle. So says Wm. Dixon, Gananoque. Only 25 cents per bottle at J. McKee's. dleodwl Smoker's?

Beware of cigars artificially flavored for the purpose of hiding the poor quality of tobacco used in flavored cigars. Insist upon having the old reliable brands—"Cable" and "El Padre."

Years of experience and successful trial have proved McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate the most complete and satisfactory compound for healing Old Sores, Festerings, Ulcers, Cuts, Wounds, Burns, Frost Bites or Felons, and for keeping out the cold and to cleanse or prevent prond flesh, sloughing or decay. Insist on having McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate, sold at 25c. by J. McKee, Druggist. dleodwl

I had for years been a miserable sufferer from Dyspepsia, and tried all known remedies and the best medical skill of my acquaintances, but still grew worse, until unable to eat anything without great sufferfng, or do any kind of work. I began to think there was no hope for me, and that I must surely die; when, like a drowning man catching at a straw, I determined to give McGregor's Speedy Cure a trial. I at once began to improve so rapidly that in two months I was as well as I had ever been in my life.—Wm. Evers, Leamington. Sold by John McKee, Druggist. Free trial bottles. dleodwl

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

TO DEPOSITORS—Deposits are received by this Company both on current account and for periods of one year or longer. The rate of interest paid on amounts deposited on current account and which may be withdrawn by check in such sums as the depositor may from time to time require, is FOUR per cent., either paid or compounded half-yearly, and the rate on yearly deposits is FIVE per cent.

TO INVESTORS—The five and ten year FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES of this Company which are issued in denominations of $100, $200, $400 and $1000 each, transferable by endorsement, with half-yearly interest Coupons attached, payable at the head Office of the Company in Peterborough, or at any Branch of the Bank of Toronto in Canada, afford a safe and convenient mode of investment.

The funds of the Company being invested in first mortgages on Real Estate, no better security can be offered to depositors or debenture holders, they having a first claim or mortgage on the whole Assets of the Company, the shareholders having the second. The annual statement shows that the amount so invested was over $300,000, and on the security of real estate at least double that value.

By the laws of Ontario, Trustees, Executors and Administrators may deposit Trust Funds of the estates which they control in this Company, and are free from all further liability, a privilege of which many have largely availed themselves.

TO BORROWERS—Money is obtainable from this Company on approved Real Estate security at the Lowest Current Rates of Interest.

The Mortgage may be repaid by yearly instalments, or otherwise as may be agreed upon, the interest ceasing at once on all amounts paid on account of the sum borrowed.

Applications may be made either to the Head Office, or to any of the Agents.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

THE REAL CULPRITS.

Amid a sterile desert of corrupt misgovernment and wasteful extravagance, the only oasis the subsidized journals can point to in the administration of the present Dominion Government, is the hanging of Riel. The permitting by the Government, of the law to take it course, is claimed as a grand act on the part of the Government. In regarding any act it is necessary to inquire into the motives. If the Government carried the death sentence on Riel into execution from a sense of duty, the Government deserves credit; but if Riel was hanged so that the guilt of the Government in negatively inciting the Rebellion might be covered, then the act is not so meritorious a one. It will be remembered that Hon. Mr. Blake, in Parliament, accused the Government, by its neglect, misrule and bad management, with the responsibility of creating the insurrection. The Government, instead of pleading to this charge, in order to divert public attention from a contemplation of its guilt, took such an accusation as a defence of Riel, and they have shaped their policy on this assumption. Unless the leader of the rebellion were punished to the fullest extent of the law, the attention of the public would be directed to the guilt of the Government, so the latter sheltered itself behind Riel and it has fondly imagined that, in hanging Riel, for whose rebellion the Government was responsible, it was exonerated from the burden of guilt. The question of justice in dealing with Riel, was not involved, it was only the safe course to pursue in relation to the interests of the government, that was considered. Riel was not hanged because he was worthy of such a punishment, though that was the excuse of the government, but the motive back of all was the desire of the government to shield itself. If the effect of the government's mismanagement of the North-west matters were removed, it was argued the people would be content without investigating the cause of the North-west Rebellion. If Riel were executed, the government might be saved. But such a hope is doomed to disappointment. Justice has been done upon the figure-head of the rebellion, the trial of the accomplices is yet to take place. The guilty ministers must not escape because they "split" on Riel, and secured his condemnation and death. It would'nt do to imprison the burglar who commited the deed, and permit the rest of the gang which planned the robbery and were practically responsible, escape without punishment.

Fraserville.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The tea and concert in connection with the Methodist Church here was a success. The ladies of this appointment have no superiors in the line of providing for the hungry—eatables provided for over 300. We believe we are stating that which is true when we say the concerts given on Christmas night and the following Monday were the best ever given in this vicinity. The order was excellent on both occasions. Should the people here have another concert, which we believe they purpose having ere long, they will have no trouble in securing a full house. Those who took part in the concert are as follows: Rev. D. N. McCamus, Rev. M. E. Wilson, Miss Winslow, Miss Soden, Miss Smyth, Mrs. Lightfoot, Mrs. Lackie, Miss Hutchings, Miss Finlay and Messrs. G. W. McCall, Finlay, Soden, Lackie, Strike, also the choir of this church.

On the following Wednesday a concert was given under the auspices of Cedar Valley Sabbath School. An excellent programme was provided and everything passed off successfully.

Mr. Albert Goodfellow's store is about completed. His first order for goods was attended too promptly, and ere he expected it it was here. We hear he is going to sell as low as the merchants of Springville or Centreville. His many friends wish him success.

According to reports, we learn that Mr. Alex. Lackie applied for the position of Postmaster, recently vacated by Mr. A. Stewart, and obtained it and he intends opening out a general store in connection with post-office about the 1st of February. We believe both stores will be convenient to the Grand Trunk depot. As Mr. Lackie, is a popular young man his admirers think a good business may be worked up by him.

Several of the leading farmers of this locality have been unfortunate in the sheep line. No less than seven or eight killed and twice as many badly wounded in a few nights. Sharpshooters are on the alert to drop the dog guilty of such crimes, at first opportunity, so if you want to save your dog keep him at home.

Rev. B. Greatrix and Mrs. Greatrix left our village for a few weeks to visit friends in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Stewart spent their Christmas with Mr. R. Campbell, of Collingwood, R. Campbell, formerly of Springville, being Mr. Stewart's brother-in-law.

WHAT THE PEOPLE SAY.

Don't know how two merchants are going to accumulate wealth in Fraserville.

That dogs that kill sheep ought to be slain.

That Mr. R. Stewart owns the best imported general purpose horse in this district.

That our merchants are going to sell below cost for a while.

That Mr. Alex. Brown performed a lasting job in the bridge line.

That a few of our aged bachelors are soon to take unto themselves a partner to console their later days.

That the Presbyterians of Springville purpose having a social and concert some time in February.

That the Methodists of Fraserville intend giving a grand concert, etc., ere long.

Eight Thousand Dollars Worth of Libel.

On Saturday in Toronto, at the Assize Court, the jury in the case of Warden Massie of the Central Prison, vs. the Toronto Printing Company, (Patrick Boyle, Irish Canadian) returned a verdict of $8,000 damages with full costs, for plaintiff; The libel consisted in criticisms on Warden Massie's management of the Central Prison.

Home Rule.

The All-Absorbing Topic in British Politics To-day.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The Times recognizes that the Irish question must receive the immediate attention of the new Parliament. In a spirited leading article it urges the necessity of the Conservative party at once facing the issue. It says the Conservatives cannot shirk or postpone their action. If they attempt to remain in office without making a vigorous effort to grapple with the Irish difficulty, it will result in their prompt and unequivocal condemnation. Universal scorn will be their portion if they give their opponents a chance to overthrow them without staking their existence on a bold defence of the union. Such a course would be worse than a blunder. It would be a crime. The Government would not hesitate to challenge the verdict of the House of Commons. On the question of Home Rule, it cannot be doubted that they would obtain an immense majority in favor of maintaining the integrity of the Empire.

The "Frozen" United States.

Our Yankee cousins are fond of alluding to this country as "Frozen Canada," but the record appended below discounts the cold dip's performance in this country.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 19.—A report has reached here from Benkelman, Neb., that two settlers named Foher and Burns, who left there a week ago on a hunting trip, were found frozen to death eight miles from that town. They attempted to return home after the blizzard came up, but were lost in the blinding snow. Foher had stuck the muzzle of his gun in the ground and laid down near it and died. Burns got 200 yards further on before he was overcome. Both were under large drifts of snow. A teamster and herder were found frozen near the same place yesterday. Colorado reports several persons frozen in the same storm. They are supposed to have been homesteaders living long distances apart who settled on land last fall, and were wholly unprepared for severe weather. Never in the history of the west have so many persons perished from cold as during this storm.

TOPEKA, Ks. Jan. 16.—Reports have been received of the finding of the bodies of three more in a southwestern portion of the State, victims of the recent storm. This makes 24 bodies in all that have been found.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Jan. 16.—Emily Barmore, a respectable colored woman, and two children have been found frozen to death in Broadway township.—[Charlestown is about 900 miles south of Peterborough.]

PITTSBURG, Va. Jan. 10.—Henry Jones, Thos. Johnston and Richard Brown, living in Dinwiddie township, attended a dance on Thursday night. While returning home they became benumbed with the cold and sought shelter in a stable. They were found there frozen to death.

A party in Montreal has sent Mr. Torranti a few dollars "Conscience money," stating that it was "for a sheet of stamps stolen five years ago." The recipient attributes the restitution to Moody's evangelistic work.

Buried Alive.

WOODSTOCK, Jan. 15.—A girl named Collins died, as was supposed, in Woodstock last year very suddenly while on her way to school. A day or two since the body was exhumed to be removed to another burial place, when the horrible discovery was made that the poor girl had been buried alive. The shroud had been torn to shreds, the knees of the body were drawn up to the chin one of the arms was twisted under the head, and the features bore evidence of dreadful torture.

AS TO THE TRIAL ITSELF,

Hon. Mr. Blake continued, it must be confessed that the arrangements for the administration of justice, originally of necessity rude and primitive, had become by time less applicable to the circumstances of the country; and were not well suited to the trial of such a case as Riel's. (Hear.) The independence of the judiciary and its high standing in fact and in public estimation are of the first importance; and in a political case, in which the Government has taken sides, this is brought home to the meanest comprehension. But the judges of the Northwest hold office, not like the superior judges of the older Provinces during good behavior, but at the pleasure of the Government, on which they are thus in some sort dependent. (Hear.) Besides, they are also political personages as members of the Northwest Council, and thus less fitted for political trials. (Hear.) I regret that the course of legislation has been rather in the direction of reducing than of increasing the securities in these cases. By the Act of 1880 the presence of two magistrates besides the stipendiary in capital cases, theretofore necessary, was dispensed with, one only being made sufficient.

But I do not see that the Government is censurable for having tried the prisoner before the tribunal provided by the standing laws, though I may regret that those laws did not provide a more satisfactory tribunal. And it is always to be remembered that the special provision requiring the decision of the Executive before execution, and the attendant responsibility of Government, have been retained. (Hear.)

The choice of the judge is another matter. If I rightly understand, Mr. Richardson, besides being a magistrate and a member of the North-west Council, was the paid legal adviser, the political law officer, so to speak, of the Executive of the North-West; and I think explanations are required of such a choice for such a trial. (Hear.)

Something I had intended to say as to the panel; but, on reflection, in the absence of knowledge on a material point, I think it better not to suggest in this respect a hypothetical criticism, and therefore I abstain.

I think it right to say that, in my opinion, Government acted in a very proper spirit in providing for the attendance of the prisoner's witnesses; and that, from what I know of their leading counsel, I should think it impossible that in their management of the case there was anything unfair to the prisoner, or derogatory to the high character they deservedly enjoy, or the responsible duties they undertook to perform. (Hear.)

I am not implying, then, any present doubt as to the justice of the trial. For all my enquiries, it may have been perfectly just. Besides justice in fact, the creation of a feeling of public confidence, or a general impression that all was fair, and that every security was taken for fairness, is important, and in that view of the duties of the authorities I think these questions should be examined. (Hear.)

THE WITHHELD AND SUPPRESSED DOCUMENTS WANTED.

Again, we should have before us all the withheld and suppressed documents as to the neglect, delay and mismanagement of the Government; not, I repeat, as justifying rebellion, but as added proof that Government gave the occasion an opportunity to raise rebellion by means of the feelings evoked and the materials and chances afforded through their misconduct. (Hear.)

Look at Bishop Grandin's letters, lately published. Look at Col. Houghton's report, still suppressed. Look at the mass of papers still confessedly withheld. (Hear.)

The Government, in its Memorandum, says that it will not now enter into this part of the case – it is reserved for Parliament. Be it so; the issue is then deferred. But we must have the evidence. And these papers may have an important bearing on the propriety of the decision, and on the question whether those were the men who should have reached that decision.

I think we should have the evidence on which Government has charged the whites of Prince Albert of being guilty—more guilty than the Metis. If so, they should be exposed. Indians and Halfbreeds should not bear the brunt while guiltier whites go free; and the relation of these whites to Riel may have a serious bearing on his case. (Hear.)

We should have further information as to Riel's demands for money. As Government states the case, his attitude was base and venal; and a strong impression has naturally been produced. But the statement is involved in contradictions, for I find in the Memorandum the following extract from the evidence:

He (Riel) said also that if he got the money he would go to the United States and start a paper, and raise the other nationalities in the States. He said, "Before the grass is that high in this country you will see foreign armies in this country." He said, "I will commence by destroying Manitoba, and then I will come and destroy the North-west and take possession of the North-west."

Now, however wicked, absurd, or indicative of a disordered mind may have been these words addressed to the man he was soliciting, they are inconsistent with venality. More light is wanted here. (Hear.)

OTHER PARTS OF THE CASE.

I now come to some of the most interesting parts of the case. The question of Riel's mental condition is one to which I am at present disposed to attach greater importance than, as I judge, does the general public, (Hear.) But I think all will agree that we are clearly entitled to have before us, besides the papers, the instructions to and reports of the so-called Medical Commission, which is referred to by the Government. You will remember the conflicting rumours as to the character and results of the enquiry. Though there is much on which we can and ought to reach conclusions independent of the medical testimony, yet this is a part of the case without which we should not decide. (Hear.)

I think also that we should have a statement of the grounds on which Government decided against the recommendation to mercy a course which may have been perfectly correct, but which ought to be explained. (Hear.) And here I may say that I regret that we do not know the grounds of that recommendation.

We should also learn something of the reasons for the last respite, of which several accounts have been given, one of an extraordinary nature. (Hear.)

Fuller information seems to be required as to the ground on which Government thought the execution necessary as a deterrent. (Hear.)

Warm supporters of the Government have alleged that it shamefully betrayed and deceived them. We want the evidence of this. (Hear.) They also allege that Government acted to gratify the thirst for vengeance, in respect of the Scott murder, of one section of the supporters of Government, and on a cold-blooded calculation of political gains and losses in the counties, rather than on general considerations of public justice, mercy and policy. On this grave charge we want light. (Hear.)

A SUSPENDED FINAL JUDGMENT.

I will go no further. I have come to the conclusion that on this complicated case, where each of several branches may affect the general result, it is fitting that the materials for decision on every branch should be available before finally forming and announcing a general judgment; and, therefore, much as I should have personally wished to communicate to you my individual impressions, I believe I shall best discharge my duty, which, as you will have seen, I consider to be as much judicial as political, by abstaining from the expression of opinions which would be at best but partial, prima facie, hypothetical, and subject to correction and review. (Hear.)

It is with all the facts and arguments before us, and in the presence of the Government whose action has been assailed, and of their accusers, that our deliverance may best be made. (Hear.)

To some partisans on either side, who think nothing is to be said on the other, my view that we should have more light, may be, will be, unsatisfactory. But those who are willing to seek for the light and, casting aside all prejudice, to strive for just conclusions, will, I hope, recognize its propriety. (Hear.)

THE OUTLOOK AHEAD.

Much has been said about political alliances and compacts in this connection. I know of none. To none am I a party, I have had no communication, direct or indirect, with any one outside of my own party. I have never wished for office. On the contrary, I dislike it; nor was there ever a time at which it presented, in my view, so little to attract, so much to deter. Beyond this, I believe it to be, from a mere party point of view, the interest of the Liberal party, that the present Government should remain in officer for a little longer, till the public have seen still more clearly the results of their past policy; results which, if developed in our region, would be, as in the past times, attributed to us and not to their real authors. (Hear.) But were all this otherwise I believe that can be formed only on a general understanding on the substantial questions calling for legislative and administrative action, and that it would be equally impossible and undesirable to form one based on community of feeling, did that exist, with regard to an execution. (Hear.) Nor have I reason to believe that on that or any other question the Government, though weakened, will be defeated this session. For the purpose of forwarding their design to the Ministerial organs here have proclaimed their defeat. But the organs do not play the same tune in Quebec. It is only a dodge. The Government would doubtless like to make this an issue—nay the issue—before the English-speaking populations. They would like it because they know the long calendar of their crimes. But the criminals shall not be allowed to choose the matter for which they are to be tried or to frame their own indictment. (Loud cheers.) For our part we, too, know the catalogue of their offences; we know the counts of the indictment; and it is our purpose, apart altogether from this question of the man who is dead, to deal with the men who are yet politically alive, and who, for innumerable political offences, deserve a political death as sure, as swift, as stern as that which has at any time heretofore been meted out to those in like case offending. (Cheers.)

A STABLE POLITICAL ALLIANCE

FORM AN ANTI-FRENCH PARTY

ACCESSIONS TO THE LIBERAL RANKS.

I believe that in Quebec and elsewhere, in and outside of Parliament, there has been a growing feeling of uneasiness at the Tory policy; that it is being recognized more and more as a dreadful failure; that its features of taxation, restriction, extravagance, corruption, jobbery, neglect and centralization have made for it many opponents; that the Government are sinking in public estimation; that the people are beginning to perceive the wisdom of our counsels, the folly of our opponents'; that our labors of these many years are at length bearing fruit; that the Government will be weaker this session, and weaker still thereafter, and will, if we do our full duty, be defeated at the polls. (Loud cheers.)

As, in my electoral contests, I have made no private canvass, but have depended on my public utterances, so, as a political leader, my hopes of gaining strength for my party have rested only on our public speeches, on the policy we have propounded, the principles we have maintained. (Cheers.) I have for some time believed that several supporters of the Government have been dissatisfied—have felt that they were, on the questions of the day and of the immediate future, more in accord with us than with Ministers, and have recognized the expediency of a change. (Hear.) They have seen that our country—which has great and solid natural resources, which even now—thank God!—is showing in some quarters signs of recovery from some of the evils inflicted on it by its rulers; which is inhabited by an intelligent, industrious and progressive people, affording the main element of real prosperity; which requires only just and prudent, fair and statesmanlike government to permit its advance on both the material and the moral planes—runs great risk if the present evil counsels are to endure. (Hear.) Party ties, the bonds of friendship, long habit and association, the consciousness of having borne a part, though reluctantly, in some things now condemned, and other considerations of various kinds have long restrained them, and may restrain them still. But I do not abandon the hope that some will shortly come out from the ranks to which they no longer in heart belong, and co-operate with us frankly in effecting a change in the public counsels. If they do not, we will continue to fight the good fight, with a stout heart, as best we can without them. But if they do, I am sure you will gladly welcome accessions to our forces so obtained. (Cheers.)

COME FORWARD!

Long have we hoped for a harvest from the seed we have been sowing. Sometimes it has been as if the seed had perished. But it may have been dormant only. It may have germinated now. Soon may it ripen and the fields grow white to the harvest. (Cheers.) If I could raise my feeble voice beyond the limits of this hall, and say a word in the ear of my countrymen through Canada at large, I would exhort them to come forward. Come forward you who can cultivate and water, who can help to mature and gather in that harvest! Do your duty to your country! Take up the responsibilities, as you enjoy the privileges of citizenship. Give your time, your energies, your labor to the work! Though the skies may be dark, yet trust we in the Supreme Goodness! We believe our cause is just and true. We believe that truth and justice shall in God's good time prevail. It may be soon; it may be late. His ways are not as our ways, and his unfathomable purposes we may not gauge. But this we know, that in our efforts we are in the line of duty. We hope, indeed, to make our views prevail; but win or lose to-day, we know that we shall receive from the faithful discharges of duty an exceeding great reward—the only reward which is worth attaining, the only reward which is sure at least.

As Mr. Blake concluded his speech, which was listened to throughout with breathless attention, interrupted only by bursts of applause, the whole immense audience rose to their feet and cheered him enthusiastically for several minutes.

Hints to Good Health.

While fully recognizing the value of alcohol and other stimulants under special circumstances, and while admitting that their moderate use is comparatively harmless to health, Dr. Laudet Brunton speaks very forcibly on the subject of intemperance, and points out the evil effects of stimulants upon the health of the persons who cannot be called intemperate, yet who are in constant habit of taking very small quantities of wine, beer or spirit at all hours throughout the day. The following table of comparative mortality is instructive:

A intemperate person's chance of living is:	A temperate person's chance of living is:
At 20—15.6 years.	At 20—44.2 years.
At 30—12.8 years.	At 30—35.5 years.
At 40—11.6 years.	At 40—28.6 years.
At 50—10.8 years.	At 50—21.25 years
At 60— 8.9 years.	At 60—14.285 years.

In these days, when there is so much talk about overwork of the brain, it is not a little encouraging to find an eminent authority stating that for one instance in which the brain is overworked there must be many hundreds or thousands of cases it is not used enough, even for the ordinary conditions of health. And yet, although the brain may suffer from want of exercise, the evils of over-strain—especially in the case of young people—must be fully recognized. Evening preparation of school lessons is not without its dangers; night work often causes sleeplessness and a long train of attendant evils, and contributes largely to the nervousness and debility which are becoming so common among school children, particularly in towns, while it fails in securing advancement at all equal to what might be got from much less strenuous and protracted study earlier in the day. The most arduous mental work required of a child ought to be imposed on it when mind and body are in their prime vigor, between 9 a. m. and noon, and certainly nothing but the lightest work should devolve upon it after 5 p. m. Questions of food, drink and labor naturally lead on to another important health consideration—rest and sleep. It cannot be denied that, as a rule, the largest amount of the best work in life is done by those who can sleep well. Nor to a healthy man is any amount of work—apart from worry and anxiety—injurious when it is followed by a due amount of sound sleep. What is a due amount varies widely in different persons. "This is due in part to the varying degrees of activity of the vital changes. Thus, although these are most active in the young, the young require much sleep, because the rapid rate of repair during that period is met by the rapid rate of waste during the day. Both by day and night the changes are then most active. The aged also require much sleep, because, although there is comparatively little waste during the day, the process of repair is slow also." Harassed brain workers should encourage sound sleep as much as possible if they wish to preserve their health and strength. Late meals should be avoided, and mental work should be put aside at least an hour or two hours before retiring to rest. To sum up the whole matter: How is health to be preserved? By temperate and discriminate use of food and drink; by due exercise of both mind and body, but with the avoidance of worry, and of haste to get wealthy or to acquire all knowledge; by attention to all natural health laws, such as the need for pure air, clothing adapted to climate and the body of the wearer, etc.; and by paying due regard to the necessity of sleep and rest. From such things result "a sound mind in a sound body," and a healthy and vigorous old age, with all the facilities unimpaired.

Snake Fiction.

Rheem, who has charge of the reptile specimens in the Smithsonian Institute, contradicts most of the popular belief as to snakes. Some of the most dreaded have no existence. The hoop snake, which takes the end of its tail in its mouth and rolls over and over, killing everything that it touches with its venom, and the blow snake, the breath of which is deadly, are fictions. As serpents move about they are constantly feeling ahead with the tongue, and the forward thrust and the peculiar forked appearance of this organ has given rise to the false idea that with this the stinging is done. It is generally thought that there are a great number of poisonous snakes. In North America there are but three species—the rattlesnake, the copperhead or moccasin, and the coral. There are about thirty varieties of these species altogether. The copperhead is probably the most dangerous, as it is vicious and never gives warning of any kind before striking. The rattlesnake, though more poisonous than either of the others, will rattle at the approach of anything, and try to get away unless brought to bay. The coral is smaller and is a native of the southern states. The bite is not necessarily fatal, if the proper remedies are used in time, as, on account of its size, the amount of poison is small. When a reptile strikes he throws his whole body forward, and the fangs penetrate the object against which they come. The hinder part of the body remains in position; and none of our snakes are in a habit of reaching more than half their length.

The Model Wife.

Scripture and history and poetry vie with one another sounding the praises of the model wife. The man who is blessed with a companion worthy the name of a model wife can snap his fingers in the faces of all the old bachelors that ever breathed, and give them points each day in every exalted pleasure that makes life worth living. There is no danger of his applying for divorce.

Unfortunately for the married men of this generation the model wives are most all dead. The struggle for existence was too much for them. The ceaseless, silent, self-sacrifice needed to build up a model domestic character could only be met and borne so long as there was a living appreciation of the personal laws of duty that underlie all sorts of ideal existence. The men who appreciated model wives and were in return willing to be model husbands were so few that the good wives—that is, the model wives—grew discouraged and took to their graves or some more

The few model wives that are left are cherished by their husbands beyond even their cigars or their horses. The model wife of the workingman, clerk or business man has some appreciation of the 10,000 little labors, petty cares and annoyances that her husband has to go through each day in his workshop or office. She considers that such worrying cares are a part of the duties by which her husband makes a living for himself, for her and for the children, if there are any. And when the husband comes home from his work, tired, perhaps cross, and hungry and out of sorts, she is always ready to meet him with some quiet and gentle good cheer. Her own person is attractive and restful to him. She always has some pleasant scheme in mind to make his home hours delightful to him, and so makes herself indispensable and a constant joy.

The model wife does not see how many poor and silly and exacting things she can say to her tired husband. If she has anything to ask she waits until he is rested and fed. She invites pleasant people to her home, not to show how many rich things she has, but to make her husband's home hours pass cheerfully. She knows that if she is half a woman no other can displace her in her husband's affections. She is always more attractive in her manners to her husband than to other men. She is the genius of the household. But, unfortunately, most of them are dead. —Philadelphia Times.

Happiness and unhappiness are merely relative states after all. The kitchen-girl feels awfully cut up on being snubbed by the saleslady; but her sorrow is immediately turned to joy upon seeing the saleslady snubbed by the daughter of the retired saloon keeper. —Boston Transcript.

She needed rest: Fair patient—"Have you any idea what is the matter with me, doctor?" Doctor—"Why, I can diagnose your case with my eyes shut. There is nothing the matter with you except that you need rest.' Fair patient—"Why, I have just come back from a whole month at the most popular health resorts." Doctor—"Yes, as I said, you need rest."—Philadelphia Call.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $800 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

At the Opera House.

The performances of Day's International Theatre Company on Saturday were up to the usual high standard of the company's plays, being vivid, realistic and pleasing. In the afternoon "Under the Gas Light" was given to a large audience, principally young people. The play was very attractive. After the final act Little Annie Bird presented Miss Maude Foot, whose ticket had the lucky number, with a beautiful wax doll. In the evening "The Ticket of Leave Man," one of the company's best plays, was given to a full house. All the characters were impersonated with peculiar accuracy. The company have completed a very successful week and deservedly so. Their performances are highly meritorious in every particular. The acting and singing of Annie Bird is an attraction in itself worth the price of admission. The plays presented are the choicest. "Rosedale" will be given to-night.

An Unfortunate Young Man.

On Friday a young man paid a friendly visited to an artist's studio. Being, like most human beings, unable to see anything properly without handling it, took up a tube of liquid paint. He squeezed it rather too hard, and a big splash of oil paint spurted out on the breast of his new $25 overcoat. This termination to the young man's attempt to gratify his curiosity, did not deter him from repeating his visit the following day. He got around this time without stepping on anything, but in going out he shut the door with a good deal of emphasis, with the result of knocking a newly painted portrait that stood against the wall, face downard against the floor. The portrait received several effects in the way of free and easy blending of colours, and adhesions of floor dust, etc., that had not entered into the artist's conceptions. The unfortunate young man has registed a vow to enter the studio hereafter with his hands in his pockets, and to keep them there. From the consequences that arose from his inordinate curiosity, he also inclines to the opinion that he should have been born a women, which his fondness for the society of the sex should strengthen.

A Narrow Escape.

A householder on Saturday evening, after the family had retired early and were sound asleep, reluctantly recognized the necessity of replenishing the coal stove. The drafts had been closed before and he removed the top cover of the stove to have things handy for dumping his coal. Passing through the kitchen with his lamp and scuttle, he saw that day's Mail lying on the table and paused to glance at it. Something caught his eye and he set down his scuttle and began to read. He became more interested and at length sat down himself and became absorbed in the columns before him. He read for a long reminded him of his errand. When he reentered the house he noticed a strong odour of gas, and hurridly emptied his coal hod and fired the stove for the night. On going up stairs he noticed his wife in a peculiar position on the bed—breathing heavily—in fact in a state of suspended animation. But the inhalation of the gas had not gone so far, but that a few dashes of water from the water jug served to restore her to consciousness. After an explanation of the circumstances had been made, the lady was in a state, not of suspended, but of extended animation. She gave her absent minded husband so many and forcible "pieces of her mind" that he found on the spot, a very high opinion of the vigor of her intellect as a whole. He said nothing—had nothing to say—and slunk silently into bed remorsefully reflecting that another column of the Mail would have finished his wife. This incident, in spite of the humour of the situation, is a warning that care must be exercised in the management of coal stoves.

TOWN COUNCIL OF 1886.

Inaugural Session.

The Speech From the Throne Both Auditors Appointed by the Mayor Appointment of High School Trustees Held Over—Committee to Strike the Standing Committees Appointed.

This morning at 11 a.m., the members of the Council elect met and took their seats.

The clerk reported the result of the municipal elections, the members having been duly elected, and having taken the declaration of office, as follows:—

James Stevenson, Mayor.

Councillors for No. 1 Ward—Messrs. Cahill, Davidson and McNaughton; No. 2 Ward—Messrs. Kelly, McNeil and McClelland; No. 3 Ward—Messrs. Yelland, Moore and Rutherford; No. 4. Ward—Messrs. Kendry and Hartley.

The minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

Mr. Stevenson rose and said he supposed the duty devolved upon him to make a speech. Some matters of great importance would likely come before the Council during the year which had just been entered upon. In the first place, the most important matter the Council would have to deal with would be to keep down taxation. By inducing people to come to Peterborough the assessment would be increased. There being no licenses this year there would be a reduction of $5,000 in the receipts of the town, which amount would have to be added to the assessment roll. By a vote of the people the waterworks account had been raised from $1,000 to $3,000. There was not much prospect for a reduction in taxation, but with exertion the Council could keep it where it is. The principal inducements offered by the town to outsiders were, low taxation, good schools and a healthy town. He hoped the Council of this year would keep these attractions of the town prominently to the front. He had heard it remarked, when out of town, by parties whom he did not know and who did know him, that the finances of Peterborough had been well managed. The Council of the last eighteen years deserved credit for the way they had managed the affairs of the town. The speaker then showed the favorable position the town was in financially, giving the facts and figures, much as in his speech made when nominated for Mayor, which has already been published in the EXAMINER. The railway debt will be extinguished in 1892 by debenture, and the town will have $67,000 to the good. He thought the town was in a first-class position financially. If there were no more expensive undertakings entered into this year the Council would be able to present as favorable a state of affairs next year. He felt confident the council would help and support him in inducing manufacturers to come to Peterborough. He had seen of late the benefits the manufactures of Peterborough were to the town. The Lock Works were a paying affair, and will be more so in the future. A friend of his who is well informed in such matters is going to take more stock in the Company. The Mayor said he did not go in for bonuses, he believed in relieving property from taxation. Individuals ought to do the rest; there were many men in town who could help these industries along by investing money in them. It increased the value of property and was therefore particularly beneficial to property owners. These manufactures also bring men to the town, and they required houses to live in. The buildings put up this year were exceptionally numerous and would be next year. It would pay individuals who have money invested in property to subscribe liberally towards a private bonus to offer to manufacturers to induce them to locate in town. They certainly would make more than by investing in Northwest property. Kingston had offered a bonus to the Spool and Cotton Company. If individuals subscribe the money it was all right. If the council give a bonus they look upon it as a God-send instead of a business transaction. Mr. Geo. A. Cox had hit the nail on the head by offering a liberal sum of money towards getting manufacturers established in the town. There were some wealthy persons in the town who would add to their property by subscribing $5,000 towards a bonus for manufacturers. The manufacturers bring men and money. They patronize the market. The market gets a good name and farmers are induced to come to the town to sell their produce. These farmers spend their money in town as well as the mechanics and it is therefore a double profit. Every manufactory brings more farmers into the country. The speaker was in favor of offering a bonus of $20,000, raised by private subscription, to the Paisley Spool and Cotton Company. There was no place in Canada which could offer better inducements. They facilities unexcelled. He was satisfied five or six property owners could subscribe enough to bring them here. This was the prudent way. By the Council giving a bonus taxation was at once increased. Outsiders will at once notice this and keep away from the town.

Another important matter was that we always have the poor with us. He hoped Council would always provide for them. (Applause.) He would be sorry to hear of any one ever going to bed supperless. The chairman of the Charity Committee should see that good goods were supplied the poor. They should not be imposed on because the town paid for it. He thought there were many reliable stores who would supply the charity orders at reduced rates. Different shops should be patronized. There were some deserving persons who were very sensitive and would sooner die than ask for charity. The chairman of the Charity Committee could arrange so that no names would appear. The council could trust the man they appointed to look after these matters. Other towns did this. A widow or a woman whose husband spent all his earnings in whiskey, was an object of charity and should receive support. The Council should deal liberally in charity, it would return. It would be better to help a worthless person than not to, and have that person give the town a hard name.

He hoped the Council would see the necessity of maintaining order. If order was not maintained they would lose the respect of each other and of the public. He then concluded by asking the assistance of the members in this matter, saying what they had to say to the point and without personal reference.

Mr. McClelland rose and informed the Mayor that at the last meeting of the Council he had taken the liberty of stating that he (Mayor Stevenson) had offered to supply wood for charity purposes gratuitously, and asked if it was so.

The Mayor said that he intended to supply the wood free, but would not undertake to deliver it.

AUDITORS APPOINTED.

The Mayor then appointed Mr. Jas. Stratton as one of the auditors for the ensuing year.

Moved by Mr. Cahill, seconded by Mr. McClelland, that Mr. John J. Hall be appointed an auditor for the ensuing year.

Moved as an amendment by Mr. McNaughton, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that Mr. Sheriff Hall be appointed auditor.

On the amendment being put, the vote stood a tie. The vote on the motion was the same and the Mayor elected Mr. John J. Hall by casting his vote in favor of the original motion.

Moved by Mr. Kelly, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, that the standing rules of 1885 be the standing rules for 1886.

Moved in amendment by Mr. Moore, seconded by Mr. McClelland, that the rules of the year 1885 be the standing rules of the year 1886, save that the following be added: No member of this council shall vote on any motion or resolution in which such member is directly or indirectly interested, or by which such member may be appointed to any place or office in the gift of this Council.

The vote was not taken as Mr. Kelly's motion and amendment were withdrawn and the matter was held over for the evening session, as it was feared a discussion would prolong the meeting to an undesirable length.

BY-LAW.

On motion of Mr. Cahill, the by-law appointing the auditors and fixing the salaries received its several readings and was passed.

On motion of Mr. Davidson, seconded by Mr. McClelland, the matter of striking the standing committees was left over till the evening session, and on motion of Mr. Cahill, seconded by Mr. Davidson, Messrs. Davidson, Kelly, Rutherford, Kendry and Moore were appointed a committee to strike the standing committees.

On motion of Mr. Kelly, seconded by Mr. McNeil, the Clerk was instructed to insert advertisements in the Toronto and Montreal papers, setting forth the desirability of Peterborough as a location for manufactures, and requesting manufacturers to communicate with the Clerk for further information as to terms, etc.

The Council adjourned.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance, Little Lake Cemetery.

Annual Meeting of the Shareholders—The Various Reports Presented—Satisfactory Statement of the Finances—The Old Directors and Officials Re-Elected.

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company was held in the Council Chamber yesterday afternoon.

There were present Mr. J. J. Lundy in the chair, Rev. V. Clementi, Hon. R. Hamilton, Judge Dennistoun, Messrs. Geo. A. Cox, James Stevenson, G. M. Roger, R. Kingan, E. B. Edwards, H. T. Evans, Bruce Ludgate, C. Stapleton, John Wha, C. D. McDonald, R. W. Thompson, Jas. Kendry and John Kelly, Superintendent.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

On motion, the Directors' report was read by the President, Mr. J. J. Lundy, as follows:—

DIRECTORS REPORT.

To the Shareholders of the Little Lake Cemetary Company:

Your Directors beg leave to present the following report for the year 1885.

The Directors are happy to announce as the chief event of the past year in the history of the company, the purchase from John Burnham, Esq., of an additional piece of land for the cemetery, containing some 5½ acres. The necessity of this increase has long been apparent, and although the price paid is larger than the directors at first thought proper to give, yet as this was the only piece of land available for the purpose they deemed it best to secure it, while it was still in the market. The necessary surveys have been made, the stumps removed, and considerable work done in grading and levelling the ground. The expenditure on account of the property has been $2,390.75.

The sale of lots and grvaes for the past year has realized the sum of $1,325.50, being nearly $400 less than the amount received from the same source during the previous year. The amount received for improvements on lots sold is $242.00, and for vault fees $29.00. For the items of digging and sodding, removals and, digging and building foundations, and planting and watering flowers, the sum received is $954.57. This added to the sum of $242 received for improvements on lots makes a total sum of $1,196.47 received for work done by the superintendent and his men, in addition to the work done by them in clearing up a new section for single graves. In repairs to the vault, cutting grass and other work in the old cemetery, as well as a large amount of work in grading the recently acquired land the sum thus received in cash is within $100 of the amount paid both for wages and superintendent's salary. The amount received for interest on Bank account and on debentures, represents $157.00 making with the sum above mentioned as received for work and vault fees a sum of $1,382.57 which may be classed under the head of ordinary income. To purchase the land from Mr. Burnham the town debentures for $1000 were sold to Mr. Clementi at par.

The receipts for the year may thus be summarized:—

Sale of lots, etc	$1,325 50
Ordinary Income	1,382 57
Sale of debentures	1,000 00
Total receipts	$3,708 07
Balance on hand from last year	1,478 92
Grand total	$5,186 99

On the other side of the account the expenditure may be classified as follows:—

For addition to cemetery	$2,390 75
Repairs to house and windmill, ornamental trees, safe, lumber and refund on lot bought back	144 94
Insurance, postage, stationery and printing	46 32
Salaries	635 00
Wages	769 62
Miscellaneous items	136 87
Total expenditure	$4,129 50
Leaving a balance on hand of	$1,056 99
In addition to town debenture for (still held by the company.)	1,000 00

The system of the company assuming the care of all the graves and the cutting and watering of all the grass without charge has continued to work well and has helped largely towards making the cemetery, as it is, one of the neatest and prettiest in the Dominion.

The directors for the incoming year will have before them the work of enclosing and improving the addition to the cemetery. Steps have already been taken towards securing the closing of a portion of Weir and Haggart streets, so as to include all in the one boundary, a clause to that effect having been inserted in the Town Bill now before the Legislature.

The Treasurer's accounts have been duly audited and will be presented at the meeting.

All of which is respectfully submitted,
JOHN J. LUNDY,
President.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

The report of Mr. John Kelly, superintendent, was read as follows:—

To the President and Directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Company:

GENTLEMEN,—I beg leave to report that the receipts and expenditures at the Little Lake Cemetery from Jan. 1st, 1885, to Dec. 31st, 1885, were as follows:—

RECEIPTS.

For sale of lots	$1277 50
" single graves	47 00
" digging graves	341 00
" sodding graves	212 00
" improvements on lots	242 50

" removals, etc	79 50
" digging and building foundations	108 91

	$2551 57

DUE ON ACCOUNT.

For sale of lots	$345 75

" digging graves	17 50
Total	$3890 82

EXPENDITURE.

Paid Superintendent's salary as per Jas. Edwards	$535 00
" men's wages and teaming	768 62
	$1294 62
Balance	$1005 20

Total number of interments during the year 147.

In presenting my report to you I would like to call your attention to some of the improvements that have been done during the season. That plot of ground near the river banks, on section E, that was partly done in 1884, has been finished in the spring, graded, seeded and rolled, which now makes a picturesque spot.

That single grave plot was about full, which necessitated the clearing up of more ground, which was done at considerable labor. About half an acre was cleared of trees and stumps, leveled and graded, which now gives room for about 350 more graves, which will last for several years.

The new lot of ground that was taken in last year, I have done a good deal of work on the same. The old fence was all taken down and the posts drawn out of the ground, which took some considerable time. I thought it advisable to remove all the large stones out of the new plot and get it ploughed, which was done early in the fall.

And while the men were taking out the stumps on the new grounds, I had them raise some 83 large stumps in the old grounds. If those stumps had to be taken out by hand would cost more than double what was paid for the same.

I would recommend a fence be put around the new ground in the spring as soon as it could be done, then all the grounds would be thrown in together, which will make it more convenient in the working of it, as the grounds should be worked together.

The vault required some considerable repairs on the east front, half of which was pulled down and rebuilt. The two buttresses were rebuilt and made larger and more substantial, and all the east front was tuckpointed, which made quite an improvement in the same. Stone and sand were drawn and all the labor done in assisting at the masonry. Several other improvements were done, too numerous to mention. All of this labor is included in my labor account.

In concluding I might remark to you, to urge upon the town council the necessity of doing something to the roadway leading to the cemetery, namely Crescent street, as it is annually wearing away by the action of the lake. If not attended to the cost will be annually increased, as the earth now works away in the lake, which will have to be replaced. This will incur a larger expense than if cribbed in due time.

I am gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
JOHN KELLY,
Supt.

"Little Alec's" Dogs.

A remarkable element of Mr. Stephens' life, and one which will give great insight into his character, was his love for his friends, both man and beast, writes a correspondent. His dogs enter as largely into his friendly letters as do state questions, and his private secretary tells me that when he was at home, at Liberty hall, he spent one hour each day going about among his stock, petting the horses, cows, and sheep, and lingering long over the colts, lambs, and little pigs. His dogs accompanied him during these expeditions, receiving as much attention from him during their gambols as though they were human. Like Walter Scott, he looked upon them as sympathetic friends rather than as mere dumb brutes. Whether riding, walking, or studying, they were beside him, and at night they had a place at the foot of his bed, or an especial couch of coffee sacks was made up for them in the library adjoining his chamber. He delighted in teaching them tricks, in watching their queer natures, and respected their feelings as much as any father ever did those of his child. Rio's wild howling affects him to tears, he rejoices in the wild glee of Sir Bingo Binks, and when Troupe dies he feels as if he had lost one of his dearest friends.

HIGH SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

At the meeting of the Town Council last night, the two retiring trustees, Messrs. Kendry and Rutherford, were re-elected by the casting vote of Mayor Stevenson. During the discussion on the subject, a very strong and almost unanimous expression of opinion was given by the majority of the councillors, that the principle of dual representation must cease, and, had it not been for the pledges given before we began to discuss this matter in these columns, and for the influences that were brought to bear on particular councillors, the principle of responsible representation would have been vindicated and the present unwise and anomolous system repudiated.

As it was, as will be seen from the report of the Council proceedings last night, the above trustees were virtually elected by their own votes—six of the councillors voting for Messrs. Douglass and Kendry, and four of the councillors, exclusive of Messrs. Kendry and Rutherford, voting against, and if the retiring trustees had not voted flatly for themselves, they would have failed to receive the appointment which they themselves practically made.

It seems strange, that in our representative system, any person should have the power to nominate himself and, not only nominate himself, but elect himself and be responsible, in a great part to himself, and thus combine in one body, the nominating, electoral, representative and responsible power.

The absurdity and inconsistency of the position cannot be gainsayed. It stands unique and alone as a blot on our school system and must be erased. A principle so false in itself cannot but be harmful in practice. Personally we give Messrs. Kendry and Rutherford credit for their labours as trustees according to the merit they have won, we contend, not against the men, but against the principle, and we cannot but think that a principle, that has so much in itself, that is unwise anomolous and one that is so potent for evil possibilities, whild it may in some respects and in some exceptional cases, work with reasonable satisfaction, in the majority of cases must give room for open contempt and disregard for the body, the persons elected through its operation are supposed to represent.

It is to be regretted that the resolution, put forward by Mr. Councillor Moore, to the effect that a Councillor be debarred from voting on a matter in which he is interested, or voting to appoint himself to any office in the gift of the Council, should not have been adopted. And we hope now that the matter for this year is settled, and that it cannot be construed into having a personal bearing, the Council will take an early opportunity of pronouncing against the principle of dual representation by any of its members, and that while it is thus engaged, it will see that the principle receives a wider application, and that members of the Town Council should not be eligible for the positions of Town Trust Commissioners. There is not any personal allusion in this matter, more than in our reference to the trustee question, but the principle is bad and permits of possibilities of collusion between members of the two bodies (the council and the commission), that might result, in the case of men less honest and honorable than those at present sustaining these relations, in serious loss to the town. The evil inherent in the principle of duplication of offices is receiving general attention in other quarters. In yesterday's issue the Globe says:

An amendment to the municipal law is needed to the effect that no alderman should be given any office during the year for which he has been elected an alderman.

The EXAMINER will be well satisfied if the prominence it has given this important question, shall result in the removal of the evil complained of.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The expenditure of the Dominion Government for the past six months has increased $2,710,044, and the revenue has decreased 1,300,789, equivalent to a deficit of $4,010,833. Every day makes the financial situation worse—outgo increasing income growing less—burning the candle at both ends.

Mr. George Stephen, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, has been created a baronet and it is now Sir George Stephen. His claim to this distinction is his having spent many millions of the Canadian taxpayers' money with enough profit to himself to build a million dollar residence. Mr. Stephen is welcome to the dignity of being made a duke if he will only refrain from asking for another 30 million every session of Parliament.

Slaves to Quinine.

"Have you noticed the growing use of quinine?" a druggist in the vicinity of the Fifth Avenue Hotel asked last night. At the same moment he bowed and smiled to a tall, red-whiskered man who strolled in.

"Just watch this customer," he said.

The man was very thin and cadaverous looking. Without saying a word he walked up to the soda fountain, and the boy threw out a pill box, poured three pills into the palm of the customer's hand, set a glass of mineral water in front of him, and turned to the next customer. The tall man swallowed the pills, drank the water, turned on his heel, and stalked away with another pleasant nod to the proprietor.

"That costs him $1.40 a week," said the proprietor, "and before long it will kill him. He started to take one five-grain pill every night about six months ago; now he takes fifteen grains a night before he goes home, so that it will brace him up for his dinner. Within a month he will be taking twenty grains a night. Of course he takes it at home besides what he gets here. I've gone out of my way three or four times to explain to him that he had a good deal better drink rum, even if he is deacon in a church, but his answer is a simple one; he says quinine makes him feel cheerful and strong, and it has no ill effects. He tried stopping it once and caved in; hence he wants to know why he should stop. You can't combat such reasoning as that."

"Have you many such regular customers?"

"Well, to be accurate, we have only three men who come in every day and pay at the end of the week, but there are many others who take their quinine as regularly as most drinking folks take their whisky. It is certainly a great temptation to weakly organized and frail people. All they have to do is to swallow a pill or two, and they feel robust, wide awake, and cheerful. The practice grows on them continually, and it seems to be spreading, for our sales of quinine are constantly growing. A good proportion of the custom comes from women who grow fatigued or weary while shopping, and who, instead of buying nutritious luncheon or drinking a wholesome bottle of porter or ale, resort to the insidious quinine pill.—New York Sun.

Charles Sumner's Widow.

A rumor that the well-known American banker in London, Mr. Junius S. Morgan, is to marry the divorced wife of Charles Sumner has obtained a limited circulation. It has been published in a New Orleans paper as a fact already announced by authority in London. It will very naturally create some surprise, for Mr. Morgan is about 70 years old, and was supposed to have passed the marriage point. His first wife died six or seven years ago. She was a daughter of John Pierpont, the American poet, who died at Medford, Mass., in 1866. He was at the time holding an office in the Treasury Department at Washington, which had been given him in recognition of his services as chaplain in a Massachusetts regiment during the war. Mrs. Morgan was a lady of great culture and was for nearly half a century a worthy companion of her distinguished husband. They had two or three children, the best known of whom is Mr. John Pierpont Morgan, of the New York banking firm of Drexel, Morgan & Co. J. S. Morgan went over to London in 1857 or thereabouts with George Peabody, who that year came over to America and established the Peabody Institute at his old home, Danvers, Mass. Mr. Morgan had already made a fortune. He began life as a clerk in a cotton goods establishment at Hartford, Conn., and after prospering till he became a partner in the house sold out and went to Boston, where he became associated with one of the largest importing concerns there. It was thus that he got his London acquaintance and that he attracted the admiration and friendship of Mr. Peabody. When he went over to London he became associated with Mr. Peabody in the banking business. He was the "Co" of George Peabody & Co., and immediately became a great favorite with the first people of London and American visitors. He is a gentleman of splendid appearance, the most refined tastes and agreeable manner. The banking house of J. S. Morgan & Co. is known all over the world, and through it most Americans transact their London business. Mr. Morgan is worth at least $20,000,000, and has a country house near London that is noted for its Elizabethan architecture and beautiful surroundings. The lady to whom they say he is to be married wears the name of Mrs. Alice Mason. She discarded the Sumner name when she got the divorce from the celebrated Massachusetts statesman. She was a widow when he married her, and her first husband's name was Mason. The latter name she chose to keep. There has always been a mystery about her separation from Sumner. They were married soon after the war, in 1866, I believe, and the next year she got her divorce. They lived together but a few months, when she left him in disgust. Sumner was then an old man and had always lived a bachelor, and he did not long survive his unfortunate matrimonial venture. Mrs. Mason is not yet an old woman, having been quite young and very attractive in personal appearance when she was married to Sumner. She has an ample fortune in her own right.—New York World.

Ocean-Steamer Gambling.

Thomas Hughes, Q. C., the author of "Tom Brown's School Days at Rugby," arrived in this city on the City of Rome, en route for Rugby, Tenn. When seen by a Herald reporter he was fired with enthusiasm, not so much in relation to the new Rugby and its proposed school, as about a row that had occurred on the steamer while coming over.

"There was on the deck of the steamer," he explained, "two rooms—one a smoking room and one a reading room. The reading room is supposed to be for the use of the ladies as well as the gentlemen. Monday, the third day out, they turned the room into a card room and smoking room, going on with cards, draughts, etc., all day. Well, I went off to the smoking room and found that there had been a baccarat bank started there. A man from Australia—a perfectly good, honest fellow he was, but he made his living that way—had started the game with three other men, all middle aged. The bank was a perfectly square one, and the play entirely honest, so far as I know and believe.

"This was kept up all day, and up to the time of putting out the lights and going to bed, and every day after that, from 11 o'clock in the morning until bedtime, this baccarat bank was kept going, and there was much of the time a row of players five or six deep around the game. Many of these were mere boys, lads of 20 or less, who were allowed to punt their shillings or dollars or more. The stake was sometimes up to £5, I believe.

"Now, I do not object to the baccarat going on, but what I did object to was its being carried on openly and the boys being allowed to join in the game. And I objected, as did many others, to the reading room being made inaccessible to the ladies. So one of the passengers, a friend of mine, drew up a memorial, and I led the signatures with my own. It was signed by a large number of the passengers.

"This paper was laying on the saloon table and the passengers were signing it in great numbers, when I was told that a fellow named Lord was up on deck talking about it and telling all sots of lies about what we were doing. I went right up and spoke to him. I asked him if he had read the memorial and he admitted that he had not. Then a friend of mine, a young American gentleman, struck one of the other side. Of course we stopped them at once, but there was some sharp discussions afterwards and a great deal of bad feeling.

"Since we landed," he continued, "we have presented the memorial to the agents here, and they say they do not propose to do anything about it, so I want the press to take it up. It is going to do a great deal of hurt if our youth are to be exposed to this temptation. A great proportion of the travelers on these steamers are mere boys, and I do not think it right or proper that they should be admitted to any game of this kind. Baccarat is not allowed in any of our clubs in London, and it seems a pity that it should be played openly on the steamers."—New York Herald.

Lafayette's Visit.

On Townsend street, on the hill, says The Pittsburg Commercial Gazette, lives Mrs. Isabella Law, aged 87. The old lady is piquant and remarkably lively for such an elderly person. Caressing her canary yesterday, she turned upon the reporter an eye filled with life, and said: "You have come to hear me talk?" Acknowledging the fact, the reporter led the old lady to converse, and she straightway went to the point, as follows.

"I remember the coming of Lafayette well. The people came to our place at Braddock, and I never saw a jollier crowd. The whole neighborhood was filled with horses and carriages used by the people to come there, as we had no railroads then. Lafayette was an old man then, and the trip on a flatboat had worried him. My husband, James Law, had gone to the boat to get them on shore, and I remember he told me the general fell in the water and spoiled his breeches while trying to land. We had a band then."

The old lady laughed at her recollection of the band, and her eyes seemed to look back over the years and find a gratification in the memory. She continued: "There were four horns, and the man who had the big one made me laugh, for some person had cut a potato and put it into his horn, and he could not blow it; and what with the ducking the general got and the lack of music his lauding was a very tame affair. His visit was to Gen. Gibson's widow, and she came to me and borrowed all my cups and saucers and teaspoons for the occasion, and the general's son carried one of my teaspoons to France. I made a pudding that day for Mrs. Gibson of whortleberries. We made it in a large earthen pot, and when it was placed on the table it broke and scalded John Stylesworth. He married the first McCandless who came here. Gen. Lafayette arose at the table and said: 'I like pie, and I like American pie, but this is too much pie,' and then everybody laughed.

"We had church services next day, and the church was four miles from the house, and, of course, we all put on our ribbons, and I had a nice cap, and my husband had bought me a pair of nice shoes, and I and two other ladies started for church, and we went barefooted through the fields, intending to strike near the church and then put on our finery and play the lady. It was hot, and we stopped in the woods to bathe our feet, and while doing so we were startled by a yell, and we ran and never stopped until we entered the church, and there we were a sight, sure. They were singing, 'Come, Thou Fount of every Blessing,' and they just stopped singing and laughed at us, and Lafayette, laughed too. Oh, I felt awful bad; but you see, I could not come out, for they would see my face, and so I had to stand it. I shall never forget the preaching that day. It was old Elder Wilson, and it just seemed as if he preached at my bare feet all the time.

"The general's father came to me that night and told me that his father was tired and restive from the action of some of the Pittsburghers, and wanted to get away. He asked me to talk to the general and get him to go on the next day, and I did so. He was talking to Mrs. Gibson, and I went right up to him and said, 'I want to see you,' and he smiled and led me to a seat, and, would you believe it? I only had a calico wrapper on, and then he said, I am tired, but your people are kind, and therefore I do not feel it.

"I have heard them say it was not in 1825 when he came here, but I know it was, for my baby was born that year, and so I know it."

A confusion of memories here took possession of the old lady, and she seemed to be lost in dreaming of the time sixty years ago.

The Ear-Maker's Story.

A nose and ear repairer of New York said to a reporter:

"Although my business is not what it once was, still I get a good job occasionally. It's only last week that a beautiful lady drove up to the door in a fine carriage and came quickly up the stairs. Her head was wrapped around with a silk cloth, and when she discarded it I found that her left ear was cut off near the base. It had been done several days before, and was hardly healed. I took a plaster cast of her other ear and made one to order just like it. The lady paid me several visits and was delighted when the work was done. The false ear was delicately painted to resemble the natural one and was then fastened by a spring to the shreds still remaining. It can be taken off at night and easily fastened. She paid me $200 for the ear and she could afford it. The lady will not tell me how she met with such a peculiar accident, but her maid informed me that her mistress was jealous of her husband, a well-known physician, and while eavesdropping at the door of his study where he was attending a female patient the door was suddenly opened and her ear was jammed to a jelly. Nobody not in the secret would believe it to see her now."

On the Mariposa road, near Tuolumne, Cal., there are two snow drifts each a mile long and 150 feet high.

Heard Them Counted.

Old Mose, who sells eggs and chickens on the streets of Austin for a living, is as honest an old negro as ever lived, but he has got the habit of chatting familiarly with his customers, hence he frequently makes mistakes in counting out the eggs they buy. He carries his ware around in a small cart drawn by a diminutive donkey. He stopped in front of the residence of Mrs. Samuel Burton. The old lady herself came out to the gate to make the purchases.

"Have you got any eggs this morning, Uncle Mose?" she asked.

"Yes, indeed I has. Jess got in ten dozen from the kentry."

"Are they fresh?"

"I gua'ntee 'em. I knows dey am fresh jess de same as if I had laid 'em myself."

"I'll take nine dozen. You can just count them into this basket."

"All right, mum." He counts, "One, two, free, foah, five, six, seben, eight, nine, ten. You kin rely on dem bein' fresh. How's your son coming on at de school? He mus' be mos' grown."

"Yes, uncle Mose, he is a clerk in a bank at Galveston."

"How ole am de boy?"

"He is 18."

"You don't tole me so. Eighteen and getting a salary already, eighteen, (counting), nineteen, twenty, twenty-one, twenty-two, twenty-free, twenty-foah, twenty-five, and how's yore gal comin' on? She was mos' growed up de las' time I seed her."

"She is married and living in Dallas."

"Wall, I declar'. How de time scoots away! An' yo' say she has childruns? Why how ole am de gal? She mus' be jess about——"

"Thirty-three."

"Am dat so? (counting), firty-free, firty-foah, firty-five, firty-six, firty-seben, firty-eight, firty-nine, forty, forty-one, forty-two, forty-free. Hit am so singler dat you has sich old childruns. I can't b'leeve you has grandchildruns. You don't look more den forty yeahs old yerself."

"Nonsense, old man, I see you want to flatter me. When a person gets to be 52 years old"—

Fifty-free? I jess dun gwinter b'leeve hit, fifty-free, fifty-foah, fifty-five, fifty-six—I wants you to pay tenshun when I counts de eggs, so dar'll be no mistake,—fifty-nine, sixty, sixty-one, sixty-two, sixty-free, sixty-foah—Whey! Dat am a warm day. Dis am de time ob yeah when I feels I'se gettin' ole myse'f. I ain't long for dis world. You comes from an ole family. When your fodder died he was 70 years ole."

"Seventy-two."

"Dat's old, suah. Sebenty-two, sebenty-free, sebenty-foah, sebenty-five sebenty-six, sebenty-seben, sebenty-eight, sebenty-nine—and your mudder? She was one ob de noblest-looking ladies I ebber see. You remind me ob her so much. She libbed to mos' 100. I b'leeves she was dun pass a centurion when she died."

"No, Uncle Mose, she was only 96 when she died."

"Den she warn't no chicken when she died. I know dat—ninety-six, ninety-seben, ninety-eight, ninety-nine, one hundred, one, two, free, foah, five, six, seben, eight—dar 108 nice fresh eggs—jess nine dozen, and here am one moah egg in case I had discounted myse'f."

Old Mose went on his way rejoicing. A few days afterward Mrs. Burton said to her husband:

"I am afraid we will have to discharge Matilda. I am satisfied she steals the milk and eggs. I am positive about the eggs, for I bought them day before yesterday, and now about half of them are gone. I stood right there and heard Old Mose count them myself, and there were nine dozen."—Texas Siftings.

Izaak Walton.

We can never wonder at Izaak Walton's perennial popularity. The essential freshness of the topic is enough to assure immortality to any book. In his quaint and godly talk he gives expression to the simple poetry that inspires the feelings of many an unlettered brother of the craft. Even when he wrote in prose he was really as much of a poet as many of the melodious masters of the lyre he quotes with honest admiration. And his own simple verses, coming straight from the heart, are often singularly touching. Take for instance, and almost at haphazard, his profession of his angling faith:

"I care not, I, to fish in seas,
Fresh rivers best my mind do please,
Whose sweet, calm course I contemplate,
And seek in life to imitate."

His mind reflected with a sober Quaker line coloring all the pictures of rural beauty and felicity about him. We have had many books since then by such devoted lovers of English scenery as Gilpin and Howitt, and Borrow and Jennings. But we know none that breathes so entirely the essence of tranquil enjoyment, or so ardently expresses the happy faculty of finding recreation in trifles Unreal it may be in its idealization of manners in the immediate neighborhood of the court and capital; for the golden age had gone over before the days of Walton, and we imagine that maudlin, the pretty milk-maid and her mother, that have been scarcely so unsophisticated as they appeared. But the worthy old angler saw everything as he wished to see it; and certainly life then went comparatively placidly, even within hearing of the bells of Bow.—Cornhill Magazine.

A scarcity of dudes is reported at Northern watering places. It must be on account of heat. The dude is known by his shirt collar and general idiotic appearance. On the days when collars will not stand up dudes are overlooked. —N. O. Picayune.

"I never saw such a woman in all my life," said Bass; "you are never satisfied with anything." "People who know the man I took for a husband," replied Mrs. B., "think, on the contrary, that I am very easily satisfied."—Boston Transcript.

"I'll have to take your leg off," said a surgeon to a man who had been injured in a railway accident. "Never mind your chloroform, doctor," replied the man. "I was once Governor of Arkansaw and can stand anything."—Arkansaw Traveler.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on its MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this papre who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

TAKING STOCK!

No duty devolving upon the business man is so important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's repeating clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognised duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shown in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out any winter goods left over, at cost.

Salvation Army Funeral.

Yesterday a double Salvation Army funeral took place. In the afternoon the soldiery assembled at the barracks and marched in procession, with colors flying and drums beating, to Englishtown and conducted the body of Mrs. George Deline, a member of the Army, and the infant child of Mr. Charles Storms, to the cemetery, where the interment, according to Army, usages took place. The detachment returned to town by way of George street, to the hymn, "As we go marching to glory."

The William's Memorial Fund.

As mentioned in yesterday's issue of the EXAMINER Mr. D.B. Chisholm, Esq., barrister of Port Hope, a member of the Col. William's memorial committee, was in town soliciting subscriptions. Last evening Mr. Chisholm called at the EXAMINER office, and expressed his gratification at the generous spirit in which the citizens had recognised the object of his mission, which shows the prevalent sense of gratitude for, and appreciation of, the services of the late Col. Williams, who combined in his character the courteous, kindly gentlemen, the gallant Christian soldier, and the true hearted, unselfish patriot. The proposal is to erect a monument on the public square in the town of Port Hope, in the immediate vicinity of the new Postoffice. It is unnecessary to appeal to the citizens of Peterborough, to extend substantial assistance to the promotion of the scheme, for in a military capacity, the late Col. Williams is to be considered as much our own as Port Hope's, and we have as vivid an appreciation of the bravery of one of the most dashing officers that ever wore, with honour and credit to himself and country, the uniform of a militia officer, as those so fortunately situated as to have enjoyed the pleasure of daily intercourse.

THOS. CAHILL,
Chairman.

Peterborough, Jan. 18, 1886.

CHARITY REPORT.

Mr. Hartley handed in the report of expenditures for charity in No. 4 Ward, amounting in all to $52.74, $15.87 of which was for wood. One old couple had received assistance to the amount of $26.87.

On motion the report was received and adopted.

Moved by Mr. McClelland, seconded by Mr. Menzies, that Mr. John Douglass be and is hereby appointed as high school trustee for the ensuing term.

Mr. McClelland, in making the motion, said the Council owed Mr. Douglass a compliment, and this would be a fitting way of expressing it.

Moved as an amendment by Mr. Hartley, seconded by Mr. Yelland, that Mr. James Kendry and Mr. A. Rutherford be and are hereby re-appointed High School trustees for the ensuing term.

Moved as an amendment to the amendment by Mr. Davidson, that Mr. Walter Patterson, jr. be appointed High School trustee for the ensuing term.

Mr. Menzies suggested that they should be voted on separately.

Mr. Moore said he was of the opinion that trustees should not be appointed from the Town Council. There should not be a double representation. There might arise a conflict of duty and it should be prevented if possible. There was a considerable trust placed in the councillors and trustees, which would grow with the town, and either would require all his time and attention. If a conflict should arise it would place a man representing both in an awkward position. To say the least it would be undesirable. Dual representation has been abolished in the Local and Dominion Houses. It was practiced for some time and worked badly and was prohibited. That should be a good example to follow. In every institution it is always understood that the chief officers should be responsible to those they represented for the performance of the duty. It was the arbitrary appointment of the executive that led to the agitation of 1831, and the resulting evils were abolished when responsible government was secured. In the same way High School trustees should be made responsible to the people they represent. A member of both might be responsible to both and yet not directly responsible to the people. This difficulty would be overcome by appointing some one outside the Council. The town is not so poverty-stricken in intellect that all the ability is centered in the Council. It looked selfish, too, and it was a wrong in principle for a man to appoint himself, and unparliamentary, and what was wrong in principle must be wrong in practice. To overcome this difficulty and prevent a clash of duty, Messrs. Douglas and Patterson had been proposed. They were men worthy of all confidence and a better choice could not have been made.

Mr. Rutherford said it was all a secular cry. The EXAMINER had been teeming with editorials on this subject for some time past. It was very peculiar that objection had not been taken before. For the last 20 years it had been the same. Unfortunately it had come out during the late election. The paper which had taken upon itself the task of showing the Council its duty in this matter had shown a want of confidence. The EXAMINER did not object to the $500 salary grab, when the Dominion Parliament had voted each member that sum. It was quite Parliamentary. If the Council voted themselves five cents apiece there would be a hue and cry. In committee meetings the councillors voted for themselves. This singular excuse was gotten up for the purpose of sending himself and Mr. Kendry to the right about. If they had not done their duty they deserved to be rejected, but he defied Mr. Moore, the EXAMINER, or any one around the board to point to one instance where they had not done their duty conscientiously at both School Board and Town Council. If they had they would not have been returned at the last election. He was sorry the members of the board had lowered themselves to introduce a sectarian cry. It was mean and contemptible. He referred to the Methodist cry. It was used against Mr. Flavelle to his defeat. He would like to know what would happen to Peterborough if the Methodists were out of it. They owned three parts of George street. He then said if the Mayor was taken out of town, half the town would be gone. (Laughter.) It was said there were too many Methodists in the School Board, now. He defied Mr. Moore to show or give an instance where anything sectarian had been done by them. He saw no reason why they, the old members of the School Board should not be re-elected. He did not know what denominations the teachers belonged to and did not vote for Methodist teachers. Three committees of the Council could do all the work of the School Board. The Government by a judicious measure had taken the internal management from the Trustees, to the local inspectors. All they do is to supply the teachers, manage the finances and property. The Council could do it all. If there were no men taken from the board there would be no harm in it, but virtue. As it is now, the Council are responsible for money spent by the School Board and had no control of it. By having members of the Town Council represented on the board, these members would be present, and many questions on town matters might be answered by them. The fact of the matter and the root of the contention was that they did not always go as desired. There was an attempt made to separate the Board, which was not countenanced at all. It would be a bad thing for the town if it had, causing unnecessary trouble and expense. Another thing was the desire to build a new Collegiate Institute. They would not spend $25,000 though, when the present building is good enough. The only charge against them was that they were Councillors. They had attended as faithfully as any members of the board, and worked for the interests of all the town. If the Council thought they had not done their duty they were willing to go. Mr. Rutherford then handed the Clerk a communication from Mr. Walter Patterson, jr., stating that he was not a candidate for Trustee, and would not act.

Mr. Davidson asked Mr. Rutherford if he had solicited the communication.

Mr. Rutherford said he merely asked him if he would be a candidate.

Mr. Patterson said Mr. Moore and Mr. McClelland had pressed him to take the position, but he had refused. Mr. Sawers had called on Mr. Douglass and asked him to take the position telling him there were too many Methodists on the Board. Mr. Moore had stated to Mr. Patterson he did not know who was retiring, only they were Methodists.

Mr. Moore said this was untrue. He had asked Mr. Patterson if he would act and Mr Patterson said "very well." He never mentioned any sect. Mr. Rutherford had accused the EXAMINER of publishing articles detrimental to him. He should not forget that Mr. Rutherford or his man Friday had published in the same paper an article against him. He had never used any sectarian cry, and had not said there were too many Methodists on the Board.

The Mayor restored order and said he was sorry that such a misunderstanding should occur.

Mr. Cahill said he was glad it had occurred, because "when rogues fell out honest men got their dues." (Laughter.) He had contended for years that any man on the board was ineligible for the position, without regard to creed or sect. He should not be excluded because he was a Catholic. He sympathized with Mr. Rutherford but would not support a monopoly. He did not believe in casting reflection on any religion. It was singular that Mr. Rutherford should appeal to the Mayor by calling him half the town. He was confident the Mayor was too old a politician to be influenced by such means. As the Council have to deal with it he thought it would be well to elect outsiders. He was of opinion the trustees should be elected by the people. (Hear, hear.) There was a great deal of truth in what Mr. Moore had said.

Mr. McNaughton said he was sorry the Roman Catholic-Methodist question had arisen. He thought Roman Catholics should be represented for what they were assessed. They would have no say in lower school questions. He was in favor of giving Catholics their share and no more. He was willing to support Mr. Cahill but would be sorry to send him to the school rooms to make a fool of him. He would oppose the $25,000 school party.

The Mayor said they would have a chance of appointing Mr. Douglas in a short time as Mr. Cox had resigned from the School Board. He was satisfied there was no sectarian feeling in the board.

Mr. Hartley also opposed the sectarian principle. He did not) know how many of each denomination was on the board and did not care. He looked at them as men and judged them by their actions. He was sorry the matter had come up, and would support the old members of the borad as they had been faithful.

Mr. McClelland said he was not actuated by any personal sectarian feelings; at the last meeting of the Council Mr. Douglass was spoken of as deserving the thanks and recognition of the Council. He had spoken to Mr. Douglass and he said he would accept the position if appointed. He had no bad feeling against the retiring members of the board, but their interest was not for all time vested in school affairs.

Mr. Kendry said he would show how consistent Mr. McClelland was. He tried to get Mr. VanEvery in the field first, and when he failed his sympathy had extended to Mr Douglass. He admitted they were both good men. Mr. McClelland had endeavored to press Mr. Patterson in the field.

Mr. Davidson withdrew the motion nominating Mr. Patterson as a candidate.

Mr. Menzies rose and asked to be allowed to say his say. He said he had helped to elect all the Methodists on the board. He was no sectarian. It looked queer to have so many of the one denomination on the board, and he was of opinion it should be mixed. Messrs. Kendry and Douglass would suit him.

Moved by Mr. Menzies, seconded by Mr. McNeil, that John Douglass and James Kendry be and are hereby appointed High School trustees for the ensuing term.

Mr. McClelland asked to be allowed to withdraw the origial motion which was granted, leaving the motion to re-elect the retiring members as the original motion.

Mr. Yelland then took the floor. He was of opinion that the Methodists were generally good men. He thought the Council should be represented in the Board, although they had a double charge, it would have the effect of making them more careful. He was not of the opinion previous to to-night's meeting.

The amendment was put and stood a tie.

The original motion was put and resulted in a tie also.

The Mayor voted in favor of the original motion and the retiring members were re-elected.

The original motion was declared carried.

The vote stood as follows :

YEAS.—Messrs. McNaughton, Kelly, Yelland, Rutherford, Kendry, and Hartley and His Worship, the Mayor.

NAYS.—Messrs. Cahill, Davidson, McNeil, McClelland, Moore and Menzies.

Moved by Mr. Davidson, seconded by Mr. Cahill,—That the Clerk instruct the Commissioners of the Town Trust to furnish the Council with a statement of their accounts, according to law.—Carried.

On motion, Mr. J. Ball was heard by the Council.

Mr. Bell complained of unequal assessment, the poor man being assessed much higher than the rich.

The Council then adjourned for a week.

Dramatic.

Day's International Theatre Company began their second week's engagement in the Opera House last night by presenting to a very fair audience the celebrated military drama, Rosedale, in the usual artistic style of the company. Miss Eugenia Lindeman, as "Rosa Leigh," and Wilson Day, as "Elliott Gray," performed their parts in a very excellent manner, as also did little Annie Bird, as Arthur May—a little son of Lady Florence May, who was stolen by gipsies and afterwards obtained his freedom through Elliott Gray. The scenery was very good, especially the Gipsy Dell by Moonlight and the Military tableau, in which Elliott Gray calls up the guards to defend himself and Arthur May. Little Annie Bird sang in a very becoming manner and received her invariable encore. As a whole, the acting was good and deserving of the patronage received. The company will put on this evening Watts Phillps' beautiful comedy, "Camilla's Husband."

Mayorial Banquet.

At the conclusion of the council proceedings last night, Mayor Stevenson, entertained the members of that body, the reporters and several town officials, in all seventeen, at a fine spread at the Oriental Hotel. His Worship occupied the chair, with Mr. Yelland as his vis-a-vis, having on his right Mr. McNaughton and on his left Mr. Menzies. After the discussion of the splendid collation provided, toasts songs and speeches were the order. Every one of the guests except the prudent scribes, made speeches, and immense fun unbounded, jollity, and a good many stray scraps of wisdom characterized the programme. His Worship is inaugurating his reign in a right regal manner. His hospitality of last night had no doubt the effect of uniting the council more closely, and promoting harmony of feeling, which will in time beget, it is to be hoped, a harmony of action, in the interests of the town, which will prevent the necessity of his Worship having to decide important questions every night during the ensuing year, by his casting vote.

Personal.

Mr. Charles Porter, of Porter Bros., carriage top manufacturers, left this morning on a business trip in Eastern Ontario, which it is hoped will be rewarded with the best of success.

Mr. Joseph McClelland, of the Gospel Army Trumpet, Toronto, is in town for a few days, renewing old associations.

"The Mail" Mulcted.

MONTREAL, Jan. 18.—The jury in the Laflamme-Mail libel suit to-day, returned a verdict against the Toronto Mail for $10,000. A rabid desire to blacken the character, the Mail finds is not always a paying operation.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance, Mutual Reserve Fund; Explanations Necessary.

Insuring Men Should Read This.

(From the Monetary Times.)

It would seem that the trouble which some months ago we asserted was in store for the certificate holders in this concern has already begun. The following extracts from assessment circular No. 23 of the "Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association," dated December 1st, 1885, suggests this. The circular quotes article x., section v., of the constitution, which provides that on the first week-day of February, April, June, August, October and December of each year, or at such other dates as the directors may determine, "an assessment shall be made upon the entire membership in force at the date of the last death of the audited death claims prior thereto for such a sum as the Executive Committee may deem sufficient to meet the existing claims by death," this to be apportioned among the members according to the age of each member. This is evidently inserted to prepare the duped certificate holder for what follows in the December circular:

"The Executive Committee of the Association has ordered that a Mortuary Call equal to one and one-half of one assessment be made upon you, the amount of which is as stated above; and in order to comply with the requirements in making up our annual report of some of the Insurance Departments, notice is hereby given that further Mortuary Calls, each for at least an amount equal to one single assessment are hereby made upon you, which will be due and payable within thirty days from the first day of February, and April, 1886, as provided in article v., section i. of the Constitution, which reads as follows:

"The Mortuary Department shall be distinct from the other departments of the Association; and all moneys received from the mortuary calls, less the cost of collecting, shall pass through said department, and after deducting the expenses thereof, governmental taxes, legal and other expenses, in defending or protecting the Association against the payment of unaudited or fraudulent claims, shall be deposited by the Treasurer in banks or Trust Companies designated by the Board of Directors, to an account to be known as 'The Mortuary Account of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association,' and shall only be withdrawn from said account by transfer on the order of the President and Treasurer to the 'Reserve Fund' or for investment in such securities as may be required by the laws relative to deposits to secure admission for the transaction of business by the Association, as may be approved by the Board of Directors of the Association, and which securities shall be deposited as required by article x., section 2 of the Constitution, or in settlement of death claims under the certificates of the Association, said claims having been first approved by the Executive Committee of the Association."

It must be truly encouraging to the certificate-holder to learn that although he is called upon to pay one and one-half of one assessment this month the call is made in accordance with "Article X., Section V., of the Constitution," and that if he is now assessed in advance for an extra assessment in February and April, 1886, he is so drawn upon in full accord with "Article V., Section I., of the Constitution."

Indeed it appears that the constitution of this concern is so framed that it can be made to cover anything in the way of assessments, either regular or special.

The holders of these certificates are coolly told that their assessments for this month are to be as above stated, "one and one-half of one assessment," but no reason is given for this extra call, except that the Executive Committee has so willed it. It is not even hinted that there has been any increase in mortality among the members. And if we read carefully the next part of the circular: "Notice is hereby given that further Mortuary Calls, each for at least an amount equal to one single assessment are hereby made upon you," we see that mortuary calls are actually being made in advance for five months, although the Constitution with all its elasticity gives no warrant for such procedure. True, this precious document is quoted to show the right of the directors to make this assessment, but gullible indeed must their patrons be if they allow their money to be used in this manner. The plea is put forth that this money is needed for the purpose of making deposits to enable the Association to do business in States requiring such deposits.

Article X., section V., expressly says that the assessments shall be "for such a sum as the Executive Committee may deem sufficient to meet the existing claims by death." Common sense would suggest that this is the only purpose for which assessments should be made, but the innocents who have patronized this concern are informed that in order to comply with the requirements in making up an annual report of some of the Insurance Departments, notice is hereby given, &c., &c.

The Trent Valley Canal.

A Meeting of those Interested in the Canal—Steps to be Taken to Urge the Government to Continue the Construction—A Meeting to be held on Feb. 10th to Decide on the Action to be Taken—A Committe Appointed to Arrange.

A meeting of those interested in the construction of the Trent Valley Canal, met in the Council Chamber yesterday afternoon, at three o'clock, to discuss the propriety of inviting the representatives of all the municipalities along the line of the Canal to meet at an early date, and by the way to supplement the negligence of the Government and to decide which section or sections the Government should be asked to put under contract next, and to arrange to have the wishes of the people in this matter, again strongly and plainly urged upon the Government.

There were present, Messrs. Jas. Stevenson, Geo. A. Cox, R. C. Strickland, Warden; G. Hilliard, M.P.; John Burnham, M.P.; John Carnegie, M.P.P., Dr. O'Sullivan, A. E. Peck, John E. Belcher, A. P. Poussette, Q.C.; John McClelland, Thos. Kelly, Thos. Cahill, John Bell, Geo. Stethem, M. Sullivan, M. Sanderson, T. Pope and others.

On motion of Mr. Strickland, seconded by Mr. Carnegie, Mr. Stevenson took the chair.

Mr. A. E. Peck was appointed Secretary.

Mr. Stevenson said it was unnecessary for him to explain the nature of the meeting. It was thought necessary that some action should be taken to impress upon the Government the necessity of carrying out the work of constructing the Trent Valley Canal. He was confident the Government's intentions were good if the execution was slow. He felt a deep interest in the matter. They were to decide on what steps should be taken to impress upon the Government the necessity of carrying out the work. The Government fully intended to carry it on. The plans were being prepared and some were ready. It took a good time to get them ready. They need not expect them in a moment or a day or a year. The Peterborough Lakefield section would undoubtedly be constructed next. The profile maps and plans were prepared. He had received letters from private parties who were desirous of starting at the Trenton section. It was no political question, nor was it a bait to secure Government support. If the Government refuse to go on with the work they deserve to be censured. Peterborough was the most central point and it should make an effort to arouse the Government to the necessity of the enterprise.

It was then moved by Mr. R. C. Strickland, seconded by Dr. O'Sullivan; whereas the completion of the Trent Valley Canal would give the shortest route to seaboard for the produce of the soil of Manitoba and the Northwest, and the products of the forests, north Georgian Bay, Lake Huron and Superior, and whereas nature has provided along the line of this canal, the greatest water power in the world, which could be utilized in manufacturing these products, thus giving employment to both labour and capital, to the inhabitants of that, he central part of Ontario; this meeting is of the opinion that steps should be taken at once to urge upon the Government the early construction of the canal, believing as we do that it would only be second to the C. P. R. as a national highway.

Mr. Strickland, in making the motion, said he was certain there was an undivided desire that the work should go on.

Dr. O'Sullivan said he had much pleasure in seconding the motion. Having been born on the banks of the Trent, he naturally took an interest in advancing any scheme to improve it. He pointed out the necessity of united action in forwarding the scheme and in waking up the Government to a sense of its duty. He pointed out how the Erie Canal had improved of late, competing successfully with railways in carrying heavy freights. Great advances were being made and would be made. If the canal was built it would be the cause of building up Peterborough. The town would soon be a city. He had great pleasure in seconding the motion.

Mr. Strickland said it was a question of great importance to the town and county, and it was unfortunate there was not unity. A great many objected to the way it was undertaken and worked. They said the Government did not carry out what they had promised. The objecting parties should assist in coming to some decided action in the matter as they admitted it would be beneficial to the community. The publishers who objected should publish their objections for the benefit of all. The wrong should be pointed out to the representatives and they should point it out to the Government and demand what was right. He did not care what Government built it, he wanted to see the canal built. He thought it would be well to call a meeting of representatives from all along the route at Peterborough before Parliament met and decide what action should be taken. He would be in favor of sending one or two men, chosen by the meeting, to Ottawa to lay before the Government the statement of the requirements of the people.

Mr. Carnegie was of opinion that the Peterborough section was the proper one to open first, because it would bring it in competition with railways. He would sooner see any section under construction than none; united effort was necessary. It was not Peterborough against the other sections. Whatever the meeting to be held agreed on should be followed. They would have trouble enough to get what they want.

Moved by Mr. Stethem, seconded by Mr. Kelly,—That to fully impress upon the Government the wishes of the people in regard to the construction of the Trent Valley Canal all interested in that undertaking, especially the representatives of the municipalities along the line of the canal, be requested to attend a meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 10th, at 10.30 a. m., in Peterborough, to decide what united action should be taken before Parliament meets.—Carried.

Mr. Cahill thought it might be as well to have the meeting in Ottawa during the session of Parliament. The deputation would be in favor of going there direct. They would have to come to Peterborough first and then another delegation sent to Ottawa, causing double expense.

Mr. Strickland said the matter could be better settled in Peterborough. They will come to Peterborough with one object. If they all went to Ottawa they could not, otherwise, be so well got together and some would have a double object. It was no use sending a large deputation to Ottawa.

Mr. Hilliard informed the Chairman he was mistaken as to Peterborough section being the favored one. The people of the Trenton district desired that the Trenton section should be done first. He was in favor of calling the meeting at Peterborough. There would be no use going to Ottawa to quarrel. He thought the Peterborough and Lakefield section should be constructed first, as by so doing it would give a stretch of 160 miles of uninterrupted water, and would ensure the finishing of the work. He was under the impression it should be taken in sections.

Dr. Sullivan said he felt that one of the first things to be done was to get the people of Peterborough united. To do this there would be many obstacles overcome. It was contended by some opponents that the work was dangled in front of the people as a political bait. It could not be denied that there might be some truth in it. It was five years since Sir Charles Tupper was here inaugurating the scheme. A considerable sum of money had been granted. At the present rate, it would take many years to complete the canal. He was in favor of a large meeting of representatives to decide what action should be taken and one or two would be a large enough deputation to send to Ottawa.

Mr. Burnham thought it did not matter where the work was begun. He assumed the people would agree that it should be constructed, no matter which section first. The people did not understand much about where it was, or the time it would take. A statement had been made in one of the papers, that he and Mr. Hilliard had been elected on the strength of the construction of the canal. If it was so that they had received support on this ground it was all right. Anything he had said in connection with it he meant. They could not hurry along the government. $800,000 had been expended on the work already. The estimated cost of the work had only been $250,000. The cost of constructing the Peterborough section was estimated at from $500,000 to $700,000, and would probably cost much more. He was satisfied it could be built in 30 years. He was also in favor of a small deputation.

Moved by Mr. Strickland seconded by Mr. Mr. John Carnegie M P.P., that Messrs. James Stephenson, John Burnham, M.P., Geo. Hilliard, M.P., Geo. A. Cox, R. C. Strickland, J. R. Stratton, Thos. Cahill, Dr. O'Sullivan, A. Rutherford, Geo. Edmison, J. J. Lundy and Mr. Sanderson, be a committee to make the necessary arrangements for the meeting of delegates in connection with the Trent Valley Canal, and the first named be the convener of the committee.—Carried.

The meeting then adjourned, and a meeting of the committee appointed to make arrangements was held.

OAK LEAF TEMPLE.

The Oak Leaf Temple was formerly re-opened and re-organized on Tuesday evening by Mr. Thos. Lawless, G. W. S., of the Grand Lodge. The Union Temple of the 4th Line was present in full force; there were also present, representatives from Selwyn and Gordon Lodges. The initiation of twenty-six members and installing of the officers of the new lodge occupied the principal part of the evening, after which there was a lively discussion between the G. W. S. and Union Temple relative to some matters of great interest to the brotherhood at large. Mr. Lawless and brethren from the different lodges expressed their pleasure at the present prospects of the new lodge and revival of the work in Bridgenorth. About eleven o'clock, after appointing a week from Saturday as the night for next meeting, the meeting came to a close. Now that we are fairly embarked in our new enterprise it remains with the people of this community whether it shall prove a failure, as some predict, for with united efforts and perseverance it is bound to prove a grand success.

Miss M. Montgomery and Miss L. Dannard have returned to their duties as teachers at Buckhorn and Belmont respectively.

We have a new teacher this year—Miss Whitfield, from Cavan. She seems to be getting along nicely.

Your correspondent in Bridgenorth appears to be a very mysterious individual. A great many of our good people are dreadfully exercised about his identity. It is hoped that he may soon be proclaimed from the housetops for this terrible uncertainty is likely to lead to more dire results than the discovery of the culprit.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

In this issue we give considerable space to a full report of a cabinet meeting of the Deputy Dominion Government, which took place yesterday afternoon, to consider the best means of waking up the Government proper to a sense of neglected duty. To the composition of the meeting, the course it took and the resolutions adopted, we have no objection. It is eminently proper that such a meeting should take place. It is eminently unfortunate, too, that such a meeting should be necessary. If the Government had in the least degree kept faith with the people of this district; if the Government had shown the least interest in the promotion of the work, or entertained a single honest intention of prosecuting the work in any way, other than as an electioneering scheme, then such a meeting would be unnecessary. The personal expense, inconvenience and trouble, now borne by private individuals, might have been saved. By distinct official declaration, the Government is committed to building this canal. The Government has professed such a deep interest in it that Sir Charles Tupper put himself to the personal inconvenience of giving over the route, and assured the public that the speedy prosecution of the work lay close to the Government's heart. Since the authorities are convinced of the importance of the scheme, and are pledged to prosecute it, why is it necessary to keep them continually stirred up to their duty? No urging by deputations was needed to lead the government to put in the estimates of the year, the sum of $500,000 towards deepening the Welland canal to 14 feet, on which the work of deepening to 12 feet has not yet been completed. And yet that is not so important a work as the Trent Valley water way, especially when its national importance, as a complement to the Canadian Pacific Railway as a connecting link with the seaboard, is considered. If the Trent Valley Canal were completed the Welland Canal would lose much of its importance as an outlet for Northwest produce. The Trent Canal would be a much shorter and directer route. Then why in the face of all this does the Government treat our project with such insulting indifference? There certainly can be no lack of money! The N. P. was to bring everlasting prosperity, and burdensome surpluses were to be the rule. There is no evading the sad conclusion that the Government do not intend to complete the canal for its legitimate use, but that they do intend to use it as a means of retaining the support in the Midland district which they secured in 1882 through its influence. It was then used as an electioneering expedient, and the parties, now most active in waking up the Government, know it was so used, and they cannot be blind to the fact that is kept in abeyance to do duty in the same way at the next elections.

CIVIC CHARITY.

At the meeting of the Council on Monday, Mayor Stevenson in his inaugural address, in one portion of it struck a note discordant with the key-note of economy and straightforwarness in municipal matters, that characterize his policy for the coming year of his administration. In reference to his remarks on the subject of charity, every right-minded person will agree with him, except on one important point, and even that is not objectionable if the proper safeguards are provided. The necessity and duty of the Town Council liberally aiding the deserving poor, are fully conceded; but that any course should be advised or adopted that might lead to the least concealment in the details of expenditure, or, in any way, bar the fullest possibility of investigation, on the part of the ratepayers, is to be regretted. In exceptional cases it is proper to "do good by stealth." Sensitive persons whom misfortune has reduced to want, would, as the Mayor puts it, rather starve than be known as recipients of civic charity. But that their names should be suppressed entirely is not to be thought of. Of course there need not be any parade of the fact through the reports of the newspapers, which, by the way, are the only media through which the public are informed of the doings of their representatives, yet a full record should be kept at the town offices, and a record that should be accessible to any ratepayer who may desire to inspect it. Only on this or some similar condition, can the names of recipients of public charity be kept out of the newspaper records. The Council may be able "to trust the men appointed to look after these matters," but the people must be in a position to trust them also. The present chairmen of the ward committees, are upright, honorable men, but that does not assure us that their successors in after years, may not be the better of a great deal of watching. It is best not to establish a precedent that may lead to evil results. If members of the charity committee have the power and authority to conceal the names of those whom they assist with the town funds, the door for grave abuses is opened, and ratepayers are not in a position to judge of the propriety or impropriety of the expenditures on charity. In the past, and not very remote, history of the town there have been peculiarities, to say the least of it, in the mode of distributing the town funds devoted to charity, and under a secret system the possibilities of graver 'peculiarities' is created. There is no objection to avoiding unnecessary publicity, but the matter must be so arranged that any ratepayer, who chooses, may have facilities for investigating the disposal of the large sums that are every year devoted to charitable purposes.

Pearls and Diamonds.

A London expert tells me that of old the world received each year new diamonds of about $250,000 in value on the average. Suddenly, from South Africa, comes a new supply, exceeding $20,000,000 worth each year for ten years. In consequence, the price of diamonds has steadily fallen from $15 to $3.75 a carat.

Of course, it is known that when they go over a comparatively insignificant number of carats diamonds take a leap into the thousands. Brazilian diamonds are very fine stones, but no stones found there, or in the South African diamond fields, are as lustrous and beautiful as the gems in the gala decorations of East Indian princes, and those which have been obtained in India during the past century by conquest and purchase. These came mainly from the mines of Golconda.

The ex-khedive of Egypt, Ismail Pasha, is said to have the finest collection of diamonds, rubies, and emeralds in the world—aggregating several hundred thousand dollars in value. Large rubies of a lurid, lustrous red, without a blemish, are scarcer than big diamonds, and are consequently more valuable.

Ex-Queen Isabella, of Spain, is said to have the finest pearls in the world, and the unaccountable loss of many of the most valuable gems in the Spanish crown jewels set the tongues of Spanish courtiers going. King Alfonso, Isabella's affectionate son, probably thinks his mamma's continued absence a pearl beyond price.—New York Citizen.

She Rode the Pony.

Deacon Bodkin's daughters, Samantha and Martha, have for a long time watched with longing eyes the young ladies who frequently pass and repass, seated in the beautiful and fashionable dog-carts.

"They are just too lovely for anything," said Samantha. "We must tease pa to buy us a pony and a cart."

"Indeed we must," assented Martha.

"What on airth do you gals want of one er them stuck-up sorter things?" inquired the Deacon. The pesky thing'll run away with ye, likely's not."

"Oh! no, pa, we can drive him. Now, please do say yes," cried both maidens in unison, till importunity won.

"Wall, wall," said the Deacon, "ef you two gals will jest stop talking long enough for me to take a nap I'll think about it."

A few days thereafter a beautiful little white pony made its appearance in the stable.

"Now, gals," said the Deacon, "I've got the hoss, but you'll have to wait a day or two for the cart. Don't go to bein' oneasy now. He'll keep, I'll warrant ye."

The Deacon had scarcely left the house before the two young women led the pony out into the back yard and were admiring his beauty.

"I do really believe I could ride him," said Samantha. "I mean to try it, anyway."

"You haven't any saddle, or habit, either. Suppose somebody should see you," warned Martha.

"Who is there to see but you?" asked Samantha, as she led the pony up to the door-step, and, grasping the mane, mounted "man-fashion."

The pony sprung forward and dashed around the yard as in a ring, at the top of his speed. Samantha screamed and clasped her arms about the neck of the animal, and used all her powers of persuasion to induce him to cease his performance. But all to no purpose. Round and round he went, till suddenly he turned with a whirl and plunged toward the gate. Shrieks of horror burst from the two girls as the gate yielded and the pony, with Samantha, now in a state of marvelous dishabille, clinging to his back, rushed out and tore down the street at the top of his speed. Shriek after shriek rent the air and the deacon, who was quietly wending his way to his office, glancing about, saw the flying steed and its rider.

"Mercy's sake," said he, "I'd orter told the gals I bought that pony from the circus man."

When Samantha and the pony burst into the circus-tent and made a circuit of the ring the effect was certainly thrilling and full worth the price of admission.—Boston Globe.

"Where does Mr. Jenkins live, and how old are you, my dear?" he asked of the pretty attendant at the apartment hotel—and demurely looking into the pockets of her apron she answered, "Suite 16, sir."

In every town in Vermont you hear stories of the wildest kind of liberality. One of the Rutland surveyors told me yesterday of an extravagant proposition which was submitted to him by the proprietor of a flint-rock farm several miles from the town up in the mountains. The flint-rock farmer had some horses. He thought that it would be a good idea to lay out a race-course on his farm, if it did not cost too much, for the purpose of training his horses. So he said to the surveyor: "I want you to come up to my farm and lay out a trotting-course for my horses. Come up and bring your wife, and I will give you all the blackberries you can pick and eat while you are there." The surveyor responded with caustic Vermont dryness: "I don't believe that I can come. I never did care very much for blackberries on the bush."—Vermont Letter.

Fate.

The sun is setting o'er the western hills,
The purple failing is o'er land and sea,
The darkness slowly gathers, 'till it fills
The earth and sky, and settles down to me
The darkness of a life to which no morn
Is promised, for the shadow cannot pass;
And I must grope thro' months and years, so shorn
Of all in life worth living for—alas!
If Time could turn but backward on its track
And roll the years into forgotten space,
Bringing the month, the day, the very hour
In which I might have met you face to face!
O, Fate, so cruel, so unkind, so black
That none can pierce the darkness of thy frown,
Nor thoughts like mine in Lethean waters drown.

He Slew Them on the Spot.

I had the fashionable cut on my hair. Wherever I went, at the bank, on the street, in the hotel, everywhere, my acquaintances met me with such expressions as "who broke it off?" "Been scalped ain't ye?" "Had it drove in, I see!" until my life became a burden, and I wanted to die or kill somebody. Well, I came home and went out to cut some wood for breakfast, congratulating myself that it was over and I was at rest in the bosom of my family, where old sayings do ne'er corrupt nor chestnuts break through and steal, when those hens struck up and began to sing:

"Cut, cut; hair cut. Cut, cut; hair cut."

Human endurance could go no further, and I slew them on the spot.—Boston Globe.

The Wild Girl.

The prevalence of the wild girl, sometimes called the hoodlum girl, is, in the opinion of the St. Louis Republican, one of the bad signs of the times. It ought to know, for she overruns St. Louis like a growth of rank weeds:

"The girl of 16 who will neither sew nor do housework has no business to be decked out in finery and rambling about in search of fun and frolic unless her parents are rich, and in that event she needs the watchful direction of a good mother none the less. There is no objection to fun, but it should be well chosen and well timed. No girl or woman who will not work has a right to share the wages of a poor man's toil. If she does work, if she makes the clothes she wears and assists in the household duties, the chances are she will have enough self-respect to behave when play-time comes, but if she should still be a little 'wild' the honest toil she has done will confer upon her some degree of right to have her own way, ill-judged though it may be. The wild girl usually aspires to prominence in some social circle or other, and her manners and conduct are in greater or less degree designed to attract the following of men. She should remember that followers are not always admirers, and that the most admiration a man ever feels for a woman in a drawing-room is when he looks upon her and says in his own consciousness, 'She is a perfect lady.' That is a reflection that never occurs to him as his eyes fall upon the wild girl."

A Peculiar Formation.

A Movable Mountain in Nevada—A Curious Freak of Nature.

In the eastern part of Churchill County, on the road from Wadsworth to Grantsville, and about sixty five miles from the former place, the Reno Gazette tells us, is a sand dune, which is remarkable alike for its peculiar formation and moving propensities. As far around as the eye can reach is a vast wilderness of greasewood and stunted sagebrush, with here and there abrupt mountain ridges, or a shara, rocky peak. The dune, or sand mountain ridge, which is about four miles in length, and covers probably a mile of greasewood in width, perhaps, formed by the heavy winds which prevail in that section, blowing across these deserts through a natural opening in a small range of mountains, and depositing the small particles of sand that were picked up in a heap where the wind's course is disturbed and an eddy formed.

In the whole dune, which is from 100 to 400 feet in height, and contains millions of tons of sand, it is impossible to find a particle much larger than a pin head. It is so fine that if an ordinary barley sack be filled and placed in a moving wagon, the jolting of the vehicle would empty the sack, and yet it has no form of dust in it, and is as clean as any sea beach sand. The mountain is so solid as to give a musical sound when trod upon, and oftentimes a bird lighting on it, or a large lizard running across the bottom, will start a large quantity of the sand to sliding, which makes a noise resembling the vibration of telegraph wires with a hard wind blowing, but so much louder that it is often heard at a distance of six or seven miles, and is deafening to a person standing within a short distance of the sliding sand.

A peculiar feature of the dune is that it is not stationary, but rolls slowly eastward, the wind gathering it up on the west end, and carrying it along the ridge until it is again deposited at the eastern end. Mr. Monroe, the well known surveyor, having heard of the rambling habits of this mammoth sand heap, quite a number of years ago took careful bearings on it while sectionizing government lands in that vicinity. Several years later he visited the place, and found that the dune had moved something over a mile.

"A DREADFUL BUSINESS."

An old Mobilian was talking to a crowd of younger citizens about the "old times in Mobile" when he was more of a boy than at present. You know most old folks like to talk about "when I was a boy," and this old Mobilian was no exception to the general rule.

"Yes," said he, "I well remember quite a scrape one of our medical students got himself into very soon after the establishment of the Alabama Medical College at Mobile."

"How was that?"

"Well, to tell you the truth, those first students of that medical college were rather a rum set; that is to say, a little wild, and not very particular as to the legality of all their performances, every time.

"In the case referred to three or four of those said students had taken it into their heads to go through the anatomy of a subject in some private room out in the city, all on their own hook, with no professor to molest or make them afraid. They had learned that a very desirable subject had just been stored away in a little country grave-yard about one mile away from the city limits, and that subject they resolved to 'lift;' so having hired old Sam, a colored cartist, to follow them with his vehicle, they provided themselves with a bag, etc.' and late at night struck out for the country.

"The arrangement made was that Sam should stop his cart some two hundred yards from the little grave-yard, so that its tracks might not be seen thereabouts; and when he heard a keen whistle up about the gate he was to proceed thither on foot where, just outside the fence, he was to find something tied up in a bag. He was to shoulder the bag, without questions, carry it to his cart, haul it to a certain house on St. Louis street, deliver it over to his employers, who would meet him there, and receive his pay.

"The students reached the grave-yard in due time, but could not find what they were looking after. It was evident that they had gone to the wrong grave-yard, but where the right one was they could form no kind of idea. It was a 'lost ball' with them; and chop-fallen they were about to retrace their steps, when one of their number, having been struck with a bright idea, exclaimed:

"'I say, hold on, boys! Let's not give up in this dry kind of a way, nohow. If we can't find our subject, let's at least have a little fun. I'll go into the bag and you can tie me up and leave me by the gate. Hide around, and when old Sam comes I think we'll have a good thing of it.'

"The others voted it a capital hit, and immediately the first speaker was tied up in the bag, and when the others had planted themselves out of sight along the fence between the gate and the cart, the promised whistle was sounded.

"Soon after this old Sam was seen approaching the gates with a somewhat unsteady step, caused doubtless by an overload of fear and trembling. The bag with something tied up in it was there as per agreement, and Sam shouldered it. With wool erect he started off in long strides toward his cart.

"Wawm yet, as dis niggah live!" murmured the old darkey between his clattering teeth, as he hurried on. 'Specks dis pusson hain't been dead long, nohow. A dreadful business, dis—a dreadful business. I wishes to de good Lawd dis heah niggah'd a had nuthin' to do wid hit! Wonder whar dem doctor boys am by dis time? 'Spose dem a'r nearly to town afo' now, leabiu' de ole niggah all alone. Dreadful business to be away heah all alone in dis fix.'

"By this time about half the space intervening between the gate and the cart had been overcome, when the ears of old Sam were suddenly greeted with:

"'Say, Sam—ain't I heavy?'

"'Oh, de good Lawd! Who dat speaks?' exclaimed the negro, coming to a sudden halt. 'Sounded mowtal like hit came right out'n dis heah bag, but den I guesses not, cause de man's done dead already; an' if a dead man can talk he's no 'quaintance of mine, an' wouldn' a knowd my name was Sam, nohow. Reckon 'twas somebody else. A dreadful business dis—a dreadful business.'

"Upon this Sam redoubled his exertions to reach the cart. Only a few steps more and the object in the bag, which up to this time had remained entirely stiff and straight, relaxed its sinews and came down with a flop, jack-knife fashion, giving the darkey a pretty good jolt both front and rear. This was too much for the nerves of a superstitious individual like old Sam. Not taking time to pitch his burden from his shoulder, he simply ran out from under it. He was fully ten feet away moving in a bee-line for town when he heard it strike the ground with a chug. Cart and everything else was left behind, and the students along the fence almost dissolved themselves in laughter, as they heard old Sam pounding the ground with his great feet, and even on, after his footfalls were out of hearing, as they stood and traced the course he was taking through the suburbs by the sudden outbursts of dogs along his line of retreat.

"But where was the man in the bag? They had well-nigh forgotten him. Hark! Ground investigation. An arm badly broken, poor fellow!—a dreadful business, sure enough. And so the old negro had not brought his cart for nothing—they found a use for it."—Prof. J. P. Steele, in Arkansaw Traveler.

In the course of a trial at New York it came out that the custom of burying forty-five infants in a single grave was in vogue at Evergreen Cemetery in East New York.

A Buffalo woman went calling recently, leaving a servant in charge of her house. On one of her calls she was surprised to have her ring answered by her own servant. The girl had left her old situation and found a new one during her mistress' absence.

Jacob Kritch, sixty years of age, and well known as president of the Cleveland Axle Company, has married his adopted daughter, a girl of seventeen, who was taken into his family when an infant, and as he was engaged to a spinster aged forty there will probably be a suit for breach of promise. His young wife remained with him for a few days, when he took her back to the school where she had been educated.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on its MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every housekeeper, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $120 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guarantee; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and those we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this papre who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

TAKING STOCK!

No duty devolving upon the business man is so important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's repeating clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognized duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shewn in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out any winter goods left over, at cost.

Police Court.

Mr. R. Purser of Lakefield was up before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged with selling liquor on Sunday, 21st December last. Mr. Purser pleaded not guilty. Mr. O'Meara, who appeared for the defendant, contended that the information had not been laid, until it was too late, as it was more than 30 days from the date of the alleged offence. The Magistrate showed that it was not too late, as the information had been sworn on the 18th. Mr. O'Meara then contended that the information was against the wrong party. The case was enlarged to Friday till 2 o'clock.

An Evening with the Children.

As already announced a concert will be given in the School room of St. Paul's church, on Thursday, Feb. 4th. The pieces are very attractive, and all those interested in the teaching of singing, especially to children, should attend. Admission, adults 25c., children 15c. Tickets if not already obtained, can be had of Mr. Edward Duff, Hazel Brae. The chair will be taken at 8 o'clock, by D. W. Dumble, Esq.

Seeing that neither the residence of the writer nor the description of the recreant husband is given, the lawyer whose name "is not knowen" will meet an opportunity of displaying a good deal of legal acumen as well detective skill.

The market this morning was small and in prices there was very little change. Quotations were:—Butter in prints 17cts., eggs 25cts., beef per cwt. $4 to $5.50, pork per cwt. $5 to $5.50, wood and hay remain the same.

A Chance for Fame.

Two rinks of the Peterborough Curling Club will go to Whitby to-morrow, where they will play a match with the Bowmanville Club for the Ontario Tankard. Bowmanville defeated Lindsay on the Whitby rink. It will be a fine chance for the Peterborough club to retrieve its fame.

Bench and Moulding Planes of extra quality, made by John Dryburgh, for sale by George Stethem.

A Dance and a Death.

The dance at Leon Dion's hotel, Lakefield, last night, was an event of considerable prominence in that village. A number of couples from Peterborough attended the dance and assisted in the merriment. A misfortune occurred on the return trip which put a damper on the pleasure. The horse driven by Mr. O'Toole fell dead on the road near the Red Mills, a few miles out of town. The horse was from Connors' livery stable, and is supposed to have died from overdriving.

"Camilla's Husband."

All who availed themselves of the opportunity of attending the Opera House last night, to hear Day's International Theatre Co., render Camilla's Husband were highly delighted both with the beautiful costumes, and with the manner in which the play was presented. The acting all through showed the marked ability of the company, each one taking his or her part in a very creditable manner. The comedy is very interesting. The sword combat was exciting and skillfully executed. The company repeat "Queen's Evidence" this evening.

Fine Photographs.

There are on exhibition in the window of McClelland's jewelry store, two photographs, giving west and south-east views of the Collegiate Institute building, taken for the Colonial Exhibition to be held in London, Eng., next May, and to form part of the Educational Department's exhibit. The photographs, which are 10x14 inches in size are the work of Mr. Geo. B. Sproule and are superb specimens of the photographer's art, and in this respect will be creditable samples of Peterborough's high skill in photography as well as illustrations of the excellence of our Educational Institutions.

St. Andrew's Concert.

A very pleasant concert was held in St. Andrew's school room last night. The inclement weather, a gale blowing about the hour of assembling, prevented a large attendance, but those present spent a most enjoyable evening. The programme, which presented a delightful variety, opened with "God Save the Queen," followed by one of Mr. Galletly's invariably well-sung songs, "The Murmur of the Shell." The instrumental duet, the "Hercules" Gallop, by the Misses Lech, was excellently rendered, and Miss Carnegie's song, "The Swing," was charmingly and unaffectedly given. Mr. Carter was very happy in his song, "The Children's Coming," as well in his after numbers, "Where is My Girl?" and the response to the tumultuous encore received by him. Miss Maud Edmison's violin solo, an arrangement of Suppe's "Poet and Peasant," was most creditably rendered, and called forth a warm encore, to which she responded. Miss Annie Delaney's song, "The Star," (in French) was charmingly given, and as a recall she gave the "Cuckoo Song" with a durable imitative refrain. In her second number, in which she kindly took the place of Mr. T. Dunn, who was suffering from a very severe cold, she sang "Tit for Tat" with equal success, and as an encore, given in superb style, an instrumental selection, one of Chopin's most difficult classics. Miss 'Tina Menzies' piano solo, "Bonnie Sweet Bessie," with variations, was capitally performed. In recitations Mr. J. Coyle Brown gave a humorous selection from Mark Twain, and Mr. P. E. S. Cooper, "The Death of Montrose." A vocal quartette by Miss Strickland, Miss Morgan, Mr. Geale and Mr. Carter was very effectively presented. Altogether the concert, as far as the presentation of the programme (which was closed with Auld Lang Syne) is concerned, was a decided success.

Personal.

Prof. Dorenwend, of the Paris Hair Works, Toronto, left town to-day for Bowmanville on a business trip. The Prof. did a large business in Peterborough and says he will return in about two months with the very latest styles.

Prof. G. W. Hotchkin, of Albion, N. Y., the celebrated truss man, whose advertisement has been running in the EXAMINER some weeks, is in town and is staying at the Grand Central Hotel.

Dr. Hillier, of Bowmanville, who has been in town the guest of Dr. Bingham, an old college mate, for the past few days, left for home last evening. The doctor's many friends here were pleased to see him looking so well.

Mr. Millar explained that there had been a saving in salaries, and some over estimates had been made. The public school was in debt to the amount of $149.44, while the Institute had a surplus of $189.54.

Mr. Stevenson said the public school would have a surplus when they got their five per cent. from the Town Council. They should get last year's, too. The ratepayers had paid the amount to the town and they might as well have it as allow it to go into the general funds of the town, which it never was intended for. The members of the School Board on the Council should look after it.

Moved by Mr. Kendry, seconded by Mr. Millar that the report and statement be accepted, and referred to the auditors.—Carried.

Mr. Rutherford said it was a matter of congratulation that the work had been done well in and around the Collegiate Institute, and at a much less sum than was estimated. The chairman of the Property Committee deserved the thanks of the Board. He then intimated that he and Mr. Kendry were in future detectives of the Council to look after the money expended by the Board.

Dr. Burnham then moved that the following members of the Board, Messrs Stevenson, Stratton and Dumble, be a committee to wait on the County Council, to solicit a grant for the Collegiate Institute, and that they convey the thanks of this Board for the grant of last year, and trust they will be as liberal this year.—Carried.

Mr. Sproule said he was pleased to report that he had made two Photos of the High School, according to instructions. One view was taken from the west and the other from south-east.

The Board then adjourned.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. The Agricultural Society.

The Annual Meeting of the West Peterborough Agricultural Society—A Large Representation—The Annual Reports Made Officers Elected—Mr. John Carnegie Retires from the Presidency and Mr. John Garbutt is Elected to the Position A Farmers' Institute Probable.

The annual meeting of the Agricultural Society of West Peterborough was held in the Council Chamber yesterday afternoon.

There were present, Mr. John Carnegie, M. P. P., in the chair, Dr. Kincaid, Messrs. Hugh Davidson, John Riddell, H. Owens, J. B. McWilliams, John Stothart, Wm. Rutherford, Andrew Fairbairn, Joseph Bennett, F. E. Bell, John McClelland, Wm. Collins, James Baptie, J. R. Stratton, Geo. W. Fitzgerald, Joseph Tully, Wm. Croft, Jonathan Mann, Robt. Hunter, Jas. Davidson, Joseph Barnard and John Garbutt.

The minutes of last annual meeting were read and confirmed.

Reports from Smith and South Monaghan Branch Societies were read by the Secretary. Smith Society reported a balance on hand of $5.19, and South Monaghan a balance of $42.04.

The President then read

THE DIRECTORS' REPORT.

To the members of the west riding of Peterborough Agricultural Society.

GENTLEMEN.—In presenting their report for the year 1885 your directors are pleased to be able to congratulate you upon the large measure of success which has attended their efforts in carrying out the policy decided upon at your last annual meeting, notwithstanding the several difficulties with which they had to contend.

Unfortunately at the very outset the council of the County were induced to reject in toto the applications of your directors for pecuniary assistance to aid them in enclosing the grounds leased from Mr. Morrow, and erecting thereon the necessary buildings required for exhibition purposes. This decision naturally weakened the hands of those who were urging the town council to make a substantial grant for the same purpose, and at one time it looked very much as if the whole project would have to be abandoned. Ultimately, however, a number of private citizens, with that liberality which ever characterizes them when appealed to in a good cause, put down their names for liberal contributions, while the town council to its credit be it said, wisely abandoned its first intentions of making any grant which it might give conditional upon assistance from the county, and voted us the sum of $300; and this being followed by a grant of $100 from the plucky little township of North Monaghan, your directors feel justified in proceeding with the improvements necessary to the holding of an exhibition of the limited character of the one held last fall. Up to the present time the expenditure on and in connection with the grounds (including about $100 worth of material now on hand for further improvements) foots up to the sum of $1877.58 besides $117.73 for rent and insurance. To meet this expenditure, your directors have received.

Net balance on hand from 1884	$ 272 37
From municipal councils	400 00
Subscriptions	849 00
	$1,622 37

and leaving the expenditure on capital account $255.21 in excess of the special receipts of the year.

Coming now to the ordinary transactions of the year your directors have to report:—

(1) That the total amount paid out for prizes at both the spring and fall exhibitions amounted to $1,265.50, of which $132.40 consisted of special prizes liberally donated by merchants and others at the fall exhibition, and the balance in hard cash, and that this sum was distributed as follows:—

To Horses	$457 00
" Cattle	233 00
" Sheep	202 00
" Pigs	84 00
" Poultry	79 50
" Dairy and Produce	60 00
" Vegetables	54 25
" Grain, etc	44 00
" Fruit	20 50
" Roots	19 25
" Miscellaneous	13 00

Of this total of $1,265.50 it will be noted that no less than $1,065.50 went to live-stock—a sum which your Directors venture to assert has not been equalled for the same classes at any exhibition held outside of our chief cities, and which they venture to think has not been much exceeded at any exhibition of the past year except at those of the Provincial and Toronto Industrial.

The other expenses connected with both exhibitions, including a sum of $90 for tents, which it is to be hoped will not be required another year, amounted to $706.30, bringing the total expenditure on exhibition accounts up to $2,021.80.

(2) Against this expenditure there was received, as arising thereout, the following sums, viz.:—

Gate receipts	$1,441 21
Special prizes	147 50
Rent of booths, stalls, &c	226 50
	$1,835 21

Or within $206.49 of the entire disbursements on this account. Against this sum, and properly belonging to this department of your work, there was, however, also received the sum of $335 for members subscriptions, and $280 from Government, making together a sum of $915, out of which the following payments have been made:—

Our expenditure on buildings, &c	$ 235 21
Our expenditure on exhibitions	208 49
Rent for 1885	100 00
Insurance	17 73
	$ 579 43

Leaving on hand a cash balance of $35.57, with sums amounting to $45 still to collect and with no outstanding liabilities other than the remunerations of the Secretary and Treasurer for the past year—a gratifying result for which your directors desire to take this opportunity of returning their most cordial thanks to all those who in any way assisted them in this undertaking, and without whose valuable aid and sympathy it is needless to say they could not have had the pleasure of handing over to their successors, free of debt, a show ground with such substantial and extensive improvement upon it, and which has proved itself, so far as it goes, one of the best show grounds in the Province, as the one which is controlled, and which we hope, and we believe with proper management, will be owned by this Society in the near future.

Turning from the past to the future, your directors would venture the hope that now that actual experience has proved that, even under unfavorable circumstances, an annual exhibition in Peterborough can be made to pay its way, and that special assistance is only required to provide it with suitable buildings, and that the site selected is conveniently suited for exhibition purposes, the members of the County Council will see reason to remove the decision carried at last January and make a liberal grant towards the erection of the buildings, still absolutely necessary to render the exhibition the success and benefit which your Directors are convinced it can be made under proper management, aided by a generous public support.

Your Directors would also mention as a pleasing sign of the times, that inquiries are being made as to the terms upon which local societies outside of this riding would be admitted to all the advantages of membership at our annual exhibitions, and they would commend all such applications to the most favorable consideration of their successors.

Your Directors cannot close this report without recording their deep sense of the loss which the Society has sustained by the death of Mr. James Campbell, of Walkerfield, who was for many years one of our most active members and who at various times discharged the duties of Director and President, with credit to himself and advantage to the Society, and who, up to the time of his death, continued to be one of our largest exhibitors and warmest of friends.

JOHN CARNEGIE,
Jan. 20th, 1886. President.

Moved by Mr. J. R. Stratton, seconded by Mr. James Baptie,—That the thanks of the Society are due and are hereby tendered the President, Secretary and Directors for the efficient manner in which they had discharged their duties during the past year.—Carried unanimously.

Mr. Carnegie replied for himself and on behalf of the Secretary and Directors, thanking the Society for the motion. He said they attributed their success to the liberal outside support.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Mr. Carnegie said the next business to be proceeded with was the election of officers for the year. He did not, for reasons unnecessary to give, intend to be a candidate for re-election. He had been a member of the society since 1856, nearly 30 years. He gave an account of the position of the society at that date, and read the prize list of 1856, which amounted in all to $152.00. Messrs. John Walton, Jos. Walton and John Garbutt were the only members of the society then besides himself, who survived to tell the tale. He had much pleasure in nominating Mr. John Garbutt as president for the ensuing year. There was probably only one member claim whose preceded that of Mr. Garbutt's, namely, Mr. Wm. Rutherford; but Mr. Rutherford would be unable to devote the necessary time the office required.

Mr. Rutherford seconded the motion to appoint Mr. Garbutt President, which was carried unanimously.

A telephone communication was received from Mr. R. C. Strickland, stating that he was unable to attend on account of a meeting of the Lakefield Council, which was then in session.

Mr. Rutherford was appointed 1st Vice-President, and Mr. Robt. Best, 2nd Vice-President.

The following gentlemen were the elected Directors:—Messrs. G. W. Fitzgerald, R. C. Strickland, J. B. McWilliams, Joseph Tully, Hugh Davidson, John Riddell and J. R. Stratton, Wm. Collins, John McClelland.

AUDITORS.

Messrs. F. J. Lewis and J. J. Hall were appointed auditors.

A communication was received from the Minister of Agriculture, stating that Robert Vance and John Barnum, were nominated candidates for the position of representatives to the Board of Agriculture, for the Counties of Durham, Northumberland, Peterborough and Victoria, and asking the Society to select their candidate.

Mr. Robert Vance was the unanimous choice of the society.

The president left the chair and Mr. John Garbutt took it.

Moved by Mr. Davidson seconded by Mr. Collins that a vote of thanks be tendered. Mr. John Carnegie, M.P.P., the retiring President, for the efficient manner in which he had discharged his duty and advanced the interests of the society during his term of office.—Carried unanimously.

Mr. Carnegie replied briefly, thanking the Society for their kind expressions. He left the Society with regret and hoped they would continue to prosper. He would always do anything in his power to assist the Society. He was sorry there was a feeling of dissunion between the town and county with regard to supporting the Society. What helped the one helped the other and union was necessary. There was no better place in Canada for a successful exhibition than Peterborough.

On motion of Mr. McClelland, seconded by Mr. Davidson, the sum of $50 was ordered to be paid the secretary and treasurer for their services.

Mr. Riddell brought up the subject of a Farmers' Institute. He thought it might be arranged to hold one next summer. A county grant and the establishment of an association was necessary. He thought it might be brought before the County Council at their next session.

Mr. Carnegie agreed with Mr. Riddell, and said he would do all in his power to further the project.

It was moved by Mr. Riddell, seconded by Mr. Carnegie that the directors of the Society take steps to have a Farmers Institute held in Peterborough next fall or winter.—Carried.

The meeting then adjourned.

A meeting of the directors was held immediately after, at which Mr. Hill was re-elected Secretary, and Mr. C. McGill, Treasurer.

Drink in the Time of the Crusades

The Crusaders were great topers, and to them is due the bringing of spirits. The Arabs had reinvented distilling, but the process is described by Galen and Zosimus, writing in the second and fifth centuries respectively. It is thought to have been known to the old Chaldes, and from them transmitted to the Scythians—Tartars, who, like the Koords nowadays, were always making inroad toward the Mediterranean. Alcohol is, of course, an Arabic word—probably the same as the Hebrew "kaal" Chaldee "cohal," meaning anything highly subtilized, whether in powder or spirit. In the former shape it is applied to the finely powdered antimony, the "kohl" with which Eastern women paint their eyelashes. With the article, "al," it is the spirit, or, as Lucifer, in Longfellow's "Golden Legend," says:

"The elixir of perpetual youth, Called alcohol in the Arab speech."

This, by and by, became a formidable rival to the older liquors, of which Giraldus Cambrensis writes: "Their constant habit of drinking has made the English famous among all nations. Both nature and custom make them drunkards. It is a strife between Ceres and Bacchus; but, in the beer which conquers and domineers over them, Ceres prevails." Spirits, however, were not made or much drank in England till the sixteenth century. Even abroad for a long time brandy was only used as a medicine, the efforts of chemists like Raymond Lully being devoted to rectifying what the Arabian Abucasis had taught them how to produce in a hydrated form. How is it that whisky (uisgebaugh—water of life) got into use so much sooner in Scotland and Ireland? It cannot be because mountains are unsuited to malt-making, for much of Ireland is plain, and the Welsh have never changed their ancestral cwrw, (beer), such as it is, for spirits. Moreover, good ales are still brewed in Scotland and Ireland, notably at Drogheda, and the old song about King Arthur's Court testifies that in early times

"The Scot loved ale called blue-cap."

I suppose the habit of spirit drinking was learned abroad. Scots of the Dugald Dalgetty class brought over that and other bad customs, and they were a numerous class, and from them the Colonists to Ulster were largely recruited. Scot-ale (Low Latin, Scot-allum) had, by the way, in old records, a far different meaning; it is, properly, a gathering where each paid his share, and thence comes to mean a public house. In King John's reign the Council of St. Alban's forbids "Viscounts, foresters, and others to hold Scot-ales where they pleased." A King's officer would hold a Scot-ale within one of the royal forests, out of the range, i. e., of the common law, and thither he would compel men to repair, just as a publican nowadays is sometimes able to prevent a man from getting work unless he deals with the "house of call," where workmen assemble and wages are paid.—All the Year Round.

A balloon railroad is to be constructed in the Austrian Tyrol. The balloon will have grooved wheels on its car, and these will run on nearly perpendicular rails, the gas providing the lifting power. Gravitation will be utilized on the down trips.

SIR JOHN'S MISSED MISSION.

Sir John Macdonald has returned home from his pleasure jaunt to the old country at the people's expense—pleasure jaunt, because in respect of the pretended object of his mission he has signally failed, from causes as assigned by his friends, which he must have known before he fled the country, would prevent his effecting anything. The only object he has attained is securing a title for Sir George Stephen. The title seems to have been given in recognition of President Stephen's efforts in building the Pacific Railway. This is, of course, a considerable achievement, but, given an unlimited supply of somebody else's money, it does not require a very brilliant or able man to accomplish great results. When Mr. Stephen had the "combination" of the lock of the public chest it was not so difficult a matter to finish the road. Sir John unfortunately failed to get on Imperial subsidy for a line of steamers from British Columbia to Japan and the East. He utterly failed to make the slightest degree of progress in securing a renewal of a reciprocity treaty with the United States, which his organs boasted he would do. Sir John neglected the golden opportunity—when the United States were friendly to such a project and now when a hostile element has replaced the former authorities, he makes an alleged attempt which has resulted in failure. Sir John not only failed in his mission in respect of the public interests, but he failed to bring back any stirring cry to reanimate the drooping spirits of his followers. The impression prevalent at the time of Sir John's begira, that his visit to England was a personal-political one, in his interest and those of his party, is strengthened by the barrenness of its results as far as important public matters are concerned.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Beer is mayor of Charlottetown, P. E. I. The Scott act is supposed to be in force down there, too.

The next Canada Gazette will, it is said, contain the announcement of the date of the opening of Parliament. It is understood the date will be some time in February.

To a New York reporter, Sir John expressed his belief in the maxim that "Silence is golden." There may be times when it is, but, remarks the London Advertiser, the silence maintained in regard to the remonstrances of the half-breeds led to the rebellion. The silence in this case was brazen.

The Rebellion Claims Commission is sitting with closed doors at Ottawa—reporters are excluded. It is impossible to understand why, if everything is fair and above board, there should be any such concealment. The only reason to be assigned for this star chamber business is that Government pets are making preposterous and extravagant claims, and it would not do for the public to be informed of the particulars. The Section B. commissioners sat in secret, and the result was an award at which one of the commissioners, Judge Clark, of Cobourg, stood aghast, and which he refused to sanction. Everything which the Dominion Government touches seems to at once receive the taint of corruption.

A great crisis is drawing near in Great Britain, and in Ireland, too. We may say it is a matter not so much of days as of hours. The Salisbury government has determined upon coercion in some form, but there is determination on the other side as well. In Ireland a general strike against paying rent is said to be imminent, and beside this may be placed the opinion, now very freely expressed, that the present suspension of the office of Lord-Lieutenant means martial law, or the next thing to it. Britain's military power is to get marching orders to go and collect rents for Irish landlords. Not a very dignified employment for soldiers, we should say, but the landlords are clamouring for their rents, and the government may concede. Meantime evictions go on, and thousands are starving.

Undoubtedly says the Toronto Telegram, an independent journal of Tory proclivities, Mr. Blake is the leading statesman of the Dominion. He takes higher ground than any of the others, and his object seems to be to elevate and improve the tone of Canadian politics. Liberals, Conservatives and non-partisans all speak in the highest terms of his ability as a speaker, and all men do him the justice to say that they believe him to be thoroughly in earnest and thoroughly conscientious in the task in which he is engaged. When in Scotland he spoke at a banquet to Lord Rosebery, and was referred to in the most complimentary terms, and it was admitted that his speech was one of the best of the evening. Certainly there is no other Canadian who could equal the speech he delivered at the London banquet.

A Plundered Province.

M. C. Cameron's Masterly Address—Timber Limits Parcelled Out to Dominion Government Supporters—How the People's Money is Wasted—How the Debt is Piled Up—A Scathing Exposure of Tory Government Methods.

In continuation, from last Friday's DAILY EXAMINER, of Mr. M. C. Cameron's Brucefield speech:—

ABUSES OF SUPERANNUATION.

Last year we spent on pensions to civil servants $210,000. The theory on which superannuation is justified—if it can at all be justified—is that when a man has spent the best part of his life in the service of his country, and has from old age or mental or physical infirmities became unable to discharge his duties, he should not be cast out on the world. But it must not be overlooked that civil servants are well paid, and they should not, when they cease to be civil servants, expect to be pensioned on the public. Whatever merits the system may have when worked honestly—as worked by the present Government it is a system of fraud and corruption. The superannuation allowance is based on the length of service, but under the present management that is easily got over by the Minister arbitrarily adding to the period which the civil servant has served his country, a period varying from one to twenty years—which he never served—and thus largely adding to the pensions which the people have to pay. Let me give you a few samples of how the system is worked. A. Brunel served his country twenty years, his salary was $4,000. His place was wanted for a Tory favorite, he was superannuated for $2,400 a year, and his successor gets $4,000. To increase his allowance, ten years which he never served were added to the 20 years which he did.

THE RIPE OLD AGE OF 26.

E. W. Striker had a salary of $1,200; he was superannuated at 26 years of age—not clearly, from old age—and nine years added to his period of service. The public pay a pension to this man of $900 a year. T. P. Leprohon was assistant clerk of the House; his place was wanted for a Tory friend of the Government—a Tory M. P. Leprohon, in the full vigor of his manhood, was superannuated, and the taxpayers of this country are saddled with a pension of $1,543 a year to this man.

CHAPLEAU'S $20,000 EXCURSION.

In order to provide a pleasure trip at the public expense to the Pacific Coast for the Secretary of State and Nicholas Flood Davin, the Government last year appointed these two worthies a Chinese Commission, in order to solve the Chinese problem—a problem with which the incompetent Government at Ottawa found themselves wholly unable to grapple. The Commissioners enjoyed three months' pleasant junketing in British Columbia, sent in a voluminous report to Parliament, not worth the paper it is printed on, and the people of Canada are compelled to pay the bill to the tune of $20,000.

M'CALLUM'S PERSEVERANCE REWARDED.

Let me give you another instance of how the Tories reward their friends at the expense of the people. In 1874 the schooner Louise passing through the Welland Canal, by the mismanagement of those in charge, broke from her moorings and destroyed one of the lock gates. The M. C. Upper, a schooner owned by Lachlan McCallum, the Tory member for Monck, was passing through the canal at the same moment, and by the mismanagement of the Louise the M. C. Upper was seriously damaged. In 1874 Mr. McCallum presented to the Mackenzie Government a Bill for $8,000 for damages to the M. C. Upper. Mr. Mackenzie referred the matter to the Superintendent of the Welland Canal, who reported against the claim. Mr. McCallum was not satisfied. He induced the Government to refer the claim to the Department of Justice. It was so referred, and on 29th May, 1870, the Department of Justice reported against the claim. Mr. McCallum still persisted in his claim, and by his perseverance induced the Governmen to refer it to the Dominion arbitrators, who on 8th February and 14th July, 1881, reported that the Government was in no way liable. In 1882 an election was about to be sprung on the country. McCallum had in the last elections carried the county of Monck by a majority of 25, and it was known that no other Tory could carry it. Realizing fully the advantage of his position on the eve of an election, he again pressed his claim, and in the session of 1882 we found in the supplementary estimates a sum of $8,000 to Lachlan McCallum for damages to the schooner M.C. Upper in 1874. The item was passed. McCallum got his $8,000, returned to Monck for re-election, ran his election in the Tory interests, spent his $8,000, no doubt; carried his election by 25, with the aid of $8,000, and now sits as the Tory and independent member for the county of Monck. (Applause and laughter.)

IMMIGRATION—MR. BRAY'S LITTLE BOOK.

Last year we spent $527,000 on immigration. A very large portion of this sum is recklessly wasted on a host of useless officials, both in the new and the old world. A political hack, who is unfit for other service, is quite fit to send to Europe as an immigration agent. He is packed off accordingly at the public expense, and the fruits of his labours are never seen by Canadians. A still larger sum is expended in bringing out to Canada a class of immigrants who are utterly unfit for the country, and the consequence is that instead of helping to develop the resources of the country, they become a burden on the industrial classes. I look upon a large part of this expenditure as so much money thrown away. (Cheers.) One of the items in the public accounts of last year in connection with this Department was a curious one. It was a sum of $5,000 charged for printing and publishing an immigration pamphlet. For a long time the Opposition could get no trace of this pamphlet. At last one copy turned up, and what do you think this pamphlet which cost $5,000 contained? It was almost entirely devoted to the photographs of thirteen Canadian Ministers, with flattering biographical sketches of each of these worthies.

As an immigration pamphlet, the thing was a fraud, not worth the paper it was printed on. As a photographic album it was curious, because there was found exhibited a museum of curiosities—(laughter)—birds of every plumage, both alive and stuffed—and most of them were stuffed. (Renewed laughter.)

SUSIE'S DIPLOMACY.

"If I had been born poor, instead of rich, I firmly believe my life would have been much happier," said Richard Maur with a sigh.

Richard was sitting with a friend on a bench overlooking the sea. He would have been a remarkably handsome fellow, were it not for the discontented expression, which always clouded his face.

On the other hand, his companion, Arthur Renmore, was a plain-looking man, with nothing to redeem his want of comeliness but a bright pair of eyes, and a winning smile.

At first sight, women were struck by Richard's appearance; but after a time they gradually began to feel a preference for Arthur, because he talked amusingly, and made himself so agreeable.

To tell the truth Richard was too proud and reserved—a fault for which his parents had been to blame, for he had been a spoiled child.

"Do you really believe what you say, or do you only make that assertion to startle one?" asked Renmore in answer to his friend's remark.

"I really believe that if I had been born to poverty I should be far happier than I am now," returned Richard gravely.

"Then I'll show you a way out of your trouble," said Renmore with his cheerful laugh. "Hand over all your wealth to me, retaining only a pound a week for yourself. I fancy I should get on comfortably with the gold you despise, not to speak of being able to marry Susie."

"Your offer to relieve me of my wealth is extremely kind and considerate," said Richard, unable to repress a smile. "I appreciate the sacrifice you are willing to make for me, but on consideration I find I cannot do without money. If I had been accustomed to poverty it would have been a different matter; but having been reared in luxury, I cannot resign my gold, even if it lead me to destruction. The luxury I have spoken of is necessary to my existence."

"I thought you would draw in your horns, old boy, when I made the proposal. Like most Englishmen, you dearly love to grumble."

"I have something to grumble about, I fancy," said Richard.

"I don't see it; you ought to be the happiest fellow in the three kingdoms."

"Ought I?"

"Decidedly."

"Just let me know why?"

"You wish me to answer frankly, and won't take offense if I give you my real opinion?"

"Speak on. I promise I won't take offense at anything you say. I should like to see myself as others see me."

"Well, in the first place, you are too proud, and think yourself superior to everybody. You fancy yourself ill-treated because the world doesn't value you as you value yourself. To tell the truth, your conceit stands in your way, Richard."

"Conceited and proud!" exclaimed Richard Maur, coloring with anger. "You have utterly misunderstood my character. I am shy and diffident."

"Shy and diffident!" cried Renmore, interrupting him. "You are nothing of the kind. Your sole reason for remaining silent is that you would rather refrain from making any agreeable remark than be led to deliver a foolish one. Now I rattle away, saying the first thing that comes into my head, and yet I am regarded as a very pleasant companion."

"That is what puzzles me," returned Richard. "You say nothing very wise or witty, and yet you always manage to interest everybody."

"Because I try to please others and forget the existence of Arthur Renmore," said his friend; "but, joking apart, old fellow, what is amiss with you this morning.

Richard sighed more heavily than before, digging holes with his cane in the ground.

While staying at the seaside he had fallen hopelessly in love; but his natural suspicion had prevented him from declaring his attachment.

"Arthur," he said, "how can a wealthy man ever believe in the disinterested attentions of a woman?"

"Oh," said his friend with a whistle, "sits the wind that way? I had my suspicions, old boy. But you don't mean to say that you entertain such ungenerous ideas! I could not think so badly of Susie."

"Because you know she is only waiting on you to make a home for her. The case is utterly different. A man without money has the satisfaction of knowing that he is loved for himself alone."

"Bah!" cried his friend contemptuously. "You either do not love the girl, or you are a bigger fool than I take you for. Strange how people who have no troubles will go out of the way to make them. Well, I am off to get some luncheon; are you coming?"

No, Richard would stay where he was. He felt rather glad to be left alone with his thoughts.

Young, rich, and handsome, he was as utterly miserable as any mortal with such advantages could be. His money seemed to stand between him and happiness, and yet he would not have parted with it for any consideration. He prized it so much that he feared that it might have the same value in the eyes of the girl he loved. What if it induced her to give him her hand without her heart?

Edith Palmer was comparatively poor, and he knew she loved pleasure. She had often told him as much, and complained of the dullness of her life. He remembered how her cheeks had flushed and her eyes sparkled with excitement when he had spoken of the gay world of fashion, or described the different places he had seen.

"No, I will not ask her to be my wife," he told himself with intense bitterness. "My money is too great a temptation for any woman to resist. She would accept my offer if she didn't love me, and I should discover it afterwards, and be wretched for life. I will leave S—— as soon as possible, and try to forget her."

He had risen now and turned his back upon the sea, and some children who were playing in the sand gazed after him in surprise, wondering what made that big man look so cross. He certainly had anything but an agreeable expression on his face as he walked along nibbling the ends of his long mustache.

"Hallo, Mr. Maur," said somebody at his elbow, in a clear, young voice.

"Oh, is it you, Jack?" returned Richard. "Where are you off to now?"

Jack was Edith Palmer's brother, and Richard had shown him many kindnesses, completely winning his boyish heart.

"I was looking for you," said Jack. "Come up to the house and see Sue, will you? Father says he does not like the look of him. Do come; there is nobody at home; Edith has gone to see Susie Brown."

"All right, I'll come," returned Richard, relieved and yet disappointed that he would not see Jack's sister.

The Palmers lived in a small house near the sea, and Jack dragged Richard into a small back parlor, communicating with the drawing-room by folding-doors.

"Wait here," he said, "while I go and look for Joe."

And he dashed out of the room in search of his retriever before Richard could utter a word of remonstrance.

The young man sat down on one of the shabby chairs, and relapsed into thought. The more he saw of the poverty of the Palmers, the stronger grew his conviction that his money must have an influence on Edith.

Presently he began to grow impatient at Jack's prolonged absence, and the next moment he heard the sound of voices.

"I am so glad I persuaded you to come back with me,"—it was Edith Palmer who spoke—"I should have felt so dull all by myself."

"I am very glad I came," said Susie, for he instantly recognized the voice as belonging to Arthur Renmore's sweetheart. "What on earth is the matter with you, dear? You are not the girl you were."

"There is nothing the matter with me," cried Edith, and to prove it she burst into tears.

"Don't cry," said Susie, wiping away the bright drops with her own little lace handkerchief. "I do believe you have some secret you are keeping from me. Have you seen Mr. Maur lately?" she added abruptly.

"Do you think I am crying about Mr. Maur?" asked Edith, coloring with anger.

"I don't know, I am sure," returned Susie. "I could cry if I was in your place. The man ought to propose after all the attention he used to pay you."

"Susie!"

"Don't look so cross," cried her friend. "You know it is true. He did take up your time, and led people to believe he was serious. It is shameful of a man to treat a girl as he has treated you. I will say what I think—there! He is a mean thing, and I would like to tell him so to his face."

Now it happened that Miss Susie was sitting opposite a looking-glass, and happening to lift her eyes, she saw Mr. Richard peering in upon them.

She was a very quick-witted young lady, and did not regret at all the allusions she had made to him. As she sat looking into the mirror a plot was being formed in that youthful little head of hers, with its soft golden curls.

Her own engagement was such a happy one, in spite of its length, for she had been engaged eight years, and had two more to wait until Arthur would be in a position to marry, that she longed for her friend to experience the same happiness.

Perhaps a few judicious words would bring the laggard in love to the point. She hoped so, for he had looked very affectionately at the back of her friend's head.

She felt strongly inclined to indulge in a fit of laughter, but she resisted the impulse, feeling that it would spoil all. She resolutely averted her eyes from Richard's reflection, after satisfying herself that he was waiting eagerly to hear what they had to say, and said, in a preternaturally solemn voice:

"Edith, I do believe you love the man."

The words almost caused Richard to betray himself. He trembled like a leaf, for on Edith's next words depended the joy or misery of a lifetime.

There was a deep silence for a few minutes, and then Susie lifted her friend's head and looked at her tear-stained face, which was suffused with blushes.

"It is but too true," said Edith. "I do love him. You have discovered my secret, and I know you will not betray it. I would die with shame if he knew I had given my love unasked."

"But, Edith, he loves you," said Susie, coloring at her friend's words, for she could see the delight in Richard's eyes as he listened to Edith's avowal.

"He loves me!" cried Edith, almost contemptuously. "Why, Susie, he might marry anybody with his wealth and position."

"Bother his wealth!" cried Susie. "You don't love him for his wealth."

"Heaven knows I don't!" said Edith. "If he were to lose all his money it would make no difference to me."

"My darling!"

And Richard pushed open the folding-doors and caught Edith in his arms, while Susie discreetly retired to the next room, and took up a book, leaving the ardent lover to make his own excuse for playing eavesdropper.

"Oh, Mr. Maur," cried Jack, dashing into the room. "Why, where is he, Susie? I left him here just now."

"He is engaged," said Susie demurely. "Why, what's the matter, Jack?"

The boy walked over to the window and put his hands in his pockets, whistling; but there was a suspicious moisture in his bright eyes, and Susie anxiously repeated her question.

"Father had Joe shot," he said. "He was sullen and fidgety; but I know Mr. Maur would have put him right if he had seen him. Poor old Joe!"

"Don't grieve, Jack," said Susie, putting her hand on his arm. "You've lost your dog, but you've found a brother-in-law."

"What?" cried Jack, "is it true? Where are they? Let me go to them."

And he dashed unceremoniously into the next room, the loss forgotten for the moment in his delight at the unexpected news.

Susie smiled and sighed as she followed him into the presence of the happy lovers.

But her own happiness was not so far off as she thought, for Arthur, coming into an unexpected legacy, insisted that it should be a double wedding, and in this he was aided and abetted by Edith and Richard.

"To think that all my happiness is owing to these folding-doors," said Richard to his friend.

"And Susie's diplomacy," muttered Arthur.

"What?" asked Richard, enquiringly.

"Nothing," returned Arthur. "We are two lucky fellows, old boy!"

"Indeed, we are," said Richard.

And up to the present time neither of them has had cause to alter his opinion.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and those we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

TAKING STOCK!

No duty devolving upon the business man is so important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's repeating clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognized duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shown in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out any winter goods left over, at cost.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Piano Tuning.

Mr. G. J. Gumpricht is in town to-day. Orders left at Messrs. Taylor & Macdonald's Drug Store or at Mr. Thos. Menzies Bookstore will be promptly attended to. tf

"Cable."

The oldest and most reliable brand of cigars in the market. Free from all chemicals and artificial flavorings.

A Carnival at Lindsay.

The carnival season open at Lindsay to-night. A masquerade carnival will be given in the skating rink, under the auspices of the Foresters of that town, who leased the rink for the season. It is likely some parties from town will attend.

At the Opera House.

Day's International Theatre Company repeated "Queen's Evidence" in the Opera House last night to a large and delighted audience. The play is an excellent one and the company's presentation of it is exceptionally good. To-night is Miss Lindman's benefit. "The Creole" will be presented. No doubt there will be a large audience.

A Race for the Rinks.

To-morrow night, Friday the 22nd, is the date of the first of the Fire Brigade Band series of grand Masquerade Carnivals in the Charlotte Street Rink, and don't forget it. Don't wait for a pistol shot to start you, but when you are all ready, go. It will be the grandest affair of the kind ever held in town. The prizes offered are well worth contending for, and no doubt the competition will be keen.

Lumbering and Snow.

Mr. Frank Bell, foreman in the lumber camp of Mr. D. Ullyott, situated about ten miles north of Minden, was in town to-day, and reported that the snow in the woods is between three and four feet in depth, and is rather too much of a good thing, as its superbundance, rather hinders lumbering operations than helps, as a moderate body of snow would do. It is probable that the area of deep snow extends pretty well over all the northern lumbering districts.

Dancing and Deportment.

Prof. R. J. McDonald, the celebrated dancing teacher, has arrived in town. He has secured the Parlor Roller Rink, where he will conduct classes in dancing and deportment. The classes will be organized on Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings, 28th and 29th Jan., in the rink. Juveniles' class meets at 4.15 of each day and adults' at 7.15 in the evening. Circulars may be had at the bookstores. Prof. McDonald comes highly recommended and may be relied on as a thorough instructor of the art.

Counterfeit Insurance.

The story of a man who gave a five dollar bill to a blind man, and received four dollars and seventy five cents in change, and on being laughed at by his companion for his verdancy for not observing that the man was not blind in reality, observed wisely that "he must be mighty near-sighted not to see that the bill was counterfeit," finds its parallel in the way that many people take out policies in the wild-cat and co-operative assessment companies. They are so busy in getting cheap insurance that they become near sighted as to what is passing current with them for the real article.

An Evening With the Children.

The following is the programme of the concert to be given, mainly by the pupils of the Hazel Brae Home, in St. Paul's school room on Feb. 4th:—

Crying Song.....
Toy Symphony, arranged for piano, first and second violin, and six toy instruments. (Haydn.)
The Three Little Pigs.....A. S. Gatty.
Vocal duet.....
The Wandering Savoyards.....Taylor.
The Cat and Her Kittens.....Crampton
Who Killed Cock Robin? ballad dialogue.....(R. L de Pedrall.)
Home Again Returning.....Root.
Evening Prayer.....Bellini.
National Anthem.

Bench and Moulding Planes of extra quality, made by John Drybergh, for sale by George Stethem.

Messrs. Salisbury and Bro. have received a lot of the finest Mucilage in the world. Try it.

Two Tramps.

Two tramps lodged in the cells of the police station last night and were turned out into the cold world at an early hour this morning to tramp through the deep snow in search of a meal.

Heavy Snowfalls.

The snow which fell last night to a depth of about a foot, furnished amusement and exercise for many persons this morning. The town snow-plows were out and did good service. One was driven down the east side of George street, piling the snow up on each side to the disgust of a number of clerks who had to shovel it away from windows and doors.

Curling.

The following are the names of the local curlers who went to Whitby to-day to play with the Bowmanville club in the Ontario Tankard contest: C. McGill, W. G. Ferguson, W. H. Budden, and Geo. Dunsford, skip. R. S. Davidson, Dr. Boucher, A. McNeil, and T. P. Attrill, skip. Both are strong rinks and no doubt will make a determined effort to win the tankard.

Meetings Disturbed at the Barracks.

There was a lively time at the Salvation Army barracks last night. A number of the congregation or audience disturbed the meeting by making a considerable noise and carrying on with two young women. One of the Salvationists remarked that one woman would lead a great many men astray. Considerable cross-firing was indulged in.

Behind this Time.

The Toronto paper are clucking considerably over the fact that the first conviction was made in that city on Wednesday, under the Gibson amendment of last session, to the Crooks Act, by which the buyer as well as the seller of liquor in prohibited hours is liable to punishment. Why, Peterborough is far ahead of the Queen city in this respect. Over two months age, Police Magistrate Dumble passed the penalty for infraction of the amendment upon the first victim.

Personal.

W. D. Hughes, travelling passenger agent of the C. P. R., and brother of Mr. B. Hughes, of the town agency, is in town to-day.

Mr. R. M. Dennistoun is to be congratulated on having successfully passed the first intermediate examinations of the Toronto Law Society.

Mr. Alex. Elliott, uptown ticket agent of the C. P. R., was called away from town yesterday by the serious illness of his mother, and he arrived at Warkworth just as death put an end to Mrs. Elliott's sufferings.

Mr. J. T. White, special agent for Eastern Ontario for the Canada Life Assurance Company, is in town. He represents one of the best company's in the Dominion and we bespeak for him a good reception at the hands of the insuring public.

Mr. David Wallace has resigned the position of Secretary for the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company. Mr. Wallace has been in the employ of Mr. Hamilton for the past seventeen years, during which time he has been a faithful and energetic servant of the firm.

Religious Professions of Teachers.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Kindly insert this item of news to correct the gossip that is current since the elections:—

For the Peterborough High and Public Schools the religious professions of the teachers employed by the Board are as follows: Episcopalians, 6; Presbyterians, 6; of Baptist leanings, 2; Methodists, 8; religious views not fixed, 1. The different Protestant churches appear to be fairly represented in the above list. Croakers should be silent.

The Queen v. Riel.

A Blue Book Issued, Giving a full Account of the Trial.

OTTAWA, Jan 20.—The government has just published a blue book, entitled, "The Queen v. Louis Riel," containing a verbatim report of the evidence adduced at the Regina trial, the speeches of the prisoner and the judge's sentence, the decision of the Manitoba judges; also the appeal to the privy council. The petition for a medical commission and a list of the petitions for commutation of sentence are all published, so that the work embraces the whole case. There are 63 petitions presented to the Governor-General, 13 of which were for the appointment of a medical commission and the remainder for commutation of sentence. Fifty-one are from Quebec, three from Manitoba, one from Chicago, one from Whitehall, N. Y., one from Minnesota, one from Ottawa, one from the county of Essex and one from France.

Imperial Parliament.

Opened by the Queen in Person.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—Arrangements are being actively pushed for to-morrow's reassembling of Parliament. Her Majesty will be present in person. Barricades have been placed all along the streets through which Her Majesty will pass. Press messengers, who have been furnished with blue passes, are alone to be allowed to travel freely about the streets. A special order forbids the use of opera glasses in the House of Lords. The officials have already received 25,000 applications for the 480 seats in the strangers' gallery of the House of Lords. Great preparations are being taken for Her Majesty's safety. The military guard inside Buckingham palace will be doubled, and a cordon of police will guard the outside. The line of procession on Thursday will be guarded by a large body of troops assisted by 4000 policemen. The Queen arrived in London to-day from Windsor castle. She drove from the railway station to Buckingham palace in an open carriage and received an ovation along the route. Her Majesty is in excellent health.

The royal procession to-morrow on the occasion of the opening of parliament will include seven state carriages. The carriage occupied by the Queen will be drawn by eight cream colored horses. Her Majesty will be escorted by the household cavalry. The royal party will leave Buckingham palace at 1.30 p.m. The route will be along the Mall, past St. James' park and the Horse Guards to Whitehall, then through Parliament street to the houses of parliament. The Queen will alight at the peers' entrance to the house of lords. Guards of honor and troops will be stationed all along the route. A salute of twenty-one guns will be fired on the arrival of Her Majesty at Westminister. The Queen will be attended by pursuivants, heralds, knights of arms, gentlemen at arms, yeomen, pages, grooms, etc., according to the custom of mediæval times. In the house of lords the Queen will sit on the throne, the Prince of Wales on her right hand, with the Princess of Wales and Lord Salisbury. The lord chancellor will read the speech.

THE GOVERNMENT'S INTENTIONS.

LONDON, Jan. 20.—It is learned on authority that the government, if defeated on the Irish question, will not resign, but will appeal to the country.

FORECAST OF THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

The speech will recommend coercion measures for the better governing of Ireland, local government for England, to be followed by a similar measure for Scotland and Ireland, a hope that the affairs of Egypt will be satisfactorily settled, and a congratulation that the peace of Europe has been maintained under very trying circumstances.

After the First Day of January next my terms will be Cash, unless otherwise specially agreed.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

Brilliant Inauguration of the Session Yesterday.

The Queen Goes in State to St. Stephen's.

The Contents of Her Majesty's Speech from the Throne.

Coercive Measures for Ireland Foreshadowed.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The weather to-day was inauspicious for the reappearance of the Queen in public. It was a dull, heavy day. The streets were covered with snow and slush. Promptly at 1.30 p.m. the Royal party left Buckingham Palace for the House of Lords. The route of the Royal pageant had been covered with gravel. This prevented the horses from falling and enabled more rapid progress to be made. Her Majesty rode in an open carriage drawn by eight horses. The Household Cavalry rode as an escort to the Queen. Large crowds lined the streets through which the Royal procession passed. Her Majesty was greeted with hearty cheers all along the route.

The scene in the House of Lords was very brilliant, Peers and Peeresses, Judges, Ministers and Bishops were present in large numbers in full court dress. Gaslight was used in the chambers, owing to the absence of the sun. This enhanced the beauty of the scene, as it showed more fully the brilliancy of the jewels and the splendour of the dresses worn by those present. The Queen looked as if she was suffering from cold.

THE FORMAL OPENING.

Another correspondent cables: This afternoon Parliament was formally opened by the Queen in person. There was a brilliant assemblage in the House of Lords when the Queen's Speech was read.

Her Majesty, in her speech, said her relations with other powers continue friendly. The differences with Russia regarding the Afghanistan boundary have been satisfactorily adjusted. She trusted the work of the Russo-English Frontier Demarcation Commission, already advanced, may tend to secure a continuance of peace in Central Asia. Referring to the rising in Eastern Roumelia, Her Majesty says her object in the negotiations which followed the outbreak has been to bring the inhabitants of that country, according to their wish, under the Prince of Bulgaria's rule, while maintaining unimpaired the rights of the Sultan.

The Queen regrets she had been compelled to declare war against King Thebaw of Burmah, owing to acts of hostility by himself and subjects. The gallantry of the forces under Gen. Prendergest had rapidly overthrown the Burmese forces and she had decided that the most certain method of insuring peace was to be found in the permanent incorporation of Burmah with her empire.

Negotiations respecting the rights of the French on the coast of Newfoundland had been satisfactorily concluded. With Spain, also, an agreement had been reached giving the British the same commercial rights as the Germans in the Caroline Islands. Parliament would be asked to adopt certain measures rendered necessary in the convention relative to international copyright, to which the Queen has agreed.

Turning to

INTERNAL AFFAIRS

the Queen said:

Gentlemen of the House of Commons My Lords and Gentlemen:

I regret to say that no material improvement can be noted in the condition of trade or agriculture. I feel the deepest sympathy for the great number of persons in many avocations of life who are suffering under a pressure which I trust will prove transient.

I have seen with deep sorrow a renewal since I last addressed you of an attempt to excite the people of Ireland to hostility against the Legislative union between that country and Great Britain. I am to any disturbance of that fundamental law, and in resisting it I am convinced that I shall be heartily supported by my Parliament and my people. The social, no less than the material condition of that country, engages my anxious attention. Although there has been during the year no marked increase of serious crime, there is, in many places, a concerted resistance to the enforcement of legal obligations, and I regret that the practice of organized intimidation continues to exist. I have caused every exertion to be used for the detection and punishment of these crimes, and no effort will be spared on the part of my Government to protect my Irish subjects in the exercise of their legal rights and in the enjoyment of individual liberty. If, as my information leads me to apprehend, existing provisions of the law should prove to be inadequate to cope with these growing evils, I shall look with confidence to your willingness to invest my Government with all necessary powers.

Bills will be submitted for transferring to Representative Councils in the Counties of Great Britain local business which is now transacted by Courts of Quarter Sessions and other authorities. A measure for the reform of county government in Ireland is also in preparation. These measures will involve the consideration of the present incidence of local burdens.

A Bill for facilitating the sale of glebe lands in a manner adapted to the wants of the rural population will also be submitted to you, as well also as Bills for removing the difficulty which prevents the easy and cheap transfer of land; for mitigating the distressed condition of the poorer classes in the Western Highlands and islands of Scotland; for the more effectual prevention of accidents in mines; for extending the powers of railway commerce in regard to the regulation of rates, and for the codification of the criminal law.

I trust that results beneficial to the cause of education may issue from the Royal Commission which I have appointed to inquire into the working of the Education Acts.

In these and in all other matters pertaining to your high functions I earnestly commend you to the keeping and guidance of Almighty God.

The Irish Question.

In Parliament Lord Salisbury said, referring to Ireland, that the government had refrained from renewing the crimes, not because there had been a prospect of returning order in that country. The experiment had, however failed although every chance had been given to make it succeed. Nothing, he said, could exceed the patience of the Earl Carnarvon in carrying out his mission of peace. The disease, said Lord Salisbury, existed in Westminister and not it Ireland, and the government must try to stamp it out here. The words of Mr. Gladstone, he declared, were answerable for the Irish evils. Mr. Gladstone had not spoken, he said, with sufficient firmness concerning the integrity of the empire.

Mr. Gladstone in regard to Ireland said he wished the Queen's speech had been more explicit. He was convinced that only a gentle and conciliatory handling of the Irish question would be effectual. He had always striven to eliminate the elements of wrath and passion in discussing Ireland. The exercise of candor and justice could alone afford the smallest hope of solving the difficulty. Whatever, he continued, it may be necessary to do for Ireland should be done promptly. In the name of heaven let us maintain a union. We have been maintaining it for 600 years. Let us not deviate from the path of good temper and self command, but forgetful of every prejudice, let us strive to do justice to the great, the gigantic interests committed to our charge. (Loud cheers.) Mr. Gladstone spoke for an hour and twenty minutes, and was greatly applauded throughout.

Mr. Parnell said that he had always believed that if the principle were admitted that Ireland was entitled to some form of self-government, the settlement of the details would not be found a formidable task, and that there would be no great difficulty in securing the empire against separation. He, himself, although a Protestant, feared no danger to the ministry in Ireland from the Catholics. The whole question was one of reasonable or exorbitant rents.

No Home Rule.

Lord Randolph Churchill, secretary of state for India, proposed that the debate be adjourned. He wished the house to clearly understand, however, that it would be impossible for the present government even to sanction an Irish parliament. He added that the government would be prepared, when the proper time arrived, with a scheme to improve local government in Ireland.

Chinese Starving in B. C.

VICTORIA, B.C., Jan. 21.—Three Chinese were found starving in tent at Port Haney yesterday. There is great destitution among the Chinese on the mainland, and many are dying with hunger. The situation is little better here, many coolies subsisting on garbage. The city authorities have decided to take steps to relieve them.

She Stopped the Procession.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—While the royal procession was returning to Buckingham palace, a horse ridden by a trooper kicked a boy standing at the edge of the pavement. The Queen, who was an eye-witness of the accident, stopped the procession and enquired as to the extent of the lad's injuries. On being told that they were not serious Her Majesty resumed her homeward journey.

Enforcing the Scott Act.

Hon. Mr. Mowat thinks the Dominion Government should enforce its own Act.

On Wednesday a deputation waited on the Hon. Mr. Mowat in reference to securing assistance in enforcing the Scott Act. Among other speakers was Rev. B. B. Keeper, who will be well remembered in connection with the Scott Act Campaign in Peterborough county. Referring to the operation of the Act in Simcoe county, where he had been working in the interests of the Scott Act for some months, Mr. Keeper said that in Simcoe the Dominion officials were very slow to act. Notwithstanding that the Commissioners were somewhat in sympathy with the Act, they were slow to move. The Scott Act Executive in Simcoe had taken the matter up, and a large number of fines had been imposed. There being no Police Magistrate for the county, the parties convicted had the right of appeal. This right had been largely taken advantage of by the parties fined. Nearly every case had been appealed. There now stood from $1,500 to $2,000 in fines which had been imposed, but not yet collected on account of appeals being made. A system of terrorism had prevailed in Simcoe County which had induced magistrates to avail themselves of technicalities to dismiss cases. The absence of Ontario officials and the withdrawal of the Dominion License Commissioners left the county of Simcoe to-day at the mercy of the liquor traffic, and liquor was being sold there openly. From the day that Ottawa had attempted to lay its hands on the liquor traffic the Scott Act had been paralyzed. He appealed to the Ontario Government to help them.

Hon. Mr. Mowat in reply to the deputation said the House would soon open, and they would be then able to determine what they should do. The Commission ought to enforce its own Act as his Government endeavoured to enforce the Ontario Act. They would carefully consider the whole matter.

Fried Potatoes a la Macaire

Baron Brisse says that this excellent dish was originated as follows: Louis Philippe and his family were breakfasting at the Tuileries one morning, and the Prince of Joinville was so absorbed giving an account of one of his voyages that he refused a splendid dish of fried potatoes which was handed to him. His narrative finished, he turned around and asked for potatoes, but such justice had been done to the dish that none were left. A footman ran to the kitchen for more, but there were none ready.

There was no time for hesitation; the audacious chief threw the trimmings of the potatoes served at the royal table into a frying-pan with a large lump of butter, tossed the misshapen pieces until of a golden color, pleasing to the eye, and further adorned by a dash of finely chopped parsley. The Prince found the potatoes so good that he inquired the name of the dish. No one knows what answer he received, as being very deaf, he repeated: "Ah fried potatoes a la macaire; I find them excellent and hope they will often be served." The King and Princess laughed so heartily that the tears rolled down their cheeks, but the deed had been done and potato trimmings cooked in a frying-pan had received their baptism.—From the Cook.

The Dry Goods Bill.

Nothing seems more unreasonable than the dignified superiority of the husband or the brother who first presents the unimportance of dress, perhaps consistently fortifying his words by his own example, and then turns to criticise his wife or daughter for being less well dressed than some fair neighbor who gives her whole mind to that absorbing department. Does he really suppose that a woman can be born more by giving to it three-quarters of an hour in the spring and three-quarters of an hour in the autumn, which are all, as James Parton boasts, that a man now needs to devote to his tailor? Let the wife neglect what has been called the "gospel of good gowns" as completely as the husband disregards that of good hats, for instance, and let him see how he likes it. But whether he adopts the policy of indifference or not, let him at least be consistent. If we hold it the duty of intellectual women to be well-dressed also, let us give them full credit for doing the double duty. If, on the other hand, we make no such demand on them, let us omit all the jeers at the faded "water proof" of the literary woman and the dyed and turned dress, and even the short hair—cut off, let us charitably suppose, to save time for study or for work. In the same way if the husband expects his wife to be well dressed, let him not sneer at the time mercilessly spent in shopping, or even groan at the bills when the results of shopping come in. Let him not complain as I heard a young husband the other day, that two women when they meet always talk about dress, when perhaps the very point under discussion was the question how to dress as their husbands wished without its costing those husbands too much money.—Harper's Bazaar.

WORKING MEN ALWAYS LAST.

The Dominion Government, not unlike other corporations, begins economy at the wrong end. Instead of lopping off the heads of high-up and, in great measure, useless officials, it begins with the humble wage-earner "Wages" may be cut down or cut off altogether, but "salaries" are too sacred to handle in the way of economy. The Government has decided to make a show of retrenchment in the expenses of the Intercolonial Railway. And the officials of the road, with salaries of course, are engaged in carrying out the orders of the Government to dismiss, in the dead of winter, a large number of "mere wage earners—mere mechanics." Commenting on this procedure, the well-informed Moncton, New Brunswick, Transcript says:—"The ostensible object of these wholesale dismissals is, of course, economy. The parlor cars, champagne and colored porter extravagances, the festivities and profligacies indulged in by some of the management at the expense of the country, the general mismanagement of the road, and the sums paid to maintain useless and lazy officials—who can't or won't work, are ashamed to beg or steal, and who, because of political influence at their back, have to be supported at the expense of the country—these things have enlarged the deficit between revenue and expenditure to a yawning chasm, which even wholesale manipulation of the accounts cannot cover up, and therefore, while 'wasting at the bunghole' they attempt to 'save at the spigot,' first by grinding down the employes to starvation wages and then by turning them adrift altogether.' The real explanation, the Transcript believes, is 'that the repairing of cars has to follow the manufacture of cars and repairing of locomotives to private establishments in St. John to help recoup them for their contribution to the Tory bribery fund in the St. John and King's elections.'"

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There will have to be some more immigration pamphlet printing. The amount received by the Mail last year falls short of the $10,000 LaRamme verdict, and of course the organ will have to be recouped.

The Mail refuses to accept the 10,000 dollar verdict of the jury in the Laflamme libel suit, and threatens to carry the matter to the Privy Council. Of course, if Sir John advises his organ that it has good ground for an appeal to the Privy Council then—well—all know what the result will be.

The speeches of Mr. M. C. Cameron, of Huron, have created a tremendous buzzing among the Tory organs. Had Mr. Cameron failed to be effective nothing would have been said, but the organs feel that Mr. Cameron's exposures are very damaging to the Government, and hence the violent language employed towards him.

The Canadian people, says the St. John Globe, have gone heavily into debt in the last few years, borrowing money for Mr. George Stephen to build in the quickest time the greatest railroad in the world. Mr. Stephen has in the meantime become rich enough to sustain the rank of baronet, and the Queen has so created him.

The closing sentences of Mr. Blake's great speech at the London banquet were a fitting conclusion to that earnest and mighty deliverance; and they bespeak says the St. John Telegraph, the character of the man—a man of large abilities, with full faith in the greatness and justness of his cause, but recognizing above these a mightier power that controls the destinies of men and of nations.

The Tory organs have a stock complaint against Mr. Blake—he is too cold and austere—not convivial enough. Of course, Mr. Blake is not in the habit of setting them up for the boys, and of setting the example, too; he does not indulge in chasing pretty waiter girls round a hotel dining-room, or otherwise affably filling the role of a great statesman. If it is a reproach to be honest and sincere, Hon. Mr. Blake has justly earned the condemnation of his Tory detractors.

A Plundered Province.

M. C. Cameron's Masterly Address—Timber Limits Parcelled Out to Dominion Government Supporters—How the People's Money is Wasted—How the Debt is Piled Up—A Scathing Exposure of Tory Government Methods.

In continuation, from yesterday's DAILY EXAMINER, of Mr. M. C. Cameron's Brucefield speech:—

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER.

For eighteen years Parliament has got on with one Speaker. No one complained, and no one had reason to complain. Last year in order to provide for a subservient supporter, the Government introduced and forced through Parliament a Bill to create a Deputy Speaker at a salary of $2,000 a year—a sum which Canadians must pay while Tory rule continues.

LIBRARIANS.

For eighteen years we have managed to get on with one Librarian; last year the Government, in order to provide, at the public expense, for another camp-follower, introduced and forced through Parliament a Bill to create the office of Second Librarian, with a salary of $3,000 a year. The office has been filled by the selection of Mr. Griffin, ex-editor of the Mail, a man whose editorial utterances were so low and scandalous that respectable Conservatives insisted on his dismissal. He was dismissed, and appointed Librarian at $3,000 a year. One of the punishments Canadian electors have to bear for sustaining a Tory Government is the payment of this man's salary during his natural life.

FRANCHISE BILL.

In the session of 1882, and in order to handicap the Liberal party, the Government forced through Parliament an infamous Gerrymander Bill, the effect of which was to defraud the Liberal party of ten seats to which it was fairly entitled. In the session of 1885, for the same purpose, the Government introduced and forced through Parliament a still more infamous Bill, the object of which was to capture the whole electoral body through the Revising-officers. I shall not now discuss this scandalous measure. I content myself at present by saying that this uncalled-for measure has added 600 to the army of Canadian officials, and at least $4C0,000 to the annual expenditure of this country—a vile job, perpetrated for a vile purpose, which no free people should tamely submit to. (Cheers.)

OUR COSTLY COMMISSIONER.

The Tories are in the habit of boasting of their loyalty—it is only a boast at the best. They some time have a peculiar way of manifesting their loyalty. Once it was by stoning and rotten-egging a Governor-General—now it is by appointing a Lord High Commissioner to the Court of St. James, at the public expense. Sir Charles Tupper is the man who now fills that distinguished position. I have no objection that Sir Charles should fill a position that any figurehead can fill, if it gratifies his vanity, but I do decidedly object to the Canadian taxpayer being called on to pay the enormous costs of this ornamental and useless mission. We pay this official $10,000 a year; we pay his little contingencies and travelling expenses, about $5,000 a year; we have paid about $42,000 for a mansion in London as a State residence for our Canadian Ambassador; and during last session we were called on to pay a large sum—up in the thousands—to furnish this mansion from attic to cellar. Some of the items are peculiar. I commend them to the consideration of the taxpayer of Canada, especially to our temperance friends. Let me give you a sample. We paid $1,200 for carpets, $900 for a refrigerator to cool the Ambassador's wine; we paid for three dozen port wine glasses, three dozen sherry glasses, three dozen champagne glasses, three dozen claret glasses, four dozen tumblers, and twenty-two decanters. Such extravagance, such unnecessary expense as this—deserves the severest condemnation of the people of this country, and I trust when the day comes that that condemnation will be marked and distinct. (Cheers.)

THE N. W. REBELLION.

We have spent and will spend over $5,000,000 to suppress the Northwest rebellion, to pay for rebellion losses, to pension the wounded and maimed in that terrible conflict, a conflict provoked solely by the maladministration, the gross neglect, and criminal misconduct of the First Minister of Canada. For seven long years the Halfbreeds in the Northwest petitioned in vain for a recognition of their fair and honest demands. They remonstrated, they memorialized, they complained in every way known to a free people against the cruel wrongs done them. Their petitions and their prayers were treated with silent contempt, and it was only when hope deferred made the heart sick, that they took up arms against the sovereign power of Canada. They were defeated. Some fell on the field of battle. Some are fugitives in a foreign land. Some are serving long terms in the Provincial Penitentiary. Some perished on the scaffold. I am not concerned at present with either justifying or condemning the recent executions, but what I do declare is, with a full knowledge of all the facts submitted to Parliament, that the first men that ought to have been tried, convicted, and condemned, are men who provoked the rebellion. The loss of human life, the spilling of human blood, the sorrow and mourning in Canadian homes, the ruin, desolation, and death among the Halfbreeds of the North-west caused by this rebellion, all rest on the shoulders of this reckless and incompetent Administration. (Cheers.)

THE LICENSE FIASCO.

We have spent $50,000 in resisting the honest and well-founded claims of Ontario to manage in her own way and through her own Legislature the liquor traffic in this Province. This was a contest on the part of Sir John Macdonald wholly unprovoked and wholly unjustified—a contest entered upon by the First Minister to gratify his personal vanity (because he posed as a great constitutional authority), and for the still baser purpose of controlling the power and patronage that would be secured to him through the liquor trade. When he entered into a contest on constitutional law with the Hon. O. Mowat he had more than his match. (Great cheers.) The result of Sir John Macdonald's intermeddling with a law—which the Privy Council tell him in plain words he knew nothing about, has been to saddle Canada with $50,000 of costs in resisting the claims of Ontario—at least $250,000 in attempting to enforce his own unconstitutional law through 630 officials, whose every act from the day they were appointed until the day they were dismissed by the judgment of the Privy Council has been illegal—$75,000 illegally extracted from the pockets of the liquor-dealers; every dollar of which must be refunded. The result of this case ought to teach Sir John a lesson—a lesson that he is even yet, I hope, not too old to learn, humility and due submission to the judgment of abler and better men. (Cheers.)

THE DISPUTED TERRITORY.

We have spent at least $20,000 in improperly resisting the honest claims of Ontario to the disputed territory—a property that always belonged to Ontario—the possession and uses of which Ontario ought to have enjoyed during the last twelve years, but out of which she has been wrongfully kept by a traitor to the best interests of his native Province—a traitor by the judgment of three of the best men in the Empire—a territory whose wealth in mines, minerals, and timber is almost incalculable. But even when the lords of the Privy Council declared the boundary fixed by the arbitrators the correct one Sir John Macdonald, true to the instincts of his corrupt nature, declared that Ontario should reap none of the fruits of her honest victory—that not a foot of the mines, not an ounce of the minerals, and not a stick of the timber should be hers, and he took prompt and active measures, as far as he could, that this shall be verified. While the case was pending in the Privy Council Sir John Macdonald vigorously set to work to parcel out the timber lands in the disputed territory among his camp-followers, his hungry hangers-on, his political dead-beats and Tite Barnacles, and so almost every mile of the timber lands in the disputed territory has been licensed by this arch traitor to the best interests of Ontario. I wish the electors of Ontario to know how the domain of Ontario has been thus parcelled out by Sir John among his political friends before and since the judgment of the Privy Council was delivered. The following are the names of Sir John's favourites who hope to fatten on the spoils stolen from Ontario. You will readily recognize them as unswerving supporters of the present Tory Government:—

Melville Millar

A Financial Heavy Weight.

To be Answered by Pa.

An Ottawa despatch says: Mr. McLelan the new Minister of Finance, appointed his son his Private Secretary, and also a second class clerk, so that the youth draws altogether about $1,200 a year. He is about as fit for his duties as his father is to manage the country's finances. For some weeks after being installed the young man took all business letters addressed to the Minister, opened them and as he did not understand what they referred to, he, instead of handing them over to the Deputy Minister or other departmenal officer, endorsed each with the words 'To be answered by pa,' and stuffed them in pigeon holes. That is official endorsement on letters. The rage of the Deputy Minister, when he found complaints coming in that business was not being attended to and discovered the cause, can easily be imagined.

Keene.

Good sleighing.

Carnival this week.

Going to be a dramatic and musical entertainment in Keene town hall in a couple of weeks. Local talent.

The "open temple" entertainment in Allandale, last Friday night was a financial success. The room was more than crowded—it was jammed, many having to stand during the whole evening. The proceeds were over thirty dollars.

The friendly competition between the Keene curlers resulted in Mr. McCrea carrying off the pretty little prize, a miniature curling stone pendant in moss agate, set in gold.

Mr. James Anderson, (eldest son of the late Donald Anderson) who has been here attending the death-bed of his father, leaves for Allegheny County, New York, next week. He is in the petroleum business.

Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association of New York.

Insurance Too Costly to Last.

From the Insurance Times, N. Y.

Things are often not only not what they seem, but just the opposite. It is not wise, therefore, to take assertions on trust, however positive, and sometimes the very excess of asseveration begets, in discerning minds, serious misgivings, and leads to investigation and the discovery of the most audacious misrepresentation and falsehood. In the sphere of life insurance, for instance, there is no greater pretender to cheapness and economy than the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association of New York, yet what does an examination of its sworn report to the New York Insurance Department disclose but startling evidences of extravagance, the ruinous cost of conducting its business being at least double that incurred by any regular life company?

The Mutual Reserve Fund Life paid its agents last year as commissions, including admission fees retained by them, $133,121.27; itemized examiners were paid $18,676.30; its officers, general agents and other employes, as salaries and travelling expenses, $55,647.20; for advertising it paid $15,288.02; for printing, $5,020.20; for rent and taxes, $8,429.07; for postage, $3,378.26; furniture and fixtures, $.3097.25; for general office expenses, stationery, expressage, etc., $8,653.20; for LAW EXPENSES, $10,782.29; and cost of levying and collecting assessments for the year, expressage and commission, and including law expenses incurred in the settlements of death claims, it disbursed $37,068.82, making its total running expenses $310,305.88, against $479,067.25, the sum total paid for death losses, claims and returns to members!

What man or body of men in their senses would consent to pay $310,305.88 of their own funds to have $479,067 of their own funds disbursed to their heirs! And remember, too, that this $310,305.88 running expenses includes $10,782 legal cost as one item, and how much of the other item, $37,068.82, was squandered in litigation is artfully covered up, but doubtless the far greater portion was consumed in fighting claims. What claims? The claims of the heirs of the deceased certificate-holders—a consideration which can scarcely be calculated to make the living certificate-holders feel reassured or comfortable.

We have given nothing but the Mutual Reserve Fund Life's own figures and facts; and we ask any candid and sensible man who has them before him whether it is not madness—or at least the the height of folly—for any husband or father or head of a family to place those who depend on him, those he loves and who will, after his death, need some protection against want and distress, at the mercy of the men who are managing the Mutual Reserve Fund Life, or any other assessment life insurance association conducted as extravagently, recklessly and in a manner as certainly, in the course of time, to end in disaster and loss to all concerned except the arch manipulators who run the scheme for their own enrichment, regardless of the consequences to others, however dependent and helpless and worthy of compassion and aid.

To insure in such assessment life insurance schemes as we have mentioned, is gambling with death. If you die within a short time after insuring in one of them, your heirs may possibly collect the amount of your certificate; but if you survive as long as you perhaps reasonably expect, the chances are all against the fulfillment of your contract.

Montreal is negotiating for the electric light.

The Toronto board of trade's annual meeting took place Wednesday. The income for the year was $5,363 and expenditure $4,790. President Darling said the outlook was very hopeful.

James Hermiston, a printer, aged 29, dropped dead while proceeding to work in Kingston. It is thought an artery burst as he vomited great quantities of blood.

Before the Battle.

On the hill we stood silent. Away o'er the farm-lands,
In the haze of the distance came marching the foe,
Yellow-ripe are the fields, and blood-red is the reaper—
Hush! the tread of the Southron swells faint from below.

Are we ready? Stand fast! Have ye death in your muskets?
Is there shell in your guns? Have ye heart for the fight?
If ye win on this day victors' peace is your guerdon;
If the enemy triumph God pity the right.

Are we ready? Stand fast! Trust your souls to your Maker,
Loose the steel of your belts, feel your songsters of lead—
Hush! the chant of destruction anon shall be pealing,
And the iron-mouthed choristers mourning their dead.

Are we ready? Stand fast! Keep the thought ever with you
That the grip of the foe holds the hammer of Thor.
That 'tis swung for this battle pitched here is the gateway,
Here the keystone of union, the keystone of war.

* * * * * *

Was I ready? Faint heart. But the scene was inspiring!
There, the grand panorama the painter had wrought.
And my goddess of war there so proud in her beauty—
Shame! carpet-knight suitor, for defeat have you fought?

Then I charged once again at the heart of my lady,
As we stood on the hill for the battle that day—
O! marvel of war, before the battle I won her,
And her humble word "Yes!" was the truce to the fray.

—William Hudson Harper, in the Current.

The Cause.

If we ask why the Chinese have remained in a strange and immovable condition for so many centuries, the answer is clear, though it may at first seem a little inadequate. The Chinese have no imagination. People without imagination never change their habits. The Chinese are clever, cultivated, skillful craftsmen, admirable imitators, but they have no imagination, and that explains everything. They are perfectly satisfied with the dull routine of a monotonous, laborious life, so long as they have enough to eat and buy opium, and to gamble away a few cash now and then with the dice or dominoes, or over the glorious combat of two valiant crickets. They are a practical folk, and so long as things are pretty comfortable, they do not see the use of vain aspirations. They are content with a domestic system which an imaginative and romantic mind could not endure. They are happy in a total absence of religion, because they do not perceive that religion brings cash, and they feel no inward promptings toward the spiritual life. They have a scheme of morality which, if carried out, must unquestionably deserve a very high place among the attempts to govern the animal whom Swift acutely describes as not rationale but rationis capax, by the pure principles of reason. Here again the imagination is wanting; the highest kind of intellect, which connotes a quick and vivid imagination, demands something more than a moral system as the ground of conduct. Let it be a theology, a divine life or an enthusiasm for the great human family, there must be a sentiment for the imagination to clothe with a compelling beauty and strength. The only sentiment the Chinese possess, the only trace of the power of imagination, is in their reverence for their ancestors, and their feeling that whatsoever a man does brings renown or shame upon his forefathers. This is a more powerful and ennobling sentiment than is generally perceived—it is the pivot of Chinese life; but it is too large and complex a subject to be now discussed at length. Apart from this one redeeming attribute, the worship of the great dead, the Chinese mind is singularly pale and colorless, strikingly devoid of the vivifying qualities of western intellect, empty of romance, enthusiasm—in a word, without imagination.—Edinburg Review.

Flowers in Japan.

In houses wherein reside one or more daughters of a marriageable age an empty flower-pot of an ornamental character is encircled by a ring and suspended from the window or veranda by three light cranes. Now the Juliets of Japan are, of course, attractive, and their Romeos as anxious as those of other lands. But instead of serenades by moonlight and other delicate ways of making an impression, it is etiquette for the Japanese lover to approach the dwelling of his lady bearing some choice plant in his hand, which he proceeds to plant in the empty vase. This takes place at a time when he is fully assured that both mother and daughter are at home, and I need scarcely say that neither of them is at all conscious that the young man is taking such a liberty with the flowerpot outside their window. It is believed that a young lover so engaged has never been seen by his lady or her mamma in this act of sacrilege—at any rate, my friend tells me that during his long residence in Japan he never heard of any one being detected in the act or interfered with in any way. The fact is, this act of placing a pretty plant in the empty flowerpot is equivalent to a proposal to the young lady who dwells within, and this eastern fashion is, as I think, a delicate and most harmless way of proposing to a lady. The youthful gardener, having settled his plant to his mind, retires, and the lady is free to act as she pleases. If he is the right man she takes every care of his gift, waters it, tends it carefully with her own hands, that all the world may see, in a word, that the donor is accepted as a suitor. But if he is not a favorite, or if stern parents object, the poor plant is torn from the vase, and the next morning lies limp and withered on the verandah or on the ground below.—Gardener's Monthly.

Professor (describing an ancient Greek theatre)—And it had no roof. Junior (who fancies he has caught the Professor in a mistake)—What did they do, sir, when it rained? Professor (taking off his glasses and pausing, angrily)—They got wet, sir.

Grocer (in great haste)—Well, little girl, what can I do for you? Be quick, now. I'm very busy.

Little girl (frightened)—P-please, sir, ma m-mistress sent me f-for a p-pound of cheese, b-but if you are very b-busy you can give me only h-half a p-pound.—N. Y. Times.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, of ir ra MARVEL. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $150 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guarantee; and that two sales a day would give a profit of over $175 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to every one out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the grangers, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

TAKING STOCK!

No duty devolving upon the business man is so important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's repeating clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognized duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shown in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out any winter goods left over, at cost.

The match with Lakefield will be played during the afternoon, and with Bobcaygeon in the evening. The town club may be expected to distinguish themselves and extinguish the village clubs.

The Carnival To-night.

The first carnival, under the auspices of the Fire Brigade Band, will be held this evening in the Charlotte street rink. Besides the ordinary attractions of a carnival and the amusement it affords, there will be a number of valuable prizes given. In the evening a local organization, called the "Batoche Minstrels," will parade the principal streets, proceeding to the rink at the opening of the carnival, where a large stage has been erected, from which they will give a comic and interesting performance. The price of admission is 25 cents, children, half price.

Miss Lindeman's Benefit.

"The Creole" was presented in the Opera House last night by Day's International Theatre Company, as a benefit for Miss Eugenia Lindeman, the leading actress of the company. The house was crowded. The play is an excellent one and the performance was exceptionally fine. Miss Lindeman's acting was particularly admired, although all the parts were well taken. The costumes were magnificent and appropriate. To night "Under the Gaslight," a superior play, will be given, in which a locomotive crosses the stage. The scenery and effects used in this play are particularly good. A matinee will be given to-morrow afternoon.

Curling.

The Peterborough curlers were defeated yesterday at Whitby, by the Bowmanville rinks by four shots, after a hard battle. The rink skipped by Mr. Attrill succeeded in defeating their opponents, while Skip Dunsford's rink was six shots behind. Peterborough club is now out of the tankard contest. The following are the rinks with scores made:—

The giant icicles which have been dangling from the roofs of the buildings along the east side of Chambers street for some time, were chopped away to-day. Some were of gigantic size and it was feared they might fall on some pedestrian with fatal results.

Opening of the Quarry Toboggan Slide.

The P.A.A.A. snowshoeing and tobogganing club will formally open their toboggan slide at the quarry, to-morrow afternoon, if the weather is favorable. The slide is in excellent condition, and has a run of about a quarter of a mile. Some rare sport is anticipated.

A Painful Accident.

David Francis Quinlan, son of Mr. M. Quinlan, had the misfortune to break his leg this morning. He, and a number of companions were amusing themselves in the play room of the Murray street school before nine o'clock, when he fell, some of the other boys falling over him, with the above result. Word was telephoned Mr. Quinlan, informing him of the accident, who immediately drove to the school and brought the young sufferer home. Dr. O'Sullivan was called in and set the broken limb. The lad is doing as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

Important Auction Sale.

The public are informed that a very important credit sale by auction of the thoroughbred cattle, horses and sheep; farming implements, wagons, carriages, sleighs, hay, grain and farm produce will be held at "Walkerfield Farm," the property of the late James Campbell, Esq., on Wednesday, Jan. 27th. Mr. Campbell was an enthusiastic cattle breeder and his fine herd will be sold without reserve, and an opportunity will be presented of securing some of the best bred stock in Ontario. The herd comprises four cows, one bull, "Peterborough Chief," two bull calves, two heifers and two heifer calves. The horses comprise a fine large matched team of bay horses, five and six years old, and a brown mare coming three years old. Twenty-three thoroughbred Southdown sheep—three rams and twenty ewes—will also be sold. In addition there will be sold the usual belongings to a thoroughly equipped farm, such as mowers, reapers, ploughs, drags, drills, fanning mills, etc., etc., together with wagons, cutters, sleighs, buggies, harness and general barn furniture, dressed and undressed lumber, etc. The sale will begin at 10 o'clock a. m.; the miscellaneous articles will be offered first, and the stock sale will begin about 2 p. m. Credit will be given on the usual terms with a cash discount of ten per cent., on all purchases over $15. The sale will be entirely without reserve, and persons in need of first-class stock will do well to attend this sale, which will present an opportunity of securing thoroughbred stock at moderate prices. Remember the date, Jan. 27th.

A Horse Stolen.

On Wednesday afternoon, a horse and cutter belonging to Mr. Ferguson of North Monaghan, were stolen from the sheds of St. Paul's church. The horse was left in the sheds in the morning by the children of Mr. Ferguson, who are in the habit of driving to school. The parties who took the horse evidently drove it hard all afternoon, as it was seen at night standing tied in front of Mr. Jas. McClelland's residence, Sherbrook street, heated and tired looking. Passers-by who noticed the horse, thought it was owned by some person in the house. It was left there all the stormy night uncovered. In the morning a person noticed the animal shivering. He happened to drop into Mr. P. Hamilton's where he mentioned the fact. Mr. Hamilton immediately sent Mr. Russell, in his employment, to enquire into the case. He found that the occupants of the house in front of which the horse stood knew nothing about it. Mr. Russell took the horse to Mr. Hamilton's stable where it received proper care and attention. In the meantime Mr. Ferguson had notified the police of his loss. They were unable to trace it up to that time. Mr. Hamilton in making inquiries learned that the horse had been stolen from Mr. Ferguson and that the police were in search of it and informed the police that it was in his possession and also made them acquainted with the circumstances. The horse was returned to Mr. Ferguson, who was of course pleased to get it back. The parties who committed the theft have not been arrested yet. They deserve to be severely dealt with for the heartless manner in which they treated the animal, in addition to the theft. It is thought that a humane society or one for the protection of dumb animals is sadly needed in town.

Latest From Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Jan. 21.—It is considered curious that Mr. Costigan, Minister of Inland Revenue, was not among the Ministers who attended Sir John's reception at the railway station or city hall on Tuesday. Mr. Costigan was in the city and no reason can be assigned for his absence. It is hinted, however, that Sir John has given him "notice to quit," and the fact that Mr. Thompson, of Nova Scotia, is being taken around to public meetings in the country and introduced as the representative of Irish Catholics in the Cabinte gives color to this rumor.

Mr. N. F. Davin, of Regina, [illegible] it is reported, sent in a [illegible] Government demanding either [illegible] lice of profitable printing [illegible] a secretaryship to [illegible] missioner as a reward for his [illegible] and puffery of Lady Macdonald during [illegible] visit to Lieutenant-Governor [illegible].

Suppression of the National League Means War.

DUBLIN, Jan. 21.—United Ireland, in an article entitled "Beakers Ahead," says: "Suppression of the National League will inevitably lead to conspiracy. Belleville.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Jan. 21.—The condition of the flooded district has grown decidedly worse since yesterday, the water having risen another foot or more. The damage has not been very great, as merchants generally removed their goods from cellars, or raised them on racks hastily constructed. Some persons are removing from the flooded district.

WILLIAMS' MEMORIAL FUND.

A general meeting of the Williams' Memorial Association was held in the Firemen's Hall, Walton street, Wednesday afternoon.

The treasurer presented a report showing the total subscriptions already secured amounted to $1,048.30. Of this amount Port Hope has subscribed $628; Toronto, $35; Peterborough, $134; Lindsay, $68; Cobourg, $118; Millbrook, $88; Hope, $123 50.

Mr. Chisholm explained that the object of calling this meeting was to secure assistance of the committee. He spoke of the cheering reception he met with everywhere, and congratulated the Association upon their now being placed, by the success already met with, beyond any doubt of a triumphal result. Mr. Chisholm, in graceful terms, acknowledged the valuable services rendered in Cobourg by Lieut.-Col. Graveley; in Peterborough by Mr. Hilliard, M. P., in Lindsay by Lieut.-Col. Deacon, at Toronto by A. M. Cosby, Esq., and in Millbrook by Major Howden, all of whom had most cheerfully given their time and valuable assistance. He urged that the Association should appoint collectors to carry on the work in Port Hope.

The secretary reported that 2,000 circulars had been sent out to all parts of the Dominion, and also suggested that arrangements be made for an active canvass in Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa and elsewhere.—Guide.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

DUAL REPRESENTATION.

(From the Toronto Globe.)

We observe that for some issues past the Peterborough EXAMINER has been attacking the principle of dual representation in relation to Town Councillors and High School Trustees and Town Councillors and Town Trust Commissioners. The platform The EXAMINER takes, that no person should hold two offices the performance of the duties of which is liable to cause a conflict in interest and to place the office in an anomalous position, is unassailable and unanswerable. We have always taken the same stand, and commend the EXAMINER for its efforts to bring about a better state of affairs. We have frequently had instances in municipal matters here where an individual holding two offices has been placed in such a position that he has combined in himself both the representative status and the responsible power, a state of matters which is both unwise and unsatisfactory in its operations. This applies not only to Provincial offices but to Provincial and Dominion offices combined. It might be thought harsh to decree that no person should hold two offices, but there is no reason whatever why the Ontario Government should not enact that no person holding such an office as that of Inspector of Weights and Measures, for instance, should be allowed to become an Alderman or School Trustee or anything else for which he would have to ask for the votes of the persons with whom he has to deal in his official capacity.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[The publisher of THE EXAMINER does not hold himself responsible for the facts asserted, or the opinions expressed by correspondents.]

Those Weighing Machines.

To the Editor of THE DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—In your issue of the 7th of January, 1885 I noticed a piece in your local columns, headed "Weights and Measures," and that several of our farmers have been pretty sharply dealt with before the Police Magistrate, all about those weighing machines. Now for a little explanation on this matter. We as Canadian Brittons, feel proud of our Canadian laws, but that some of those laws are being caried out far beyond what they were intended for, is what I want to show. That Government officers are becoming an overwhelming burden of taxation on our country, and not only this, but that some of them are becoming a perfect nuisance to law abiding citizens and that a gross injustice is being done by them to our farmers is quite clear to my mind. Now most of the farmers in this County, especially those in the vicinity of the lakes and rivers, remember well when the Fish and Game law was brought into full eforce, just after the Conservative Government was defeated in 1873. Now, no particular revision or change was given to the act that I am aware of, but the carrying of it out to the extreme, is where the sticker came in. Prior to this time Mr. James Bird was the Fish and Game Inspector, if I remember right, and received his pay from year to year without carrying out the law to those extreme points, and all parties were satisfied, except a few of those mixed aristocrats, who, having formed themselves into a Fish and Game Society for the express purpose of having the law carried out to its fullest extent, that it might serve a grand double purpose; first, that it might be a deadly blow to the Reform candidate at the then next election, and in this it had its desired effect, and, secondly that those so-called aristocrats might have plenty of game to amuse themselves with, just when the busy farmer must mind his work. Now I would have no objection if all parties were stopped from fishing or hunting during the close season, but to think that when the fall of the year comes, when the farmer could go out for an hour or two of a night, after his day's work is done and spear a few fish, for they will not bite at that time of the year. But, O, no, we must fine him $20 and costs. Well that is not enough, his fishing tackle must be confiscated. But of course the plea was that the fish might become more plentiful in our lakes. Well, sir, the fact is, they are scarcer in our lakes to-day than they were ten years ago, for this reason. Go back to our lakes in the summer season and you will find a camp on nearly every rock and island in the back lakes, occupied by those aristocrats dragging the lake with their lines just for the sport of catching fish. They perhaps use a few of them, if they chance to have a servant who knows how to clean and dress them, and the balance is thrown out on the rocks to spoil. But, now let us look for a little while at those weighing machines belonging to the farmers. What do they use them for? Did you ever see a load of wheat brought by a farmer to a grist mill or store house to be sold without being weighed by the buyer, or did you ever see a farmer go to a grist mill with five bushels of wheat to get exchanged for flour without being weighed when delivered and his flour weighed out to him? How many firkins of butter, or how many porkers did you ever see Mr. Flavelle or Mr. Webber buy without being weighed either on the market or on their own scales? Not one. Well, then, you say what do they use them for? I will tell you, sir, that they may have some idea of how many pounds or bushels are being taken off their produce when brought to market—if pounds seldom worth their while to speak of it—if bushels, full time they would. But you say what about those hucksters? In reply to this I would say, there's not a man, let him be farmer, huckster, grocer, or what he may, if his scales are wrong he knows it, and if he is an honest man, he will endeavor to have them put right at once, to save his own reputation; if he is a rogue, will testing his scale make him any better? Not one particle; you say then where is the line to be drawn in this matter? I say just here, let Mr. Government office stay in his office and if the honest man wants his scale tested let him go there and have it done; and if the rogue will produce his meat on the market short in weight, prosecute him. There is the proper law for this; but, no, sir, this won't do—must test every farmer's scale, and if they are the least trifle wrong confiscate them. I wonder how long before they will get legislation to confiscate our farms. But the sum and total of the whole matter is this: the honorable body will soon meet at Ottawa, and the stewards want to be able to give a good account of their stewardship lest they be put out of the vineyard in these troublesome times when the great politician is being weighed in the balance and perhaps will be found wanting.

Thanking you kindly, Mr. Editor, for the privilege of occupying so much space in your valuable columns, and hoping our farmers will give this careful consideration,

I remain yours,
A FARMER.

Items of Interest to Working Men.

TORONTO.

All trades are very dull, and with little prospect of immediate improvement.

The union cigarmakers of Toronto are working under the eight-hour system, and it is expected the Plasterers' Union will shortly work on the nine-hour plan.

On Monday afternoon the funeral of G. Mayell, a member of the Builders' Laborers' Union, who died of consumption, took place from the general hospital, and was attended by members of that body. While in the hospital his expenses, as well as the funeral expenses, were defrayed by the Builders' Laborers' Union.

GENERAL.

Two thousand drivers of public vehicles in Naples, Italy, have struck for higher wages.

Chinese in Vancouver Island are reported to be in great destitution.

Three hundred men employed in the Union Pacific shops at Omaha were discharged on Wednesday to cut down expenses.

The striking laborers of the Mount Pleasant coke region have risen and driven off the men at work.

It is stated that fifteen thousand children employed in New Jersey factories, are compelled to work fourteen hours a day and are denied the opportunities of education.

Manufacturers in Wolverhampton are said to be becoming alarmed at the rapid increase of German competition. Not only are the Germans competing severely with them in neutral markets, but they are undersselling them in the home market.

During the month of December, 1885, there were no less than two hundred and sixty Assemblies of the Knights of Labour organized, eleven re-organized, and two District Assemblies organized throughout the jurisdiction.

G. M. W. Powderly, of the Knights of Labor, on his return home to Scranton, Pa., after attendance on his duty as Chairman of the Executive Board of the Order, found over two thousand letters awaiting his attention and answer. They were from all quarters of the continent, and were an evidence of the magnitude of this Order.

The trial of Representative Thos. B. Barry, at Saginaw, Mich., for conspiracy during the strike in the lumber regions of that State still continues. The testimony so far is held to be very favorable to the defendant. Mr. Barry was to have testified in his own behalf yesterday.

Of the various local unions of carpenters in the State of New York which have passed upon the 8-hour question lately, 69 voted in favour of its enforcement on May first next, and only 9 voted against. Many refrained from voting, although in favour of the reduction of hours, but thought the date premature.

The policeman of St. Louis, Mo., threaten to strike if their arrears of pay amounting to over two months' salary is not paid them.

All the strikers of the Bridesburg, Pa., Manufacturing Company who went to work lately, are out again in consequence of the discharge of two blacksmiths.

In Germany the average annual cost of subsistence of a miner's family of five souls, including rent, clothing, and taxes is given as $122.80. The rent usually paid varies from 36c to $1.16 per month.

The Woodturners' Progressive Union, German Machinists' Union, and the German Painters' Union of New York have established labour bureaus.

Notwithstanding the defeat of the telegraphers in their great strike, they were not totally disheartened, as a few held together and again began the work of reorganization. The rate of progress at the present time in the United States is said to be rapid.

In the U.S. Congress a few days ago Senator Van Wyck introduced a resolution directing the Committee on Education and Labour to enquire how many hours of labor per day was exacted of men and boys in the employ of street railways and other corporations in the District of Columbia. His intension is to show that 14 and 16 hours' labor is required of employees in many instances, and that consistency requires that Congress, having exclusive jurisdiction in that District, should extend the protection of the eight-hour law to all classes.

The long strike of iron moulders at North Dighton, Mass., is virtually ended. The 10 per cent. advance in wages asked for has been granted.

The State Assembly of the Knights of Labor at Chicago have adopted a resolution denouncing five of the leading boot and shoe houses of Chicago for employing convict labor, and calling on the public to boycott their goods.

The male spinners at New Bedford, Mass., have decided to ask for the restoration of the 10 per cent. reduction in their wages made a year ago.

A banquet was given in London, England, on Jan. 16th, in honor of Jos. Arch, M. P., who is the first agricultural labor to be elected to Parliament.

The collieries in the Pottsville, Shenandoah, and Shamokin districts of Pennsylvania worked on an average 23 days during December. In preparing for market 1,011,000 tons, 27 miners were killed and 7 seriously injured. The reports of the inspectors for last year show that in the same districts during 1885, 116 persons were killed and 249 injured, 59 wives were made widows and 191 children fatherless.

NEWS OF THE TOWN.

Good Work Appreciated.

The Port Hope Times says:—"We received two very handsome cards from the office of the Peterborough EXAMINER. They are splendidly executed."

Old Scores Obliterated.

The dozen desks in the Council Chamber have all received a coat of varnish which successfully takes all their stains away. It's very satisfactory to know that the councillors do not require a varnish coat also.

What We May Expect.

Rev. Mr. Tovell to help his hearers "step upward" to-morrow evening.

Meeting of Town and Ashburnham Councils Monday night.

The Medical Health Officer to keep a sharp look-out as to where ice for household purposes is cut.

The band boys to be justifiably proud of their success last night.

Stirring times in Ireland almost any day.

Fresh to strong westerly winds; fair, very cold weather with a few snow flurries.

St. Andrew's Church.

Under the vigorous supervision of Mr. Andrew Douglas the contracter, the work of constructing this beautiful little gem of church architecture, is progressing rapidly. The exterior is entirely finished, and the plastering and elaborate stucco work, is so nearly completed that on Tuesday it is expected to be finished. Mr. Thomas Bevor of Toronto, the contractor for this part of the work, has done his work well. Last night the taking down of the scaffolding was begun, and an opportunity of judging of the chaste beauty of the ceiling with its numerous groins, mouldings, bosses, etc., was afforded the spectator. The full effect will be very beautiful. The ceiling is lofty, the boss over the central part of the transept, being forty feet from the floor. The electric lights for the permanent lighting of the church have been put in and will be used by the contractor in pushing on the work. There seems little doubt that the church will be completed by the first of March, as far as the present contractor is concerned.

Last Night's Blizzard.

Last night was a solid slice of the Northwest blizzard belt. Early in the evening the howl was inaugurated, but it was not till about eleven that the elements fairly woke up. At this hour the wind was blowing a gale, driving before it a dense scud of sharp cornered sand-like snow particles, sharp as needles. Persons travelling George street, though the moonlight was bright, could not see the buildings on the opposite side, and the electric lights, at the distance of a stone cast, were so obscured that though blazing with full brilliance, they seemed to twinkle feebly like a star in low spirits. The big crowds that attended the Opera House and rink, were fairly caught, and before home was reached, paid dearly for the pleasure they had enjoyed during the evening. The dainty damsel, who on going to the opera or the mask, had only courage to rest the tips of her fingers on her escort's arm, was eager, when the howling blast swept suddenly round a street corner, almost lifting her off her petite pins, to throw both arms round his waist to prevent her being blown away bodily. Last night was a teaser, and if Manitoba blizzards are any more vigorous, you can't sell us an emigration ticket.

Personal.

Mr. J. H. Burnham has successfully passed his second intermediate examination in law at Osgoode Hall, Toronto.

Assessment Life Insurance.

Extract taken from a letter written by Sheppard Homans, the eminent American Actuary, taken from the Insurance Times, N. Y.

"Assessment Companies do not, strictly speaking, grant Insurance and their fashions or covenants are to make assessments upon survivors when deaths occur, and to pay over the proceeds of such assessments to the beneficiaries of the deceased members. There is no definite promise to pay in full and no obligation to pass more than the assessments yield. There is no capital, no risk, no Insurance! It is a voluntary association of individuals. There is usually but little if any penalty for discontinuance of membership, and the permanence of such institutions depends mainly upon the volition of their members. They spring into existence suddenly by the voluntary association of a few individuals without capital or personal risk, and as suddenly they may go out of existence by the voluntary act or withdrawal of their members. WATCH THE VOTERS' LIST.

Liberals, watch the Voters' List and see that your name gets there, for the Dominion Government Revising Barristers will not lose much sleep in seeing that your name is placed on the list. The Dominion Franchise Act which robs the municipalities of the privilege of preparing the voters' list, was framed with the especial object of promoting the success of the Conservative party, and the object is of course to get on the list all the voters who can be counted on to vote Tory and to keep off all voters of Liberal leanings. The Franchise Act disfranchised hundreds of voters in every riding, and, unless he looks to the matter, many an elector will find that his name is left off the voters' list for Dominion elections, which would appear on a fairly prepared list made up by municipal officers. By the act many citizens have a right to vote whose names do not appear on the assessment lists. Conservative voters have salaried officers appointed by the Government to see that their names find their way to the lists, while Liberal voters have to look after the matter themselves. It may be well to point out who is entitled to vote. In this town any man who is a tenant, owner or occupant of real property worth $300 has a right to be on the list. If he has rented any property in the city at $20 a year or upwards throughout the whole of 1885 (not necessarily the same property continuously, for a change of residence within the constituency does not disqualify him) he has a right to have his name on the list. A man can qualify on his wife's property. Every person who earns $300 a year can get his name on the list, if he has lived in town year previous to January 1st, 1886. This qualification does not make the voter liable for income taxation. The son, grandson, step-son, or son-in-law of an owner of real property can vote on the property if its value is sufficient to make a second qualification of $300.

In the county and in incorporated villages, every person has a right to vote who has been a tenant of real property for one year previous to January 1st, 1886, and paying rent to the amount of $2 per month, $6 per quarter, $12 per half year, or $20 per annum. Every owner of real property to the value of $150 in his own right or the right of his wife has a vote, and every bona fide occupant of property valued at $150 has a vote. Every person a resident of the electoral district for a year before January 1st, 1886, with an income of $300 per year in money or money's worth, the latter including to farm laborers, board, rent of houses and the like, has a vote. Every farmer's son not otherwise qualified to vote, who has lived on a farm of not less than 20 acres, with his father, grandfather, step-father, or father-in-law, is entitled to a vote. Every fisherman who is the owner of real property and boats and fishing tackle to the combined value of $150, is a voter.

It will be well for such parties to look after the matter. The Conservatives are fully alive to the importance of scoring every vote. The (Liberal) Conservative Union of Ontario has issued a pamphlet of confidential instructions to the officers of Tory Societies, a copy of which is in our possession, which shows that the power, influence and good will of the Revising officers, as well as the most unremitting personal activity, is to be exercised in the interests of the Conservative party. Then so much more it behooves Liberals to be on the alert. Be sure to get your name on the first list, and to do so, if the agency of a political association is not preferred, let the party entitled to vote reach the Revising Officer by a written application, containing the name in full of the applicant, his residence and post-office address, the description of the property upon which he qualifies, its value and the nature of his interest in it and the qualification relied on if other than real property and all other necessary information. Judge Dennistoun is the Revising Officer for the Riding of West Peterborough.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Hon. Mr. Chapleau's recent speech to his quondam constituents indicated the means to be employed to attempt to win the restive supporters of the Government back to their allegiance. He promised to give increased subsidies to local provincial railways, and to erect new public buildings. The people's gold won't rust in inaction in the public chest in this good cause. It will be a safe thing to wager that St. Jerome, the capital of Mr. Chapleau's constituency, will get its new post-office before Peterborough does, although it was only promised the other day, the political urgency is so much greater in Terrebonne than Peterborough. Terrebonne Tories kicked entirely over the traces, whereas the faithful in Peterborough only made a feeble pretense of kicking.

The Agricultural and arts association of Ontario, announces that the association offers $100 in prizes for essays on the subjects: "The relations between employers and employed in Canada, with special reference to the farm, with a view to improving those relations." "Grasses and clovers: their comparative values as food for live stock; their adaptability to different soils and climates, with best methods of cultivation." Further particulars may be had on application to Henry Wade, Secretary Agriculture and Arts Association, Toronto.

The chief Government organ in Toronto, still feebly and furtively, yet unmistakably waves the "bloody shirt." In a leading article on Friday, it asserts that "the political issue now before the country is the execution of Riel and not the causes which led to the rebellion he headed." If this is so, it is only the Mail and its party that has made it so, for the purpose of obscuring the question of the undeniable guilt and responsibility of the Government for causing, by its oppressive misgovernment of the Northwest, the Northwest rebellion. Sir John, since his return, has found out that his after-dinner flattery of French-Canadians in England, has not evoked in his alienated Quebec following the sprightly enthusiasm which marked their attitude towards him in former days, and has doubtless instructed his Toronto organ not to fold away the "bloody shirt" for a little while yet.

The old saw that "murder will out" is no truer than that Toryism will out. True to the Tory instinct for office Lord Salisbury, combined with the Parnellites to overthrow the Gladstone Ministry, a compact that naturally led to the inference that the new government sympathized with the object of the Parnellites. Now, however, that office is reached, the mask is thrown off and the true principles of Toryism crop out. According to the Queen's speech, as published in yesterday's issue, coercion is the policy of the Salisbury Government. As has been stated, Mr. Gladstone's policy was concession and coercion combined. Salisbury's is coercion alone. Coercion is not stateman's work, it is simply police duty. It is easy to put down disaffection with a strong hand when the hand is strong, but it is not so easy to remove the evils which, it is generally admitted, are at the bottom of the disaffection. The world will await, with interest, the results of the application of what the Mail calls the "unprofitable policy of coercion," which, it suggests, will result in wholesale bloodshed in Ireland, before the year closes.

A Plundered Province.

M. C. Cameron's Masterly Address—Timber Limits Parcelled Out to Dominion Government Supporters—How the People's Money is Wasted—How the Debt is Piled Up—A Scathing Exposure of Tory Government Methods.

In continuation, from yesterday's DAILY EXAMINER, of Mr. M. C. Cameron's Bruce-field speech:—

CALL IN THE MEMBERS.

Now, it may be asked is these statements are true. If the Government is carried on by a system of extravagance and corruption—if these men are incompetent, dishonest, and corrupt as you say they are—how is it that you have not defeated them ere this? The answers are many and plain. You may remember that Paul tells us that he fought with beasts at Ephesus. But Paul had only one contest with the animals there. For seven years we have been fighting at Ottawa with worse than the beasts of Ephesus, and although we have broken their ranks and scattered their forces, it is not surprising that we have not been able to annihilate them altogether, though we hope to accomplish that ere long. It must be also borne in mind that the Tories in the past have relied solely on their brute majority in the House. It never was a question of reason or argument. There we always beat the Tories. Now when we discuss any political question, in which we have the best of it, the answer we receive is, "Call in the members." We protest against the extravagance of the Government. Our answer is, "Call in the members." We denounce Sir John for having parcelled out the public domain among his camp-followers. The answer is, "Call in the members." We protest against his legislation as an attempt to corrupt the constituencies and the representatives of the people. The answer is, "Call in the members." Not only have we had to fight in the past with a brute majority from Ontario, but we have had to contend with men whose allegiance is secured by purely

PERSONAL AND MERCENARY MOTIVES.

I have made the statement in public before, I repeat it now here on this public platform, in the broad light of day, and I challenge successful contradiction, that of the 52 members from Ontario there are but five who can afford to give an honest vote; who are not under direct obligations to the Government; whose votes Sir John Macdonald does not carry in his breeches pocket. I regret that time will not admit of my entering fully on this branch of my subject to-day. I will reserve the discussion of this point for an early occasion, when I shall venture to submit to the people of Canada a short, but concise, sketch of Ontario Tory members of Parliament. The history will be interesting and will repay careful perusal. Meantime I shall venture on a specimen of the forthcoming production—

THE SURGEON-GENERAL.

Take Mr. Darby Bergin, the Tory M. P. for Cornwall. This man was once a Liberal. He aspired to a seat in Mr. Mackenzie's Administration. He was thought unfit for the situation, and so deserted his party, and found a resting place among the Tories. He has got his reward. He was a Colonel in the Volunteer service. When the rebellion broke out he did not go to the front with his Battalion to fight the battles of his country, as a gallant sholdier should do. He was appointed Surgeon-General to the force, remained at Ottawa during the whole of the terrible conflict—drew, and I am told still draws, $13 a day as Surgeon-General, and his pay as member of Parliament. Brother Darby is also the head, middle, and tail of the Ontario and Pacific Junction Railway, which this honest Government bonnessed with the people's money to the tune of $202,400. Darby and his friends were applicants for, and no doubt received at the hands of this Administration, coal and timber lands in the North-west. Is it at all likely that Darby Bergin will ever vote against the the man who has so munificently endowed him? As well might you expect the leopard to change his spots. (Cheers).

I must now pause in this very interesting review of Tory members of Parliament. I have thus far shown you that fraud, misconduct, corruption, and inefficiency are rampant in every branch of the public service. The Liberal party appeal to the electors of this country—and we trust that the appeal will not be in vain—to sweep from power these corrupt and incompetent men. The outlook for the past in this country was not very encouraging, the sky was often dark and cloudy, but recollect that the darkest hour is just before the dawn; and I verily believe that Sir John stands in the most critical position of his life—that his days as a politician are numbered, and that when the House next meets at Ottawa the reign of corruption and misgovernment will end. (Great cheers.) In any event the next general election can't be far off. The Liberal leader expects you to enter that contest determined to win—enter it with the battle cry of the clansmen of old and victory is as certain as that to-morrow's sun will shine—and why not? You enter the fight under the ablest statesman on the American Continent—the Hon. Edward Blake—(loud cheers)—a man who stands head and shoulders above his political opponents—a man against whom the breath of slander has never been heard—a man of whom it may be said, as Yelverton said of Grattan: "A man who is not stayed in his prejudices, who does not trample on the progress of his country, or, like the caterpillar, live on its prosperity, a man who does not stickle on the letter of the constitution with the affection of a prude, or abandon its position with the effrontery of a prostitute." Under the leadership of the Hon. Edward Blake, the Liberal party must and will succeed—with the generous aid of the electors of Canada, which I know will be given in no stinted measure. The victory is beyond a peradventure. As Gladstone said on a memorable occasion in the English House of Commons, so say I to you:—Time is on our side. The Tories cannot fight against the future. The great social forces which move upward and onward in their might and majesty, and which the corruption of this Administration cannot impede or disturb—these great social forces are against them. They work with us—they are marshalled on our side—and the banner which we have carried aloft in many a conflict for right and justice, though perhaps for a time it may droop over our heads, will yet float aloft in the eyes of Heaven, sustained by honest hearts and borne by firm hands to a sure and certain victory.

"HIGHLANDERS, SHOULDER TO SHOULDER!"

Mr. Cameron sat down amidst tremendous applause.

A RANCH FOR CHICKENS.

A New Industry in Which Thousands o. Dollars are Invested.

"The outlook for the incubator and poultry supply business is first-rate," said a well-known dealer in response to inquiries made by a reporter for the New York Mail and Express. "There are many new parties coming in every day now looking at machines who intend starting in the chicken-raising business this fall to make a regular trade of it. Incubators increasing in number? Yes, sir; there are in the market from twelve to fifteen machines of different patents. We have here in our store eight of the leading ones in constant operation night and day. The prices range from $20 to $300 each, with a varying capacity of from fifty to 2,000 eggs. As a rule, a first-class incubator hatches from 80 to 90 per cent of the fertile eggs that are put into it. Most of the machines are automatic in their regulation, so that they require very little care."

"How much capital does it require to start in the chicken-raising business?" was asked.

"I know of one party whose capital is $100, and another who we fitted out the capital for whose stock was $40,000. All the eight machines that we keep are hatching chickens every day. These we send to our chicken ranch at Franklin, N. J. Some days our machines hatch out as many as three hundred chicks. Yes, the chicken-raising business is a new industry that has sprung up within the last two years. But aside from those who go into the business as a business there are many wealthy men, owners of country seats, who have gone into it for the novelty of the thing. But you will be surprised when I tell you, and statistics will prove the truth of the statement, that the poultry industry has become one of the largest industries in this country, and amounts to more than even the trade in wheat. Even now there is not a sufficient supply of eggs in the market, and it is necessary to import them in large quantities."

"Has not this growth of the business increased the demand for poultry supplies?"

"Yes, very largely. Among the articles in great demand are ground bone and oyster shells, which are fed to the chicks. Why, we sell at least fifty tons of this material a year, and the demand has made a new way of disposing of bones and oyster shells. Not long ago a man started a manufactory at Yonkers for the especial purpose of grinding bones and oyster shells for the chicken trade, and he has a big trade in it already. It has also made a great demand for wire netting for fences to poultry-yards. The other day we sold and put up for one party a mile of this wire netting."

"You spoke of a chicken ranch. What is it like?"

"Ours at Franklin covers six acres of ground. It is enclosed by a fence about six feet high. It contains a number of wooden buildings, built especially for chicken-raising. One of these measures 60 by 80 feet and 20 feet high. It was originally built for the fattening of poultry. It is divided into pens for flocks of chickens of different breeds. The pen measures about 10 by 20 feet, and each contains nest boxes, roosts, and feeding troughs. Another building on the ground is long and narrow, 100 feet by 10, and is divided into pens, the same as the other. Still another is 40 by 16 feet, which we use principally for ducks. It has a small pond adjoining. On a knoll back of these buildings we keep a large number of the artificial brooders for young chicks taken from the incubators at the store. They are kept in these brooders four weeks, and are then old enough to be put in with the larger stock."

"What is the capacity of such a ranch?"

"Without crowding, it will accommodate nicely one thousand full-grown fowls, five thousand young chicks, and one thousand ducks. The cost of such a ranch complete, without the land, is about $5,000. One man and a boy can attend to it nicely. Their duties are to feed and water the fowls regularly and keep the buildings thoroughly cleaned. If this is properly done it keeps the fowls in perfectly good health. Such a business, properly carried on, will yield a profit of at least 100 per cent on the capital invested, and even that is a low estimate. Take fancy-breed fowls and they bring from $1 to $10 apiece, and I know a man who has a partridge cochin cock which $100 couldn't buy. Then take broilers. They are worth to-day, and it is the dull season, 22 cents a pound live weight. Each one will weigh 2¼ pounds, and the cost to raise it is not over 15 cents. In winter they bring from 50 to 60 cents a pound, or $2 a pair.

"The demand for eggs for hatching is great, and a large part of our business is to supply eggs for this purpose. In fact, our ranch is carried on for raising thoroughbreds, not for market poultry. Do we allow visitors? Yes, we set apart Fridays for any who want to see the place. But there have been a number of such ranches lately started in the neighborhood of this city. One on Long Island conducted by a stock company is the largest. The capital invested is $40,000, and the place is conducted for the exclusive production of broilers. It has now a capacity for hatching seven thousand eggs, and they are putting up more buildings, so that the place will have a capacity for hatching out one thousand chickens a day. They find the business profitable, and their trade is in this city. Another somewhat different ranch is one in New Jersey, which is devoted to the production of eggs exclusively, its owner having contracts with parties in this city. The man who owns it started the business three years ago with a capital of just $25. He has now one thousand laying hens, and his present buildings cost him $6,000 all of which he made out of the business. Yet, all this time he has been engaged in regular business in this city, and has come in every day."

Roadside Fruit Trees.

A writer in the New York Tribune, in treating of the utility of planting fruit trees by fences pays: "One advantage attending this planting is the economy of drawing handsome returns from soil otherwise unproductive, as roadways or lanes. The roots of the trees search this through, and find abundant available food, for no growth robs the soil, not even grass, while it is continually receiving manurial droppings. Another very important gain results from the safety of the trees from wounds. The fence shelters the stem from sun-scald and from cattle-rubbing, and the roots are safe from that ruin of orchards, the plowshare, which not only tears the roots while in the height of Summer activity, but, what is worse, though least seen or suspected, shears off the feeding rootlets at the same fatal season—these innumerable points being found near the surface where their most wholesome food is most abundant. Fence-row trees live longer than trees exposed to injury in open orchards. Trees of erect habit should be chosen, and preferably Winter sorts of color green or unattractive before ripening in the cellar. Such fruits, while the most valuable, do not attract depredators, and field crops are out of the way before the time arrives for gathering the apples. Such rows of well-shaped trees embellish a farm, help to shelter its surface and add to the beauty of the landscape.

About the best wolf story going is one told by the Pioche Record. It gives the particulars of a lame wolf that lay in the rabbit path with its mouth open, while the rabbits, several thousand in number, ran down its throat until the wolf burst.—Virginia (Nev.) Enterprise.

Milling in Spain is in almost as primitive condition at the present time as that of semi-civilized tribes of people. The motive power is, as a rule, supplied by mules, which, with an ancient form of machinery, imparts rotation to the burrs. These are usually situated in the cellars of the houses. The capacity of such a "mill" is, of course, limited, but the expenses of production are also very small, and that is the main object in a country where money is a rare article.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $300 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and those we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this papre who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

TAKING STOCK!

No duty devolving upon the business man is so important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's repeating clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognized duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shown in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out any winter goods left over, at cost.

The price of wood and hay remain the same.

The Sawdust Cases Disposed of.

The charges against Messrs. Hilliard, Irwin and Hazlitt (for Dickson Company) were disposed of by Police Magistrate Dumble this morning. All the parties pleaded guilty. Mr. Poussette, who appeared for Messrs. Hilliard and Hazlitt, asked that action be suspended, pending the decision of the Government, which they had appealed to, asking that the Otonabee river be exempted from the obstruction law, the same as the Ottawa river. Mr. Sawers appeared for Mr. Irwin. The magistrate gave his judgment as follows :—

The information in these cases charges certain mill-owners with obstructing the waters of the river Otonabee by depositing therein sawdust, etc. The matter of complaint is one of long standing, and only the large interests affected, have deterred people from attempting to check what has long been felt as a grievous complaint.

That much of the debris from the saw mills lodged in the Little Lake at Peterborough, so that what was once a very beautiful and deep sheet of water, has now become shallow, disfigured and pestilential by reason of the vast accumulation of rotting vegetable matter.

To a growing town so fine at sheet of water as the Little Lake once was would be of inestimable value, and it was little less than a curse for the authorities to permit it to be wantonly destroyed. The action of the present prosecutors though late is yet commendable. The mill owners have deemed it expedient to plead guilty to those charges. Up to the present they have broken the law with their eyes open—with them it has simply been a matter of money. They have saved money by being allowed to deposit their saw dust in the river, but they have inflicted an injury that money will not now remove. They will not deem it a hardship if I impose on them a heavy fine, chiefly to impress upon the mill owners the intention of this court to enforce a law whose aim is the public good.

The judgment of the court is that the defendants do each pay a fine $25.00, within ten days and in default of payment imprisonment for ten days.

(Signed,)
D. W. DUMBLE, P. M.

The costs were divided between the three parties.

The Bard of Smith.

We have been requested to publish the following letter sent to Mr. J. N. Telford by his father, Mr. William Telford, the bard of St, Andrew's Society, under treatment of Dr. Barnham for cataract :

TORONTO, Wed., Jan. 29th, 1886.

MY DEAR SON,—Got all safe over the first operation, just preparing for the second, waiting patiently for the doctor's coming, every nerve braced, thoughts ascending upwards whence all our strength comes—comfort and consolation in our time of trials and sufferings. Hope and patience still prevail.

REFLECTIVE THOUGHTS BEFORE THE OPERATION.

Dear wife, though far from one another,
Our love and hearts seem—ah! how near,
Warmly feeling for each other
Relieves each sigh, drives back the tear.

Although I cannot hear your voice
My hours of solitude to cheer,
I know your heart's true chiefest choice
Is that you really could be here.

AFTER THE OPERATION.

Another deadly trial is on,
Eight days and nights in length ;
In darkness I am not alone,
In weakness I have strength.

Batten and bandage seal my eye,
Exclude light from my face,
Methinks an angel stands near by,
Holding the light of grace

Kind love to all ; believe me still an affectionate husband and father,
WM. TELFORD.

P. S.—Since receiving the above, the son has received a postal card from Dr. Barnham, stating that the second operation has been performed and that it is successful.

Masks, Music, Mirth.

The Inaugural Carnival an Immense Success—Score a Big One for the Band Boys—Splendid Costumes—A Jam of Spectators—A Brilliant Scene on Ice—List of Maskers and Prize-winners.

The event which has been exciting skating circles for some time past, the first of the Fire Brigade Band Carnivals, passed off very successfully last night. All afternoon the band serenaded the town, and did their utmost to draw the attention of the public to the fact that it was the night of the carnival. The Batoche Minstrels a number of local admirers of colored minstrelsy, also did their best in advertising the Carnival. From the time the rink opened until near nine o'clock, a continual stream of masqueraders and spectators poured into the building. The rink was gaily decorated with many hued flags, festoonings of streamers and evergreens, which with the help of the electric light, and the many gaudy costumed skaters, gave it the appearance of an enchanted amphitheatre. The glistening ice was soon covered with over a hundred figures, who flitted about over the glassy surface like phantoms, mingling with each other, and ever changing like the gay colors in a kaleidoscope. The band discoursed excellent music from the stand in the gallery, while the Batoche Minstrels, had a circle of admirers around their stage at the north end of the rink, where they sang southern melodies and reproduced jokes to their hearts' content. The gallaries and almost all available room was occupied by spectators. The local curlers, amused themselves by practicing the in-turn, etc. The characters represented were numerous, attractive and well taken. The Red Man from the west saluted his copper colored brother from China, while the Zulu made love to a snowshoer, and his Satanic Magesty seemed acquainted with all. Swarthy Africans, of the dude persuasion, were in the majority. The costumes as an average were exceedingly fine, being artistic as well as fancy. Individual mention is unecessary. The following is the list of masqueraders, and the characters represented, as shown by their cards :—

I desire to return my hearty thanks for the patronage received since commencing business, and would respectfully direct attention to our intended method of conducting the same for the future.

Cash, or Short Credit, is a system rapidly gaining favor in our country. Merchants of our cities and towns have almost universally adopted it, and in a progressive town like this there can be no reason why we should not follow the same rule.

After the First Day of January next my terms will be Cash, unless otherwise specially agreed.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

Sunday's Sermons.

Missionary Sermons in St. Paul's by Rev. Mr. Robertson, Superintendent of Northwest Missions.

Rev. Mr. Robertson, of Prince Albert, superintendent of the Presbyterian missions in the Northwest, preached in St. Paul's Church yesterday morning and evening, on the Northwest missions.

In the morning Mr. Robertson took as his text the 16th verse of the 1st chapter of Paul's epistle to the Romans: "I am a debtor both to the Greeks, and the barbarians; both to the wise, and the unwise."

He said when Paul wrote this letter he had not been at Rome. He felt that it was his duty to preach Christ to the Romans. He had the gospel in trust and felt it an obligation to preach it to others. Christians are the same as the Apostle Paul and are under the same obligation. The gospel is a trust they have received, and which they should preach to all their fellow men. The Northwest Indians and the heathen included. He would speak of the

WORK DONE IN THE NORTHWEST

during the time he had been there. He was aware the congregation of St. Paul's had been liberal in giving to Northwest missions. He was pleased to see the improvements that had been made in the church since his visit of four years ago. He knew it would be useless to ask Presbyterians to support a scheme which they knew nothing about. They would willingly help a deserving movement. He therefore intended to give a description of the mission work in the Northwest, showing the progress that had been made. He would confine himself to the mission field under the supervision of the Northwest Synod, which included

THE WHOLE NORTHWESTERN PROVINCES.

Many of the settlers who go there are Presbyterians. The average is two out of every five, and Presbyterians are obliged to furnish them with the gospel. The English church was doing a good work. The Methodists were doing a greater work, and the Baptists have a small mission. The Presbyterians are doing the largest work, equalling more than any two other denominations. They were obliged to do this as they were mostly Presbyterians who were taking possession of the country. The settlements were very much scattered, as according to the C. P. R. land policy every other section is vacant. The maintenance of schools and churches was therefore difficult. There is a great deal of unrest manifested, probably owing to the fact that there are about 15,000 unmarried young men in the district. Many of them were unreligious, not more than 15 per cent, of them having ever made a profession of faith. Social life is also very unsatisfactory. It was found difficult to get the required amounts to build churches and consequently the community suffered. The majority were anxious that churches should be established in their midst. Even infidels had asked him why he did not build churches, giving as a reason that they did not want their children to be infidels.

THERE WERE BRIGHT PROSPECTS

in such a field. All were willing to help support the missionaries, and in many sections they had self-sustaining stations. There was a great desire for the gospel, and the people promised should they be supplied with missionaries they would not go back on them, but would support them. They understand the principle of giving. Manitoba stands at the head of the Provinces for liberality towards church support.

Fourteen years ago they had nine missions in the North-west with four missionaries. Now they have 147 missions attended by 105 missionaries, with a membership of near 6000. Their contributions during the past four years had gone up from $2,000 to $105,000. The late rebellion interfered very little with the work as their was no uprising in the settlements in which they have missions located. Last year every station was supplied with a missionary. They had also opened 200 new stations last year. The speaker then went on to show how the work of building up the churches had been going on. Men who had not gone to church for many years and who had become very low, were enticed to attend services and were now the

LIFE OF THE CHURCHES.

Others who were strongly opposed, were now the most ardent supporters. In some instances he found white men living with the Indians, on the lowest squalor and misery and practicing sins which would not permit of repetition—nothing short of crimes. Polygamy was practiced. Among the Indians and whites, the moral and physical rottenness was somthing terrible. There was nothing would save these men but the gospel. Scepticism also abounded. The speaker had meet men at McLeod who had not gone to church four times in their lives and had the vaguest ideas of religion. He had held services in the mounted police barracks, and in the bar-room of an hotel with good results. Many men who had fallen away from virtue, were in this way won back to the narrow way. Profanity and gambling were very common, the latter was carried on openly in all the hotels. On the other hand, many had found that the gospel had the power to keep them from sinking as well as to raise them up. The speaker said he was particularly anxious about this field, as he was confident it would become a

COUNTRY OF GREAT IMPORTANCE.

The district was bounded on the east by five hundred miles of virgin forest and in the north there was also abundance of timber. There was a vast plain unwooded but it was supplied with abundance of coal. At Lethbridge, 300 tons of coal was mined every day. He believed God intended it for human settlement. It was true that the weather was more severe than in Ontario, but is probably more healthy and is not felt any more. He had travelled over 1,900 miles of the country on a buckboard, sleeping out at night (as sometimes he could not even get a tent) with the thermometer often at and below zero, without experiencing any bad effects. He gained sixteen pounds during the trip. He had been there for twelve years and was was not off duty one day and sometimes preached twelve times a week, besides doing other work. The Northwest Territory is six or seven times larger than the rest of the provinces and will in all probability be great in proportion to its extent. It was plainly to supply this vast country with the gospel. He hoped when the augmentation fund came before them they would be liberal in their subscription. During the first 8 years of his work there were eleven churches built, and not one manse. During the last four years 55 new churches had been built, 7 enlarged and 15 manses built. Sunday School is held in connection with all the churches. One obstacle was the difficulty to get places to worship in. Timber was scarce as it has to be imported. He had preached in a "dug-out," a house dug out of the side of a hill. They could not get large congregations to attend these places. The young men would not attend. When they built churches they were well attended and in many cases are self-sustaining. Money was also required to build houses for their missionaries. He gave some instances of the miserable places in which some of their missionaries live. One of these houses was 8 feet wide by about 20 feet long The missionary with his wife and child occupied one end and his horse the other. The missionaries find in their experience that to overcome the evils of the Northwest. He appealed to the Christians to help their brethren as much as was in their power. It was a privilege. When God endowed a person with gifts and graces He intended that they should be exercised. By exercise they would brighten, the same as the muscle which hardened by exercise and the brain that becomes clearer by exercise. The contributions the home missions received were not sufficient to carry on the work. An Ottawa gentleman who had been in the Northwest lately contributed $600 towards the Northwest mission fund and $1,500 to the manse fund. All who go to the Northwest and return are generally strong advocates of it. He trusted the congregation of St. Paul's would be liberal in their contributions to the mission fund. He felt confident they would do their utmost to help their brethren in the Northwest.

THE DUTY OF CHRISTIANS.

THE GOSPEL IS THE POWER

Short Synopsis of the Evening Sermon.

In the evening Rev. Mr. Robertson preached from the same text as the morning, taking up the political as well as the religious aspect of affairs amongst the Indians of the Northwest. There were 65,000 Indians in that country; 30,000 under treaty, 35,000 non-treaty Indians. Those in treaty with the Government receive annual stipulations. Chiefs receive $25, head men $15, the rank and file $3 each per annum. They are also provided (or supposed to be provided) with agricultural implements, teachers and other considerations. This some years ago would have enabled them to live luxuriously. But there is a very prominent fact which, perhaps, not every one is acquainted with in connection with the domestic state of the Indians, which has CHANGED THE WHOLE STATE OF AFFAIRS.

Some years ago these vast plains were covered with buffaloes, the extent of which may be judged when it is authenticated that a herd covering an area of 15 miles has been seen amassed together. These provided food, clothing, money and every luxury that the Indian required. Pemican, moccasins, bedding, tents, leather and every necessary article of the requirements of nature, were directly manufactured from these animals; while they were also exchanged with the traders for guns, blankets, knives and everything the white man could furnish. All is now changed!

NOT A BUFFALO CAN BE FOUND.

The famous western hunter hailing from the territory, and other similar braves of the prairie, has succeeded in exterminating the means which Providence had designed to give life to the native inhabitants of the prairie. As many as 30,000 of these animals have been slaughtered in one huge butchery by American paid agents, the skins piled up on the banks of the river for transportation, while the carcasses of the animals were left strewn upon the plains to rise up in intolerable stench and infect the plains with pestilential death for many miles around. This is really with these unfortunate people. Thousands of them know nothing about civilization. Consequently when winter comes he has nothing in store. He must plunder, beg or starve. Some of them have starved, others take the other alternative. What is $25 to an Indian during a winter of six months?

THE SECRET OF THE POLITICAL DIFFICULTY

The reverend gentleman then asked the following three questions:—(1) Can the Indians of the Northwest be Christianized? (2) Can they be civilized? Can they be taught to support themselves?

In the subsequent part of this most interesting address the above three questions were amply proved and illustrated from existing facts, in the affirmative.

Gladstone Himself Again.

LONDON, Jan. 23:—It is admitted that Mr. Gladstone's speech on Thursday night was one of his best efforts. The attempt of his enemies for a few years past to make the public believe that he has entered upon a period of senility has utterly collapsed. He rises easily to the requirements of every great occasion. The throat affection by which his voice was threatened last summer has disappeared. Nothing could be finer in the way of oratory than some parts of his address, and one of his admirers said: "Mr. Gladstone's voice is an important factor in British legislation. Many of his triumphs have been won by persuasion in the House after all his outside efforts had failed to win sufficient support for some measure. A recent noted instance was when he wheedled an angry and hostile House into approving his Soudan policy.

I almost believe the secret of his persuasiveness is in his use of the word 'we'. It seems absurd, but analyze some of his great speeches and you will see how effective is this impersonality, this taking of all into his confidence, this quiet and strong assumption that all will agree with him in measures so plainly patriotic as he is capable of arguing his own to be." Whatever the secret of his success may be, it is certain that he greatly strengthened his position before the public by his few words on Thursday night. Mr. Parnell's remarks were also applauded on both sides of the House. They were conciliatory and asked for nothing but a fair consideration of the Rent Question and of Local Government improvements, avoiding the now apparently hopeless issue of Home Rule.

Another Methodist Church Burned.

Queen Street Church, Kingston, Gutted. A Loss of $25,000.

At five o'clock Sunday morning a fire broke out in the Queen street Methodist Church. The sexton left the building and went to his house for a few minutes, and when he returned the rafters around the furnace were in flames. The water was very scarce, and the streams were so weak that the water froze on the nozzles of the hose. Nothing is left of the church and Wesley hall, attached to it, but the bare walls. The buildings were valued at $25,000, insured for $10,000 in the Glasgow and Western companies. The church was a new one and only opened in December last. The congregation has decided on rebuilding at once.

Kingston's Torchbearer Caught

Three Incendiary Fires in one Night.

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 23.—Three incendiary fires occurred last night, followed by the arrest of the incendiary. At one o'clock flames destroyed much of the $40,000 stock of H. Skinner & Co., wholesale druggists. The match was set among tinctures and herbs, and spread rapidly. The firm are insured for $29,000. The second attempt was at Dr. Spark's residence, where clothing and paper was ignited in a back shed. The smoke aroused the occupants of the house, and before the fire had gained headway it was put out. While the fire was in progress at Skinner's, John Horsey saw a flash of light in the store of S. McK. Robertson, glass warehouse. He rushed to the police, who dashed to the rear. One man was seen crawling out of the window in the store. He was grabbed when he said: "I'm caught in the act. I'm guilty." Harry Horsey, aged 21 years, was the prisoner. He was half intoxicated. He had set fire to some straw in the store. The young man is the son of a respectable merchant, and cousin of the Chief of Police. He has been suspected of many incendiary fires which have occurred in this city.

Vigorous Enforcement of the Crooks Act.

The following circular has been addressed to the Inspectors of Licenses under the Crooks Act by the Provincial Secretary in view of the recent decision of the Privy Council upon the license question:—

PROVINCIAL SECRETARY'S OFFICE,
(License Branch,)
TORONTO, January 20th, 1886.

SIR,—The decision of the Imperial Privy Council recently given in the matter of the appeals respecting liquor licenses has placed the whole question of the authority to issue licenses and regulate the traffic in intoxicating liquors upon a stable and permanent basis, and has put the authority of the Provincial Legislature in reference thereto beyond controversy or cavil.

Special efforts to counteract or overcome the state of confusion and uncertainty which the passage of the Dominion License Law has during the past two or three years caused in the administration of the Liquor License Laws are absolutely necessary. Confusion and uncertainty will no longer paralyze the efforts of the Inspectors and Commissioners to suppress illicit selling or the violation of the Sunday clauses of the Provincial law.

The undersigned therefore begs specially to direct the attention of the Boards of Commissioners and Inspectors to the following points in connection with the rigid enforcement of the law:—

1st.—The entire suppression of all illicit selling.

2nd.—Prompt and vigorous enforcement of all penalties for violations of the Sunday and Saturday night clauses of the Act.

3rd—That holders of wholesale and shop licenses confine their sales strictly to the terms and conditions of their licenses.

4th.—The enforcement of the clauses of the License Act of 1885, known as "the Gibson clauses," 48 Vic. Cap. 43, S. 1.

Inspectors will be held strictly accountable for the enforcement of the law within their districts. Investigations will promptly follow reasonable complaints and nothing short of faithful and zealous performance of duty will be accepted. Where proper, the employment of assistance will be promptly approved by the Department upon the report of the Commissioners and Inspectors of its necessity before actual employment.

Inspectors will, in all cases when they deem it necessary, call upon the police or constabulary. If aid is refused or neglect be continuous or systematic, they will report the facts to the Department.

Inspectors are requested to report to this Department quarterly or oftener if requested, whether the police force in cities and the police or constabulary in other municipalities comply with sections 94 and 97 of the Act, R.S.O., cap. 181 and section 25 of 44 Vic., cap. 27 (sections 131, 136, and 137 of the compiled Acts.)

You will be good enough to lay this communication before the Board of Commissioners at their next meeting.

I have the honor to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
ARTHUR S. HARDY,
Provincial Secretary.

To the Inspector of Licenses.

AMENDING THE CROOKS ACT.

In the absence of any disposition on the part of the Dominion Government to enforce the Scott Act, its own measure, the Globe issued an invitation to its readers to send in suggestions as to the amendments necessary to approximate the Crooks Act to perfection. The diversity of opinion expressed by a host of correspondents shows that public opinion is not yet a unit on the liquor question and that legislation touching the subject is surrounded with grave difficulties. The following is a summary of the opinions expressed in relation to amending the Crooks Act to make it more effective, from which it will be seen that our legislators have considerable variety in the way of choice :—

One writer suggests that instead of licensing the vendor, the consumer be licensed. The vendor would receive a regular salary for dispensing the liquid and would be required to turn all the profits over to the municipality. Every man desiring to drink should forfeit that license on his abusing the privileges conferred upon him.

Quite a number were in favor of raising the licenses, reducing the number of sellers and increasing the penalty of infraction. Some went in for the abolishing of the treating system.

Some proposed the subsidising of temperance hotels in order that they might be made to compete with licensed hotels; others would like to see policemen and informers bounsed for bringing offenders to justice.

Some would limit a man to three drinks a day; some would have the liquor carried from the premises to be consumed, while others would allow drinking at the bar only.

The suggestions may be generally summed us as follows: Increase the license; reduce the number of sellers; secure absolute separation of the liquor traffic from all other occupations and make treating a criminal offence.

Now that, by the decision of the Privy Council, the licensing right has been unmistakably restored to a competent legislative authority, it may be expected that this problem will be treated on its merits and that legislation will ensue which will be as just as possible, consistent with a license system, both in the interests of the public and the trade.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Liberals of Kingston have organized a club which will be known as the "Gladstone Club." We wish it unbounded success.

The Toronto Week comes directly to the point when it asserts that "the rebellion was a direct outcome of the incapacity, jobbery and corruption that reigns universal in the affairs of the Northwest."

Let any intelligent man suggests the London Advertiser, read carefully the statesmanlike utterances of Edward Blake—the calm, careful dissection of a subject—and contract it with the flippancies that mark Sir John's public speeches. One is to the other as a serious man of of affairs is to a clown in a circus ring.

Lord Dufferin, viceroy of India, is in trouble. Since his accession to office the expenditures of India have been very large, and now there is a deficit of some ten million dollars to face. To meet this uncomfortable financial gap an income tax, that is of course unpopular, has been levied, but as this produces only six millions there is a good deal of difficulty yet to be grappled with.

The London Free Press, a good Tory journal, whose backbone was last year stiffened with over six thousand dollars worth of government printing—pamphlets to promote the immigration of foreigners to compete with Canadian workmen, and "cut the latter out of a job,"—asserts that "the opposition of the working men to immigration is one of the most short sighted possible exhibitions." This is just what a Tory journal, paid $6000 per year to promote immigration of workmen into an already flooded labor market, would be expected to say. The present government is willing to protect manufacturers at the expense of the working man, not only refusing to protect the latter, but actually making Canada a "slaughter market" for the pauper labour of Europe, and hiring their organs to defend their action, and call working men "blind" who hold out for their rights.

DOMINION FRANCHISE.

The Lists now Being Prepared.

Liberals Must Exert Themselves individually, or They will be Deprived of their Votes.

The General Election campaign is being fought now, and it will be decided within the next two weeks.

The Revising barristers are now preparing their perliminary lists.

The said lists are to be printed and posted before March 1st. No date is fixed by law before which notices of application to be entered on the lists must be sent to the Revising-officer or his clerk. The Revising-officer can close the lists at any moment.

As respects old votes and persons on the assessment roll, the Revising-officers must take their names from the old voters' lists and the assessments.

But as respects new voters who are not on the assessment rolls it begins to look as though every Tory will be put on and every Liberal left off.

Below will be found a list of persons qualified.

If you are qualified and are not on the assessment roll you or some one on your behalf must send to the Revising officer or his clerk immediately a declaration of qualification

On the Revising-officer receiving such declaration he will put your name on the preliminary list.

If you neglect this simple duty you cannot get on the list without going to the trouble and expense of attending the Revision Court and proving your claim.

Hence the supreme importance of getting your name on the preliminary list.

The Conservative Central Association has sent out blank forms of declaration of qualification by the thousand, and their agents are rolling in the names by the hundred upon the Revising officers

The Liberals have no organization for this purpose. If you wish to become a voter you must yourself do the work.

Make out your declaration and send it to the Revising officer.

Otherwise to a certainty you will be deprived of your vote.

The Ledger Franchise.

Among the franchises created by the Dominion Act is the following :—

Any male British subject of 21 years of age who

Is the tenant of any real property within any city or town, under a lease at a monthly rent of $2, a quarterly rent of $6, a half-yearly rent of $12, or a yearly rent of $20; who has been in possession, and has really paid such rent for at least a year before 1st January, 1886.

Or is the tenant of any real property assessed at $300 in cities, at $200 in towns, and $150 in towns and villages.

The interpretation clause of the Act defines "real property" as follows :—

Real property means a lot or portion of a lot, or other portion or sub-division of real property, or a house, store, office, or building or any description whatsoever, OR ANY PORTION THEREOF, situate upon real property and forming part thereof.

This enfranchises persons occupying a single room, or part of a single room, or part of an office, provided the rent paid for the same comes to the above-named sums.

NOW is the time for everybody qualified under this franchise to send in a declaration of his qualification to the Revising-officer or his clerk. Nobody is looking after the matter on the Liberal side. Every Liberal must look out for himself or he will not be allowed to vote.

The lists are to be prepared by :—

Snow-Bound.

The morning sun steals in with ruddy flame,
And gilds the arabesques upon the wall;
I rise—and hail with notes of loud acclaim
The pure white curtain trailing over all.

For all night long the feathery flakes have dropp'd
From ebon clouds upon a silent world;
I see the distant mountain peaks, snow-top-p'd—
Beneath, lie drifts by winds fantastic whirl'd.

The trees, each fairy twig divinely swathed
In radiant whiteness—pure as cloistered nun—
Seem in a gleaming sea of diamonds bathed,
A million gems, transmuted by the sun.

Yet naught, alas! to wretched me is this—
This pureness—marble—alabaster—chalk;
Pain must I quit this scene of ravishing bliss,
I've got to go and shovel off the walk.

Four Sweet Gypsies.

A number of the residents of Poplar street had their fortunes told yesterday, writes a Griffin (Ga.) correspondent of the Atlanta Constitution. Four gypsies had it their own way for a while, and their success was remarkable. They attracted attention by their remarkable sweet singing, and then looking at you for a few minutes would relate some little incident connected with your family's past history. Your curiosity would be excited, and you would have your fortune told. Your past history, or much of it, would be told correctly, and in a most winning way and by the sweetest voices, and then your fortune would be predicted in a thrilling and taking style.

Thus the gypsies went from house to house, and many quarters were slipped into their hands. Their visits were confined to a few houses closely connected on Poplar street, and every veranda was occupied by the inmates of the houses where the gypsies had visited, watching them as they visited other places. They had just come out of a house, when a young man came up the street. One glance in that direction by the gypsies was enough. There was a scream and a scattering. One would have thought the gypsies had never seen a man, they got out of his way so quickly. But the gentleman had seen them; their costumes, their manner, and their conduct was unusual, he was blessed with some curiosity, and followed the fleeing gypsies in the house where they had taken refuge, and after some searching and much begging by the gypsies, succeeded in drawing each one out and turned their faces up to the light, recognized the bright eyes and pretty faces of three of our most popular visiting young ladies and one of our prettiest home girls. They had been on a lark, and a jolly one it was. After getting over their excitement and forgiving the young man for catching them, they told how they had imposed upon their friends. The young lady who lives here had informed the visitors of enough of the family history of each household to make the revelations and prophecy smack of the truth. And as the fortune-tellers would relate some of these truths the eyes of the listeners would open wide with surprise and astonishment. The gypsies told their experience with much gusto, and their ringing laughs as they would relate their experience, proved that they had enjoyed the fun. But they did not want anybody to know of their little escapade, so they crowded the young man into a corner, and at the end of broom-handles and sticks made him vow he would not tell a soul, and he hasn't.

Flowers on the Table.

Set flowers on your table, a whole nosegay if you can get it, or but two or three, or a single flower—a rose, a pink, a daisy—and you have something that reminds you of God's creation, and gives you a link with the poets that have done it most honor. Flowers on the morning table are especially suited to them. They look like the happy awakening of the creation; they bring the perfume of the breath of nature into the room; they seem the very representative and embodiment of every smile of your home, the graces of good morrow; proofs that some intellectual beauties are in ourselves and those about us, some Aurora (if we are so happy as to have such a companion) helping to strew our lives with sweetness, or in ourselves some masculine wilderness not unworthy to possess such a companion or unworthy to gain her.

Plain white, faultlessly directed and sealed, envelopes are the only kind that are now in vogue. Neatness and apparent costliness are the desired qualities.

In the timber belt of Western Washington there are 20,000,000 acres covered with timber, most of which is included within the limits named—an area nearly equal to the combined areas of the states of Connecticut, Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire. This timber belt will average 25,000 feet of lumber to the acre; or a total of 500,000,000,000 feet of lumber. Hence, the sawmills of Puget Sound, with their present capacity of 500,000,000 feet per year, would take 1,000 years to cut it down. The fir trees frequently attain the height of 250 feet, and planks of lumber are sometimes turned out of these mills 100 feet in length.

How to Breathe.

One of the leading physicians of New York City, a specialist in diseases of the lungs, says that imperfect respiration is at the bottom of much trouble. In such a case he shows the patient how to swell out the whole chest full and round by a deep inspiration, elevating and throwing back the shoulders; and then, when he has gotten into his lungs the last atom of air possible, to hold it in tightly for a time and then to let it off slowly, blowing out every atom of it if he possibly can by forcible expiration, drawing the shoulderds forward and pressing the chest to the smallest possible compass, thus throwing out all of the residual air, and all this through the nose, with mouth tightly closed. "Let him take a half dozen or more such forced respirations a dozen times a day," says the doctor' "and he will soon double his vital capacity and relieve himself of his supposed chest trouble. Such forced respiration will compel every air cell possible to freely admit wholesome air into the little spaces and to expel it also, and some air cells that do not often perform their functions healthily will be compelled to do so."

Anecdotes of Architects

From time to time one hears a good many droll stories about the Baston architects, who are for the most part men of rather marked individuality, and a couple of these stories will bear repeating. The first relates that a Boston architect furnished designs for a building of which the importance may be estimated by the fact that it cost something like a million dollars. He did not draw his commission until the work was finished, when the amount of his bill frightened the committee having the matter in charge. One of them, a millionaire thrice over said emphatically at the committee meeting where the bills came up: "The bill is simply absurd; $1,500 is fully all that the architect's services are worth. Why, it was mere brain labor; no capital required whatever; $1,500 is ample; it is generous!" In the end, however, the "mere brain labor" managed so get something like thirty times the sum which seemed to the millionaire so generously ample.

The second tale is to the effect that when Mr. Richardson, who built the Capitol at Albany, presented his designs for that edifice the committee asked that he make certain modifications of his plans. But he answered "No, gentlemen; I will make you a new design, but I cannot alter that. That is a conception."

An architect who has the most distractingly ugly hands imaginable, all knotted and gnarled, has recently built a block of houses at the South End all over excrescences and points. He was dining at a French restaurant the other evening when a friend asked; "Where in the world did you pick up the idea of those crazy houses you are building on Blank street?" "Oh, I don't know," was the answer. "It's a design I've had in my hand for some time." "Ah," the questioner responded, glancing pointedly at the grotesque hand of the architect, which rested idly upon the table; "yes, I see; the idea is all there."—Boston Letter to the Providence Journal.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employers of agents ever dared to make such offers. Now, reader, if you want work or we do not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this papre who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

TAKING STOCK!

No duty devolving upon the business man is so important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's repeating clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognized duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shown in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out any winter goods left over, at cost.

On Thursday the annual Sunday school social will be held, at which tea will be served from 5.30 to 7 o'clock, after which an enertainment will be given.

Concluded.

Day's International Theatre Company concluded their two weeks engagement on Saturday evening. The Opera House was well filled. The company are above the average and had a successful engagement in Peterborough. The leading actors were good, and were fairly well sustained throughout. Little Annie Bird was the chief attraction, and took her several parts with wonderful coolness and correctness for a child so young. The company left this morning for Lindsay, where they will play one week.

About Advertising.

An American contemporary says some true things about advertising. It is well stated to be an art. There are constant patrons of the EXAMINER whose advertisements are put so pointedly, so readably, so ably, that they are looked for and read by all classes. Our American contemporary is equally truthful when it says there are few instances of permanent business success on the part of those who shut themselves in their oyster shells by refusing to advertise. A man who says he can't afford to advertise is like the man who says he can't afford to insure. A business man who declines to advertise, to be consistent, should tear down his sign—since advertising is simply the multiplication of his sign twenty thousand times. There are men whose names, by advertising in the EXAMINER—and, what is of course important, by living up to their advertisements—have become household words throughout the county and synonyms for stability, integrity and fair dealing. Per contra, according to the proverb, "Out of sight, out of mind." Those who imagine that this busy, changeful world will take the trouble to fish their names, much less their business, out of the voluntary oblivion into which they have allowed themselves to sink, are victims of a strong delusion.

It was announced yesterday in the George Street and Charlotte Street Methodist Chtroches that special services will be held in those churches on and after the first Sunday in February.

The Butter Market a Bedroom.

Two boys lodged in the Butter Market, used as the Gospel Hall, over Sunday night. They had been locked out from home and having a key of the room decided to quarter there, which the police allowed them to do.

Order in the Opera House.

The noise made in the Opera House Saturday night was outrageous. Manager Jackson thinks that it would be as useless to ask the roughs of a Peterborough audience to keep order as to ask geese to stop gabbling, and it would not do to wring their necks.

Putting on the Iron Work.

This morning the workmen of the Central Iron and Bridge Works began placing in position the iron girders of the bridge over Roger's Race, Ashburnham. In a few days the new bridge will be completed.

We Direct the Attention

of our readers to the advertisement of the Egan Imperial Truss Co. in this issue. From a number of testimonials before us, they are very highly recommended and are the best that has yet come before our notice. Note the date and go and see the representatives of this Co. when here.

Discovered and Punished.

The parties who took a horse belonging to Mr. Ferguson of North Monaghan, from the sheds of St. Paul's church, and afterwards used and abused it, have been traced up. They are three small boys. It is not likely they will be brought before the Magistrate, as corporal punishment has been administered in large doses.

Freaks of the Frost.

The gas supply was very uncertain on Sunday night, owing, it was supposed, to water or frost in the pipes. During the fore part of the services in the George street church the side jets flickered and went out and had to be lighted several times. The choir lights were with difficulty kept trimmed and burning. After a time a steady light was maintained. The unpleasant odor of gas filled the edifice during the whole service. The frost has no respect for persons or place.

Accident to an Engine.

A slight accident happened to the engine of the G. T. R., evening train, running between Toronto and Port Hope on Saturday. One of the 'drive wheels' connecting rods broke, when the train was about midway between Reaboro and Omemee, smashing the engineer's tool box and doing other damage of a slight nature. The train was stopped and rod removed. The engine then proceeded to Port Hope with its train, where the damages were repaired.

A Neat Catalogue.

The Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company has just issued their first illustrated and descriptive catalogue of door locks, knobs, bronze goods and builders' hardware. It is a book of one hundred and fifty-two pages, printed on fine-toned paper and bound in cloth, and presents a neat appearance. We trust the company may find their venture a profitable one, and that the smoke may long continue to ascend heavenward from their premises. The engraving of the buildings, executed by the Toronto Engraving Company, is capitally done, and Mr. Beale deserves much credit for the fine appearance given the premises. It was printed and bound by the Review Printing and Publishing Company and reflects great credit on their workmanship. The locks and other articles produced by this company are of a make and finish, that is excellence and artistic appearance, challenge comparison with any article of a similar kind in the world, and there seems to be no reason why the enterprise should not prove a profitable business to its energetic promoters.

Murdered and Burnt.

An Awful Tragedy at Allanburg, near Thorold.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Jan. 23.—John Hicks, a farmer, when coming into Thorold this morning, discovered an old-fashioned farm house near Allanburg on fire. The place was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bates, an aged couple. They were very deaf, and are supposed to have had money in the house. Hicks forced an entrance and found Mrs. Bates lying dead on a sofa, her face covered with blood and her left hand burned to a crisp. The body of Mr. Bates was found in the cellar burned almost to a cinder. There is an opinion current in the neighborhood that the old couple were murdered and the house set on fire.

Examination of the body of Mrs. Bates showed that the back part of her skull had been broken in, and that she had a deep stab in her left side above the hip, another stab in the left chest, and still another directly in the opening of the left ear, all proving that murder had been committed. The coming post mortem on the trunk of Mrs. Bates may reveal other expected marks of murder.

Lindsay.

The Treasurer's report of the Central Exhibition shows a surplus in hand of $242.01, but as a resolution was passed to pay directors $2 per day for their services it is not probable that there will be so large a credit balance to report next year.

Lindsay proposes to fall back on patent medicines—a by-law is to be introduced at the next meeting of the Council to abolish the office of town physician.

A glove contest is talked of, to take place this week, between two sporting men at Lindsay.

Two weeks ago last Monday a man named John Duffy left his home, a couple of miles south of Lindsay, for the purpose of resuming work with Mr. Thos. Walters at the locks, and since that time has not been seen or heard of. What has become of him is a mystery to his friends and a natural cause of much anxiety to his wife, who, with a family of six children, is left quite unprovided for.—Post.

To Farmers and Horsemen.

A New Patent Horse-shoe.

Advertisement

Mr. James Garnett, formerly of Cavan, now of Dobbington, Ont., has been in town introducing the Smith Horseshoe, recently patented, which, wherever it has been tried, has given the greatest satisfaction. Its advantages over the old form of shoe may be thus summarized :—

It dispenses with the ugly and dangerous caulk; it gives the horse's foot an even bearing all round; it is more easily and quickly put on than the old shoe, there being no caulking to do; a horse having a sore foot can have the shoe set so as to ease the tender parts; there being no caulking or preparing of the shoe to be done before placing it on a horse, a blacksmith can save considerable time and money by using the Smith Shoe.

Referring to this great invention, the Hamilton Spectator says :—

Messrs. Davidson & McNeill are in the city introducing Smith's patent rim shoe, a new horse shoe invented by J. W. Smith, of Wiarton. Smith had a mare that insisted upon cutting herself. He studied the matter out and experimented, the result being a shoe that is destined to replace every other shoe in the market. Some of the advantages of the shoe are these: It prevents slipping, does not ball in snow, prevents contraction of the hoof, bears even all round, and lasts longer, being made of steel, while it is sold at the same price as the ordinary iron shoe. The new shoe is highly recommended by Andersen & Black, blacksmiths; Ten Eyck, veterinary surgeon; Alexander Dunn, St. Nicholas hotel, and others of this city who have thoroughly tested it, and pronounce it perfect. It is intended to manufacture the new shoe in this city, and the necessary machinery is now being prepared. Smith's patent rim shoe is worth the attention of all horse owners.

THE FOLLOWING TESTIMONIALS are well worth the careful study of every owner of a horse :—

Messrs. Davidson & McNeil:

GENTLEMEN,—I have carefully tested Smith's Patent Rim Shoe on the Street Car Horses here and have no hesitation in saying they are in every way the best shoes I ever put on a horse. They possess every advantage over the old shoes, and the icy grades on the street car track here have offered me a good opportunity to judge. Without doubt the Smith Shoe is as near perfection as it is possible to get.

ANDERSON & BLACK,
Blacksmiths for H. S. C. Co.
Hamilton, Dec. 14th, 1885.

Messrs. Davidson & McNeil:

GENTLEMEN,—I have given Smith's patent Rim Shoe a satisfactory trial and will say without hesitation that they are the best winter shoe I have ever used.

M. H. TENEYCK, V. S.
Hamilton, Dec. 14th, 1885.

Messrs. Davidson & McNeil:

GENTLEMEN,—I have tested the Smith Rim Shoe on the bad horses and have no hesitation in saying it is superior to any other, and hereafter I shall use it only. It wears longer that the old kind and the horses are always sure-footed when shod with it and free from any danger of caulking themselves.

ALEX. DUNN,
Prop. St. Nicholas Hotel.
Hamilton, Dec. 17th, 1885.

Messrs. Davidson & McNeil:

GENTLEMEN. — I have carefully tested Smith's Patent Rim Shoe on the omnibus horses here and I am perfectly satisfied that they are the best shoe ever I used.

J. HINDRICK.
Hamilton, Dec. 16th 1885.

I am driver of the stage between Wiarton and Lion's Head (distance of 22 miles). On Saturday I got the front feet of my stage horses shod with Smith patent Rim Shoe. On Saturday night and Monday morning there was a heavy fall of snow into the mud. On Monday morning I started for the Lion's Head. While I had to several times get off and knock the balls off the hind feet which had the caulk shoes on, I never once had to touch the front feet which were shod with the Rim Shoe, the snow leaving the shoe every few steps.

LEVANS HYATT,
Wiarton, Nov. 18th 1885.

The Smith Patent Shoe is the best I have used. I have tried them on every place a horse can be put and they have proved satisfactory in every case.

THOMAS GILBERT.

SIR.—You ask me how I like the new rim horseshoe? I can only say that I am perfectly satisfied with them. I had my horses shod with them a week ago and since then have been drawing heavy loads up and down hills and consider them an A 1 shoe in every respect.

A. BELL,
G.T.R. teamster.
Wiarton, Dec. 22, 1885.

Mr. Garnett during his stay in town, made arrangements, for the sale of these shoes in the town hardware stores, where they may be procured.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

Mr. John McNaughton handed in the report of expenditure for charities in No. 1 Ward, amounting in all to $31.—Received.

Mr. Kendry, chairman of the Committee on Appointments, then read the following report:—

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON APPOINTMENTS.

To the Mayor and Councillors:

GENTLEMEN,—Your committee beg to report and recommend the following: That Cornelius McGrath and William Aldridge be appointed assessors for the year 1886.
All of which is respectfully submitted.
JAS. KENDRY,
Chairman.

January 23rd, 1886.

BY-LAW TO APPOINT ASSESSORS.

On motion of Mr. McClelland, a by-law to appoint assessors for the year 1886 received its first reading, and the Council went into Committee thereon. The by-law was taken up clause by clause.

Mr. McClelland moved, seconded by Mr. Menzies,—That the blank has been filled in by inserting the names of Cornelius McGrath and Wm. Aldridge.

Mr. Rutherford thought a third assessor was desirable and necessary and moved that the name of Mr. Langford also be added.

Moved as an amendment by Mr. Davidson, seconded by Mr. McNeil,—That Messrs. McGrath and Langford be appointed assessors.

On the amendment being put it was lost and the original motion carried.

Mr. Cahill thought the salaries were too small and moved that they be increased to $225, which was lost.

The assessors were appointed at the same salary as last year, $200. The bonds to be the same.

The by-law was finally passed, signed and sealed.

SAWDUST MEMORIAL

Mr. McClelland submitted a memorial to the Governor-General in Council, praying that no action be taken with regard to the application of Peterborough mill owners asking for an Order-in-Council exempting the river Otonabee from the obstruction law, which would allow them to throw their mill refuse in the river, and pointing out that such an exemption would be detrimental to the interests of the town.

Mr. McClelland said that he was informed that the order was about to be passed, and that it was just a matter of courtesy to the town that it was not passed. If this exemption was granted it would seriously affect the town in a few years. At the present rate the Little Lake would soon be filled. It was bad enough now, as it was almost filled with decaying vegetable matter. When a steamboat passed through the lake, it raised up bubles that sickened a person, and which certainly affected the health of the town. To give an idea of the amount of stuff that lodged in the lake he said that 20 million feet of lumber were cut every season, one fourth of which was refuse, and the greater part of which found its way down the river to the Little Lake.

Moved by Mr. McClelland seconded by Mr. McNeil that a copy of the memorial be signed by the Clerk and Mayor, and sealed and forwarded to the Governor in Council.

Mr. Kendry, said he was of the opinion it would be a very serious matter to the town if the mill owners were allowed to throw all their refuse in the river. As it was now it was bad enough. He had lost $1,200 or $1,600 by it himself. It was the refuse from Mr. Irwin's mill that affected him. It was not only saw dust, but slabs and bark also that were thrown in the river. If exemption was granted it would be very serious to manufacturers. The water works would be affected also. The new dam [illegible] the channel [illegible] state of affairs. In the spring [illegible] log in the river the earlier [illegible] into the harbor again.

Mr. Moore, said he was aware it was a serious matter. The mill owners contended that the damage was not being done now, but during the last 30 years, when all the refuse was thrown in the river. They also say that the slabs hold the sawdust in the Little Lake, and if they were dredged out the sawdust would be carried down to Rice Lake. They do not throw the slabs in now. Mr. Irwin has 20,000 cords piled up this year. They say if they are prohibited from putting the sawdust in the river, it will close their businesses. It will cost too much to reconstruct their mills, and they would sooner sell their limits and give up milling. It was a matter that should not be lightly treated, but should be considered seriously. When the town wanted manufacturers it would not do to drive out the mill owners.

Mr. Kendry said Mr. Moore was misinformed, as he could prove that Mr. Irwin allowed slabs and other refuse to escape into the river. The lake would fill just the same if there were no slabs. Other interests than the mill owners should be looked after and considered.

Mr. McClelland said the lake was one of the most attractive features of the town. The mill men had represented to the government, that the river was not navigable, and there was no fish in it. Both these statements were false as everybody knew. The mill men were doing all in their power to bring these two things about, and they should be prevented from doing so. The lake at the present rate of filling, would in a short time be a second and larger edition of Spalding's Bay.

Mr. Rutherford said the question was one between the boat club and the mill owners. The fish were still alive, and if the last 20 years of saw dust treatment did not kill them they would yet survive. He was aware the channels of the lake were filling but the lake might be like the Mississippi, having shifting channels. He thought the mill owners took every precaution. In a few years they will have to close down. Mr. Kendry might take proceedings against Mr. Irwin for damages. He thought it would be wise for the Council to memorialize the Government.

Mr. Menzies thought the difficulty arose to a great extent from the mills above the town, at Young's Point and Lakefield. He thought the lake should be dredged at the expense of the County. He would not advocate annihilating the mill owners by prohibiting them from throwing sawdust in the river. He thought a committee might be appointed to wait upon them and make some amicable arrangement to overcome the difficulty.

Mr. Kendry said if exempted they would throw in everything. They would get no textile manufacturers in town if the saw dust was allowed in the river.

Mr. McNeil said he would be sorry to put the mill owners to the expense of supplying machinery to burn their saw dust. Yet the law said they shall, and it should be enforced. He had taken Dr. Bryce, Secretary of Provincial Board of Health, over the lake and he was surprised at the condition of the lake and said it was a disgrace to the town. It was certain to bring about an epidemic.

The Mayor said the mill owners had spoken to him on the subject. They proposed to memorialize the Town Council before they memorialized the Government. Mr. Irwin kept a kiln to burn refuse. They say that it is only the dust which leaves the bottom of the saws that escapes to the river. If compelled to keep the sawdust out of the river it was tantamount to closing their mills, as to prevent the escape of sawdust the mills would have to be re-constructed. He thought the matter worthy of consideration and that it would be prudent to leave it for another night.

Mr. McClelland said the Mayor was misled. The petition was now before the Government and that it was only a matter of courtesy to the town that it was not granted. If no action was taken the petition would be granted.

It was moved by Mr. Menzies that Messrs. Rutherford, McNeil, Moore, Cahill and the mover be appointed a committee to investigate the matter and report.

Mr. McClelland objected to Mr. Rutherford, being on the Committee as he had signed a petition favoring the petition sent to the Government.

Mr. Rutherford did not wish to act under the circumstances.

Mr. McClelland withdrew his original motion and moved that the memorial receive its first reading.

The memorial received its first reading and the Council went into committee on the second reading.

Mr. Cahill thought the best action to take would be to write to the Government and ask them to suspend action until the Council investigated the matter and expressed its opinion.

The proposal met with the approval of the Council, and Mr. Moore set to work to draft a motion.

MOTIONS.

Moved by Mr. Cahill, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that the clerk be instructed to advertise for tenders for the supply of lumber and round cedar, required for the year, and that the Street and Bridge Committee be authorized to award the contract.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Cahill seconded by Mr. Kendry, that the Treasurer be authorized to give the corporation cheque for $60, to the chairman of the Finance Committee, re Billings settlement.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Kendry seconded by Mr. Hartley, that Mrs. Robert Smith's taxes be remitted, as she is unable to pay them.—Referred to Charity Committee.

Moved by Mr. Kelly seconded by Mr. McNeil, that the chairman of the Charity Committee be authorized to see the ladies of the Protestant Home with reference to Edward Connors.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Davidson seconded by Mr. Cahill, that the Treasurer be authorized to pay the pay sheets for the current year, when certified by the Street and Bridge Committee.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Davidson, seconded by Mr. Cahill, that the chattels used in the old council chamber be sold to Mr. Bradburn, who wished to purchase them, and that the Property Committee be empowered to valuate the articles and conduct the sale.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Moore seconded by Mr. Kendry, that the Clerk of the Council write the Clerk of the Privy Council at Ottawa, that a memorial is at present before and under the consideration of this Council, regarding the throwing of saw dust into the river Otonabee, at, and near the town of Peterborough, and that the government be requested not further to take action on any application of the mill owners regarding the matter, until the town has an opportunity to form an opinion regarding the matter, and that the Council point out that the mills are not now working, and therefore no need of immediate action is necessary for the benefit of mill owners.

Moved by Mr. Moore, seconded by Mr. Yelland, that the propriety of appointment of Town Solicitor, at a salary for such services as shall be required of him by the municipality, and the question of the amount of such compensation and the terms of engagement by the municipality, be said solicitor, be referred to the Committee on Appointment.—Carried.

The Council then adjourned for two weeks.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

Inaugural Session.

Organization of the Council—A. R. Kidd, Esq., Elected Warden.

FIRST DAY—TUESDAY.

The members elect of the several municipalities of the county met this afternoon at 2 o'clock p.m. and having filed the necessary certificates of qualification, took their seats as follows:

Asphodel—Wm. Walsh, Esq., Reeve, Jas. Moore, Esq., Deputy Reeve.
Ashburnham—John Burnham, Esq., Reeve.
Belmont and Methuen—John Brown, Esq., Reeve.
Burleigh, etc.—F. Elmhirst, Esq., Reeve.
Dummer—A. R. Kidd, Esq., Reeve.
Douro—John Moloney, Esq., Reeve; Edward Foley, Esq., Deputy Reeve.
Eamsmore—Wm. Crogh, Esq., Reeve.
Galway—M. Mansfield, Esq., Reeve.

Monaghan—Jas Foster Esq., Reeve.
Norwood—W. H. Stevenson, Esq., Reeve.
Lakefield—R. C. Strickland, Esq., Reeve.
Otonabee—John Lang, Esq., Reeve; Geo. Stewart, Esq., Deputy Reeve.
Smith—M. Sanderson, Esq., Reeve; T. E. Fitzgerald Esq., Deputy Reeve.

WARDEN ELECTED.

The clerk occupying the chair, the election of the Warden was proceeded with.

Mr. Burnham moved, seconded by Mr. Moloney. That R. C. Strickland, Reeve of Lakefield, be Warden of the County for the ensuing year.

Mr. Lang moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Fitzgerald, that A. R. Kidd, Esq., Reeve of Dummer, be Warden of the county for the ensuing year.

Mr. Kidd was elected on the following division:

YEAS.—Messrs. Foley, Moore, Fitzgerald, Lang, Sanderson, Stewart, Walsh, Mansfield and Elmhirst.—9.

NAYS.—Messrs. Moloney, Burnham, Brown, Hicks, Stephenson and Forster.—6.

Messrs. Strickland and Kidd not voting, and Mr. Crough being absent.

Mr. Kidd was conducted to the chair by his mover and seconder, and after taking the oath of office, briefly addressed the Council, thanking them for the honor conferred in him. With so efficient a clerk and treasurer and their efficient engineer, and the assistance of the Council, he hoped to be able to discharge the duties on such manner as not to cause the Council to regret that they had reposed so great confidence in him. In 1841 his grandfather occupied the position of Reeve of Dummer, and the late G. A. Hill was appointed by the Government Warden of the County. He took his election to the Warden's chair as a graceful tribute of respect to the people of Dummer. He was glad to know that he was surrounded by gentlemen of such large municipal experience, referring particularly to several of the veteran members of the body.

AUDITORS.

After motion, the Warden nominated as his Auditor, Mr. F. J. Bell, and Mr. J. J. Hall was nominated by the Council.

The Council then adjourned until ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

THE DUTY OF THE COUNCIL.

Last June The Examiner felt in duty bound to call the attention of the County Council then sitting, to the importance of making a grant of a sum of money in aid of West Riding Agricultural Society. We then took occasion to point out the advantages, immediate and consequent, which the farmers would derive from the holding of a successful agricultural exhibition in the centre of the county. Although the council could not see its way clear at that time to make a grant, still the argument in favour of such a course have only been strengthened by subsequent events. Many members were doubtless influenced in opposing the grant because, the Society being in a sense, a new venture, there was to them no positive assurance that the grant would not be wasted on a failure. But the Society has cut the ground from under such an argument by their vigorous action. In spite of all obstacles, arrangements were made, and a most successful — extraordinarily so under the circumstances — exhibition was held. Though the Council, representing the farmers, withheld its assistance, the Society made a speciality of the departmen, in which farmers have the largest interest. Of a total prize list of $1,265.50, the large sum of 1,065.50 was awarded to live stock, thus showing that the farming interest received an overwhelming preponderance of attention. Such being the case the county council, and the representatives of the farmers, would be justified in liberally aiding the funds of the Society by a grant. The Society intends to erect new buildings and otherwise arrange for an exhibition next fall that, will eclipse, not only anything, ever held in this county, but in this district, and, to meet the largest measure of success, they require funds and the County is called upon to do its share. Since the County reaps the largest share of the benefit its share of contribution should be large. Last fall nearly 90 per cent, of the prize list, over a thousand dollars, was returned directly to the pockets of the farmers, not counting the immense incidental advantages the farmers derived from the splendid exhibition of stock made. Last June the Town Council was willing to give $500 to the Society on condition of the County Council giving a similar sum; but the refusal of the latter to give anything, led the Town Council to cut down their grant to $300. It is to be hoped that the members of the Council having had six months to reflect on the subject, and to see that the objects of the society are pursued with such wisdom and energy as to insure success, will be willing to aid the society liberally. Farmers are of too independent a spirit to take all and give nothing. Last fall they pocketed, fairly, nine-tenths of the prize money, without contributing, through their representatives, one cent, and every member of the County Council may rest assured that his constituents will, not only, not resent his voting for a liberal grant, but will heartily endure his action.

The Liquor Laws

Enforcement of the Scott Act.

On Friday a deputation from the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance, waited upon the Government. Among others the following requests were made :

That the Provincial Government take in hand the thorough enforcement of the Scott Act in all those counties where it has been adopted by the popular vote.

That the Provincial Government take in hand at once the appointment of Police Magistrates in every county for the thorough and efficient enforcement of the Scott Act, and that provision be made for allowing travelling expenses for such magistrates, so that they may hold courts in the various parts of the counties, when it is deemed judicious to do so.

That in every county the officers appointed may be men of well-known sympathy with the law, and of well-known energy and ability for the discharge of such public duty.

The Provincial Government to provide for high priced druggists' licenses in the Scott Act municipalities, with the necessary stringent restrictions regarding evasions and unlawful sales.

The following extract from the proceedings will be read with interest. Referring to the Crooks Act, the following dialogue ensued :—

PROHIBITION AND RESTRICTION.

Mr. Mowat.—Do you find that the law as it stands is enforced ?

Mr. Manning—Pretty generally. Recent indications seem to be that you can go as far as you please in the direction of enforcement. When you come to total suppression you encounter a good deal of opposition, but the general sentiment of the people is in favor of restriction.

Mr. Mowat—Where there is a violation of the law you have no difficulty in proving it and getting a conviction ?

Mr. Manning intimated that he had not experienced any difficulty.

Mr. Orr said that there was difficulty in proving a case in Toronto.

Mr. Manning said that he thought the presence of liquor on the premises in quantities too large for family use should be absolute instead of merely prima facie evidence that it was there for sale.

Mr. Fraser thought that this was a question for the Judge, in his discretion, to decide.

Members of the deputation said that under the present law a man could swear himself out of Court, and a long discussion ensued, in which Mr. Fraser and Mr. Hardy maintained that to prevent the liquor dealer from testifying in his own behalf, would be against the tendency of modern legislation, which was in the direction of even persons charged with the gravest crimes known to the law. Mr. Caswell, a member of the deputation, concurred in this view.

ALLOWING ALL PERSONS TO TESTIFY,

Mr. Manning asked whether the Government considered that the recent decision of the Privy Council placed the enforcement of the Scott Act under the control of the Local Government.

Mr. Mowat said that the Government had not thoroughly considered what its position was ; that this and kindred matters were now under consideration, and they hoped that in a few days they would all be thoroughly considered. The suggestions just made were such as should receive attention.

Mr. Manning said that the abolition of treating was a matter to which the deputation attached much importance.

Mr. Fraser said that it seemed to him that such a law would be extremely difficult to carry on. Did the deputation know of any such law being enforced ?

Mr. Manning thought there was in one of the States of the Union.

Mr. Mowat said that if any member of the deputation had a collection of the liquor laws he would be very glad to avail himself of it.

Mr. Manning next drew attention to the proposal to prohibit all sorts of screens, blinds, &c.

Mr. Fraser—Why should not a respectable man be allowed to have a glass of wine without being seen ?

Mr. Manning—Why should they be ashamed of it ?

Mr. Fraser said that that was the man's own affair—a man might not choose to eat his breakfast on the street.

Mr. Hardy also made some objections to this proposal.

The meeting then proceeded to discuss the question of the Local Government

ENFORCING THE SCOTT ACT.

The members of the Government made very careful enquiries as to the measures with which the deputation would be satisfied.

Mr. Pardee asked whether if the Government should appoint police Magistrates, commissioners and inspectors the temperance people would put their shoulders to the wheel to enforce the law ; or would they expect the Government to employ detectives and enforce the law through the department of justice.

Mr. Manning answered that he thought the temperance people should stand at the back of the authorities.

A long discussion ensued in which the deputation laid considerable stress on the opinion that a magistrate who was known to be opposed to the enforcement of the law, should not be appointed.

POWERS OF MUNICIPALITIES.

During the discussion Mr. Fraser directed the attention of the deputation to the 14th section of the Ontario Act, 44 Vic., chap. 27, as follows :—

"The Council of any County, City, Town, township, or village, in which the second part of the Canada Temperance Act, 1878, is in force, may from time to time set apart any sum or sums of money for the purpose of paying any officer or officers, person or persons, for enforcing or assisting to enforce the Canada Temperance Act, 1878, under their respective jurisdictions, and for the payment of any costs or expenses incurred in and about enforcing or attempting to enforce the same ; and such Councils are hereby authorised and empowered to appoint one or more persons to enforce or assist in enforcing the provisions of the said Act, and to pass by-laws for the government and control of such officers or persons, and defining their duties and mode or amount of payment."

Mr. Fraser added that he was surprised that Scott Act Committees had not availed themselves of this provision. The same public feeling which enabled the Act to be adopted in a county should be sufficient to compel the Council to adopt this provision for enforcing the law.

The discussion then veered off to the question of whether the Province or the municipality should pay the expense of enforcing the law. The disposition of fines was, of course, recognized as an important element in determining the question ; but it appeared that the Scott Act did not clearly point out how the fines should be disposed of. Mr. Fraser thought that if all the fines were put into a fund for the enforcement of the Act, the remainder of the expense might be borne by the municipalities in which the Act was passed. After some further discussion, the deputation thanked the Government for their courteous hearing and withdrew.

Brahma.

I am the mote in the sunbeam, and I am the burning sun;
"Rest here!" I whisper the atom; I call to the orb, "Roll on!"

I am the blush of morning, and I am the evening breeze;
I am the leaf's low murmur, the swell of the terrible seas.

I am the net, the fowler, the bird and its frightened cry:
The mirror, the form reflected, the sound and its echo, I;

The lover's passionate pleading, the maiden's whispered fear,
The warrior, the blade that smites him, the mother's heart wrung tear;

I am intoxicating grapes, wine press and must and wine,
The guest, the host, the traveler, the goblet of crystal fine.

I am the breath of the flute; I am the mind of man,
Gold's glitter, the light of the diamond and the sea pearl's luster wan—

The rose, her poet nightingale, the song from his throat that rise.
The flint, the spark, the taper, the moth that about it flies;

I am both Good and Evil, the deed and the deed's intent,
Temptation, victim, sinner, crime, pardon and punishment;

I am what was, is, will be—creation's ascent and fall;
The link, the chain of existence; beginning and end of all.

Taylor's Visit to Tennyson.

In one of Bayard Taylor's letters to E. C. Stedman, written in 1867, is the following charming description of a visit to Tennyson at Farrington, his country home:

"We arrived about 3 o'clock and were ushered into the drawing-room. The house had been refurnished and a great many pictures and statues added since I was there. In a minute in came Tennyson, cordial as an old friend, followed by his wife. In Tennyson himself I could see no particular change. He did not seem older than when I saw him last. We walked through the park and garden; then M. returned to the house, while he and I went up on the downs and walked for miles along the chalk cliffs above the sea. He was delightfully free and confidential, and I wish I could write to you much of what he said; but it was so inwrought with high philosophy and broad views of life that a fragment here and there would not fairly represent him. He showed me all his newly-acquired territory; among the rest a great stretch of wheat-fields bought for him by Enoch Arden. We dined at 6 in a quaint room hung with pictures, and then went to the drawing-room for dessert.

"Tennyson and I retired to his study at the top of the house, lit pipes, and talked of poetry. He asked me if I could read his 'Boadicea.' I thought I could. 'Read it and let me see!" said he. "I would rather hear you read it!' I answered. Thereupon he did so, chanting the lumbering lines with great unction. I spoke of the idyl of Genevieve as being perhaps his finest poem, and said that I could not read it aloud without my voice breaking down at certain passages. 'Why, I can read and keep my voice!" he exclaimed triumphantly. This I doubted, and he agreed to try after we went down to our wives. But the first thing he did was to produce a magnum of wonderful sherry, thirty years old, which had been sent him by a poetic wine-dealer. Such wine I never tasted. 'It was meant to be drank by Cleopatra or Catherine of Russia,' said Tennyson. We had two glasses apiece, when he said: 'To-night you shall help me drink one of the few bottles of my Waterloo—1815.' The bottle was brought, and after another glass all around Tennyson took up the 'Idyls of the King.' His reading is a strange, monotonous chant, with unexpected falling inflections, which I can not describe, but can imitate exactly. It is very impressive. In spite of myself I became very much excited as he went on. Finally, when Arthur forgives the queen, Tennyson's voice fairly broke. I found tears on my cheeks, and Mr. and Mrs. Tennyson were crying, one on either side of me. He made an effort and went on to the end, closing grandly. 'How can you say,' I asked, (referring to previous conversation), 'that you have no surety of permanent fame? This poem will only die with the language in which it is written.' Mrs. Tennyson started up from her couch. 'It is true!' she exclaimed, 'I have told Alfred the same thing!"—Troy (N. Y.) Times.

Sarah Althea Hill, the woman who pursues Senator Sharon so remorselessly, is said to be no longer an object of interest in San Francisco. At the late rehearing of the case the court-room was almost deserted.

Four miles back from the coast of Southern New Jersey are the ruins of the deserted village of Allaire. The place was the Utopian dream of James D. Allaire, a wealthy visionary, who built it about 1840, embodying various reformatory and socialistic ideas. He intended that it should be a manufacturing center, with stores where the inhabitants could buy at low prices, and with schools for the higher education of all the children. The enterprise was a quick and total failure. The walls of the factories are tumbled down and overgrown, and a cracked bell lies at the foot of the steeple from which it fell years ago.

Making Macaroni.

One of the industries carried on in the Italian quarter of One Hundred and Twelfth street is the manufacture of macaroni. Fifteen workmen are employed. The work is done in a rear room on the second floor. When a reporter called the other day the proprietor, who is a round-faced Neapolitan, said:

"We use the flour from hard winter wheat, and the best we can get of its kind. We pour the flour into these tubs and put in about one gallon of water to thirty pounds of flour. We do not measure it; the men let in a little water, and they know when the dough is right."

Two men were leaning over the tube that had apparently been put into the room by the builder for wash-tubs. They allowed the water to run slowly from the faucets into the mixture of flour, all the time stirring, lifting, punching, and pulling it with their hands as if death awaited their first stop to rest.

"It is very exhausting work," said the boss. "When they can work no longer two others, who are resting in the next room, will take their places. They shift as often as every hour some days. When it is thoroughly mixed the dough is kneaded on the table."

The table was a big stout one, built on the opposite side of the room. Two long levers projected over it, the ends of which were loosely fastened to the wall a short distance above the table by stout swivels. Round blocks, like pestles, were suspended under the levers. The dough, in huge batches, was placed under the levers, and then three men took hold of each lever, adjusted the pestles over the dough, and threw their weight on them. They worked the levers in short arcs or circles, and their exertions made a dough at once stiff and hard, and yet withal very tough and tenacious.

"How do you make it into strings?"

"That is easy. See."

Some men were placing a huge loaf of the dough into a vertical copper cylinder with a strong screw above it, the machine looking something like an old-fashioned hand cider-press. On top of the dough the men placed a piston that fit the cylinder nicely, and then they ran the screw down on it. They then clapped hold of three long levers and began to walk around, but they did not walk rapidly nor easily. When the screw began to get a good hold, little slender streams of dough shot down through small perforations in the bottom of the cylinders. As fast as they reached a length of two feet or more they were cut off by a man who hung them over wooden frames and carried them away.

"We dry them on those frames eight days," said the boss. "When the air is moist we dry them longer. Big holes in the cylinders make macaroni; little holes vermecilli. Sometimes it is rolled thin like a sheet of paper, and cut with razors into different shapes. We call the pieces semaza di meloni, or what you call melon seed; capelletti—little hats, and occhi di pernici—partridge eye, according to the shapes. These are used to thicken soup, but we do not make much of them. The macaroni has the largest sale, but only Italians can cook it. It is easy to say boil it in pure water, dress it with concentrated meat gravy and grated cheese, and serve it hot, but who can do it? In Genoa the macaroni is colored with saffron. Neapolitans use only pure flour and pure water. When Neapolitan macaroni is cooked by an Italian it has a very faint greenish tinge. In Italy the king, the lazzaroni all eat macaroni every day. You should see them. Zobini, there at the tub, he can swallow a macaroni three feet long and never break it. No man can do so well in this building. If Zobini were in his own country he would be a famous man, but he would have no gravy nor cheese with his macaroni, so he stays here."—New York Sun.

Luckless Inventors.

One of the saddest tales in the history of invention is that of Eli Whitney and the cotton gin. Whitney was a Massachusetts man, and went to the South as a school-teacher. Like the others mentioned, he displayed remarkable inventive genius from an early age, and was a constant source of anxiety to his worthy father, who, when he saw him always engaged in making some toy, imagined he was never destined to amount to much. The invention of the gin was the result of the Southern visit, and of his observation of the time lost in separating the seed from the lint. To separate a pound was a full day's work for a woman and consequently cotton was little used. After much labor Whitney perfected his machine, but the experience of other inventors who had generally found the utmost difficulty in introducing their ideas was not his, for the people of Georgia had so high an appreciation of the value of the invention, that they broke into his room and stole his models, carrying them off and using the idea to make other machines. A number of patents were issued, the machines each varying a little from each other, but all having Whitney's idea, and for the invention he never realized anything but lawsuits. After carrying these on fruitlessly for a number of years, he gave up the effort to recover either remuneration or damages, and applied himself to the invention of machinery to make arms for the government. In this he did well, but from his wonderful invention, which gave the South its leading industry, he received little or nothing.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Miss Ramie Austin, an actress, has had herself photographed as the Bartholdi Liberty. The artist is the same who photographed a well-known actress in the act of swinging vigorously from a high belfry, her hands clasped to the tongue of the bell, under which he caused to be placed the familiar legend, "Curfew shall not toll to-night." It was explained that the lady in the picture had been suspended full length upon an invisible wire running up from the floor of the photograph gallery at a steep angle. He also photographed Ida Mulle in impossible positions. Miss Austin in form and features is well fitted for the undertaking. She was enveloped in a bronze-colored garment which clung in graceful folds about her figure, her white arms holding the tablet and torch.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competitors, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $125 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this papre who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

TAKING STOCK!

We duty devolving upon the business man is as important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's repeating clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognized duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shown in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out any winter goods left over, at once.

of our readers to the advertisement of the Egan Imperial Truss Co. in this issue. From a number of testimonials before us, they are very highly recommended and are the best that has yet come before our notice. Note the date and go and see the representatives of this Co. when here.

Another Claim Settled.

Mr. Chas Billings has accepted a cheque for $60 on settlemant in full of his claim against the town for damages. At last night's meeting of the Council, the Clerk was authorized to give Mr. Davidson a cheque for the amount, which he had previously paid.

Don't Miss It.

A New Turnout.

Mr. Wm. Job, the lightning gaslamp lighter, when on duty now drives a fast sorrel horse attached to a new blue skeleton cutter, and carries a new red ladder. He may be seen any evening going his rounds like a blue streak. It is said the first night he had the new apparatus, the lamps were all lighted by about 6 o'clock. The saying "as poor as Job's turkey" has given place to "as fast as Job's horse."

What We may Expect.

Cooler weather.

Meeting of the directors of the West-riding Agricultural Society to-morrow.

A grant to the Society to be asked from the County Council.

And the Council to come down with a cool thousand or so.

A match with the Keene curlers to-morrow.

And a brush between local rinks.

Moderate to fresh west to north winds; generally fair weather, becoming colder; a few snow flurries.

Only a Scalp Wound.

Last night a lively scene took place on Simcoe street between a son of Vulcan and a jeweller. The former had left a watch to get repaired, and last night called for it. Both parties were under the influence of alcoholic stimulants, and high words, and almost blows, ensued. The amount in dispute was a dollar, and at length the jeweller, on condition of receiving that sum, gave Vulcan the watch, whereupon the latter turned to leave the shop without leaving the dollar. The jeweller, says the Vulcan, then struck him in the back of the head with a file in such a way that the tool penetrated the scalp and remained sticking there till the blacksmith ran as far as the Grand Central, where a good Samaritan removed the weapon. No legal action has been taken.

Evading the Law.

A small boy who resides on McDonnell street, has contrived to avoid the law which prohibits coursing down hills on the streets with sleighs and toboggans, and at the same time enjoys the sport. He takes his ride down hill on a barrel stave. A bread pan will be the next article used.

The Sawdust Crusade.

The Sawdust is not confined to the river and Little Lake, it is in the very air. A large amount of civic eloquence was spent on the subject last night and a meeting of the Anti-Sawdust Association is called for Wednesday next at 7.30 p.m., at the Mechanics' Institute, to consider a new phase of the question.

The Conquering Juniors.

Last night a match was played between curling rinks composed of representatives of the seniors and juniors of the club, the latter under 16 years of age. The juniors made a very creditable victory, chalking up 19 to 15 points. The following is the score:—

Enforcing the Scott Act.

To the Editor of THE DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—As one of the persons more or less actively concerned in the adoption of the "Scott Act," I feel it my duty to point out that unless the Act is vigorously and successfully enforced, the labor expended on the adoption will, in great measure, be lost. The recent conflict of authority between the Dominion and Provincial Governments on the license question has led to a great deal of confusion, which necessarily involves the enforcement of the Scott Act. But with honest effort, there are means available to make the Act largely a success. A section of the Ontario Act passed, I think, in 1881, empowers the council of any county in which the second part of the Canada Temperance Act (Scott Act) is in force, to set apart money for the purpose of paying officers to enforce the Act, and also to appoint one or more officers to assist in enforcing it. Now the county has pronounced by a majority of between four and five hundred in favor of the Scott Act, and therefore the County Council at its present session will be not only justified, but will be doing its duty by taking the course suggested in the above referred to Act, and in making the appropriations and appointments which they are therein empowered to make. Considering the large majority in favour of the Act, such action would be in harmony with the wishes of the people, and there is no danger of the council being reproved for taking the course suggested. There is another point I suggest to the County Council. It has been proved that in Scott Act counties where their is no County Police Magistrate, it is next to impossible to enforce convictions made by ordinary Justices of the Peace, hence the necessity of the County Council memorializing the Ontario Government to appoint a Police Magistrate for this county. The friends o fthe Scott Act call for it as a right, and as the friends of the Act compose a large majority of the people, the County Council cannot err in carrying out their wishes.

FAST SKATING.

Two or three weeks ago the Independent told how a couple of young fellows had skated all the way from Bobcaygeon to Lindsay, a distance of 22 miles, in one hour and thirty-five minutes, and seemed to think it was quite a feat. Well, it was pretty good for 'Caygeonites, but we have boys here at the Falls who can beat it "as easy as wink." A day or two before Christmas three of them—namely, Walter Hunter, Albert Power and Joseph Littleston—took the ice at Greene & Ellis' wharf and skated to Lindsay in less than fifty minutes by the watch one of them carried. They took no short cuts through the drowned land, but followed the channel of the river, and if the distance is, as it is said to be, fully seventeen miles, they averaged a mile every three minutes. Later in the day they skated home again, and made the return trip in just one hour.—Gazette.

"Step Upward."

A Synopsis of the Sermon on the above Subject by the Rev. I. Tovell, delivered in the George Street Church, Sunday Evening.

Rev. I. Tovell, Sunday evening in the George Street Church, delivered a sermon on "Stepping Upward," as pictured in the return of the prodigal son, as discribed in the 15th chapter of the Epistle of St. Luke. He said as last Sunday he had given the dark side of the picture, shewing the downward course of the prodigal son—his departure, degredation and dishonor to-night he would show the bright side. It was a blessed thing that in all human darkness there is also a bright side. In the story of the prodigal there was a bright side. There was hope for those who felt they were where the prodigal was left last week,—in degredation and dishonor. While studying the life of the prodigal we should all look for that blessed hope beyond the grave. To assist in remembering the steps they would all begin with an R. The first step in the prodigals upward course was that he began to REFLECT.

His mind went back to his fathers home, where he had had all the necessaries of life. It was a blessed change came over him when he began to think of himself. Of his homeless and hungry condition. It was wonderful the agencies God employed to bring his children to Him. Although hunger and homelessness might not be the means used, yet it is generally some form of pain. It was an eventful period in a person's history when God, by His agencies, led a person to say, "Whither am I drifting," "Whither shall I land." He remembered a young man who was distressed after thinking about his life, and said to him, "I am not the boy I once was." This young man had once been pure and faithful, but had been carried away by pleasure to vice, and on reflection saw where he was. He was afterwards converted. This was true in thousands of cases. How often this is the case. Souls drift quickly down from the path of virtue to the slimy path of vice. If men could be brought to think of where they are it would be easy to lead them to a forgiving father.

The next upward step the prodigal took was

REPENTANCE.

His reflection took a right turn when he thought he would return to his father and say: "Father, I have sinned against heaven and before Thee." The wrong committed against God was the greater and he confessed this first. This is where a general mistake is made. Men think they are only offending men, when they are also sending an arrow into their heavenly father. Every deed that will not bear investigation, sends sorrow to the fathers heart, and if not repented of, and the father's forgiveness secured, it will act as a weight to drag the offender down to hell. The prodigal felt he had lost his own respect and character, as well as wronging his father. A lesson should be learned from the feeling of remorse which pressed the young man when he thought of what he had done. How it might have been averted. Many persons, the young especially, never think of the consequences that may follow a single sin, or the degredation that may be heaped on parents.

The third step in the upward course of the prodigal was

RESOLUTION.

He took a noble resolution determining to return to his father and confess his sin, giving up his right to a place as a son, and desiring the place of a servant. The Lord must have instinctively directed him to do this. He did not dispair, but trusted in the kindness of his father. Ours is the privilege to choose, and God's policy never to reject. It is far more to decide whether he will accept or reject the Lord. The possibility of good or evil is with the individual. God is always willing to receive, but the "I will accept," or "I will not" decides. The "will" is the germ of imortality or of everlasting death. The fourth step was the spirit of

RENUNCIATION.

He was willing to give up what was once his when he said he was in more worthy to be called his father's son. Prudence before destruction and pride before a fall is proverbial. Pride walked with the young man on his downward course and humility accompanied him on the upward course. The Pharisee was a good example of pride and the publican of humility. Pride was the course of a great deal of the sin and degredation of to-day. It leads young people to lay aside character for dress and often led to dishonesty and disgrace. It created trouble in heaven when one of the angles was expelled by reason of it. Humility was the opposite. As when the prophet said "I am unclean, I am a man of unclean lips." Some persons said "Oh, I am as good as some who take the sacrament. The speaker remembered when he used to challenge the world to point its finger at him and say he was not morally perfect. It only needed a little touch of the Holy Spirit to show him his true position. It was then he honored the old people he had formerly despised and allowed himself to be taught by them. Since then he could say, "Other refuge have I none, hange my helpless soul on Thee."

The last step in the prodigal's upward course was

RESTORATION.

It would be a good thing if all would apply this personally. No doubt it was not a sudden change, but a long and weary way. The prodigal had thought over his past, of his foolish downward course, and hoped for the future yet was fearful of his father, who in justice might cast him out. On returning he found his father ready to recieve him, long before he came to him. The speaker said he had a beautiful picture of the meeting of the father and son, which he wished all could see. He then gave a vivid description of the meeting of the father and son, describing all the home influences, the music, the fire, the light, etc., all welcoming him back. It was a descriptive picture of the joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth. There were those present who had been instrumental in making joy in heaven. He concluded by making an eloquent appeal to those who were feeding on the husks, to return to their heavenly father and be forgiven.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. JOHN LANG,
County Council Chamber, Chairman.
Peterborough, Jan. 27th 1886.

The report was received and adopted.

UNION OF SOUTH MONAGHAN.

Mr. Strickland read a letter received from Mr. Riddell, Reeve of South Monaghan, stating that a deputation from his township would appear before the County Council today, to negotiate with the Council on what terms a union of South Monaghan with the County of Peterborough could be effected.

Mr. Strickland, in presenting the letter, expressed the hope that the members would deal liberally with the deputation, and that satisfactory arrangements might be made to include in the territory of this County, so large and important a township as South Monaghan.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

Moved by Mr. Strickland, seconded by Mr. Brown, that the Warden, Mr. Moloney and the mover be a deputation from this Council to meet with the Advisory Committee, appointed at the late public meeting in Peterborough, to arrange for a deputation to proceed to Ottawa to urge upon the Government the necessity of placing another section of the Trent Valley Canal under contract.

In this connection Mr. Strickland referred to a remark dropped by the Warden in his address yesterday, which some members took as a reflection upon himself (Mr. Strickland), but he assured the Warden that he only took the allusion as a little pleasantry. He recognized the importance of the Trent Valley Canal and he hoped his name would go down to posterity as an active promoter of so important a work.

The motion was agreed to.

EXHIBITION BUILDINGS.

On motion, a deputation from the West Riding Agricultural Society was heard.

Mr. Garbutt, president of the society, stated that the object of the deputation was to secure from the Council a grant of at least $1,000 to assist in the erection of exhibition buildings, worthy of both town and county. He referred to the fact that the sheds and fences had been put up last year at a cost of over $2,000, and had all been paid for, thanks to the liberality of the Town Council, and several liberally inclined gentlemen in Peterborough and surrounding country. He thought the farmers would be amply repaid for the county making a grant, as a large proportion of the liberal prize money given, went back to the farmers. The town of Peterborough was splendidly located for the holding of a large exhibition, and the directors, if they received the necessary encouragement, purpose erecting a building in keeping with the importance of the town and one that would cost over $4,000. He gave figures illustrating the amounts paid in prize money and the large proportion that went to the farmers. He hoped the Council would deal with the matter in a liberal spirit.

Mr. Vance, of Cavan, although not a ratepayer of the County, did his business here, and would be glad to see buildings worth of the town and surrounding country erected in Peterborough. He thought there was no other place, between Ottawa and Toronto that could offer such avantages.

Mr. W. Collins felt satisfied that the County would deal liberally with the Society. He felt that the president had asked too little to put up such buildings as were proposed to be erected.

Mr. Strickland thought the exhibition should not be called the West Riding show, but the Peterborough Central Exhibition, as the former gave it a sectional aspect. The East and West Ridings should amalgamate, and have a united show in Peterborough.

Mr. Stratton referred to the energetic action of the committee last year in having so them on the work that had been done. He pointed out the importance of placing the enterprise on a sound, financial basis. Any money the county might see fit to grant would not go the town of Peterborough, but would be, to a large extent, distributed among the farmers in the form of prize money. It was the province of the County Council, and it had been their practice heretofore, to encourage agricultural interests, and they could not do so more effectively than in freely assisting the Society now soliciting a grant, which should be encouraged, so that a successful Central Exhibition might pave the way for the holding of the Provincial Exhibition in Peterborough at no distant date.

Mr. Strickland thought the Council would act more liberally this year. He regretted that Mr. Carnegie had resigned, as he had been an active officer of the Society.

Messrs. Hugh Davidson, J. B. McWilliams and Mr. Joseph Tully also addressed the Council on behalf of the solicited grant.

Moved by Mr. Moloney, seconded by Mr. Walsh,—That the matter be referred to the Finance Committee.

After an informal discussion, in which the deputation and members took part,

Mr. Burnham moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Strickland, — That this Council will grant one fourth of the cost of permanent exhibition buildings for both East and West Riding Agricultural Society, such cost in any case not to exceed $4,000, provided that, as to the grant to the West Riding, it shall be conditional upon the Town Council giving an equal amount. The informal discussion continued, in which the idea of an amalgamation of the East and West riding societies and their branches was broached, and had both supporters and opponents. Mr. Burnham owing to the multiplicity of opinions, withdrew his motion and allowed the matter to go to the Finance Committee for further consideration.

Council then adjourned till two o'clock.

Keene.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Curling match this Wednesday afternoon between the Peterborough and Keene clubs, in the Keene Curling Rink.

About a dozen skaters went to the Hastings' Carnival from this place.

J. B. Fife was kicked on the thigh by a horse last week and seriously hurt. A miracle the leg was not broken. It is doing well.

Mrs. McNeil, sr., is seriously ill.

The question is going the rounds whether we are to have a cheese factory or a creamery in this locality the coming season.

The wedding of Miss Letitia Moore and Mr. Wm. Shearer, of Otonabee, was one of the largest parties of the season. The gifts were numerous and costly, and the happy couple have the hearty good wishes of every one. Rev. Mr. Andrews officiated.

Arrangements are being made for another grand carnival in the Keene Rink. The supervisors will have matters in order about the twentieth of February. The one last week being such a decided success makes much confidence in the popularity of the coming display.

The costumes were rich and varied in the carnival on Wednesday, the 20th, and all agree that it was the best ever held in Keene.

The prizes were neat and appropriate, and the skating excellent.

The ladies' costumes were particularly good, so much so that it was hard to decide in the matter of the prizes.

Below we give a list of names and characters so far as we were able to procure them:

Bears at Sharbot Lake.

On Tuesday, Mr. T. J. Hampton, of Sharbot Lake, shot three bears in one den. The bears was discovered by his dog, which followed them to their hole and kept them there till Mr. Hampton procured a gun and shot them.

THE BRITISH CRISIS.

Defeat of the Salisbury Government on the Address.

LONDON, Jan. 26th.—Lord Salisbury was defeated to-day on an amendment to the address on the subject of land allotment.

On the introduction of the address Sir Michael Hicks-Beach said that the government would willingly accept the decision of the house, as they had assumed office with reluctance and would resign without regret.

The amendment was adopted by a vote of 329 to 250, the government thus being defeated.

Mr. Collings' amendment, on which the government was defeated, expresses regret that no measures are announced in the Queen's speech for the relief of the sufferers by the depression in trade and agriculture, particularly in regard to affording facilities to farm laborers, etc., for obtaining allotments of small holdings on equitable terms as to rent and security of tenure.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The Morning Post says that the resignation of the government will be announced on Thursday.

Imperial Parliament.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—In the House of Commons yesterday, Dr. Hunter withdrew his amendment on the advice of Mr. Gladstone, to refer until credit was asked for Burmah.

Mr. James William Barclay (Liberal) introduced an amendment on the question of land reform, which was rejected by a majority of 28. Lord Hartington, Mr. Goschen and Leonard Courtney, Liberals, voted with Government on Mr. Barclay's amendment. Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Labouchere, Mr. Herbert Gladstone and the Parnellite members supported the amendment. Mr. Gladstone, Sir. William Vernon Harcourt and Mr. Trevelyan did not vote.

In the House of Lords Lord Salisbury said he hoped that within two days the Government would be able to explain the steps which it is considered necessary to take in Ireland. Lord Kimberly said he was surprised that Mr. Smith's short sojourn in Dublin has enabled the Government to mature and announce its Irish policy. Lord Kilmorey withdrew his motion to abolish the Lord Lieutenancy of Ireland. Lord Salisbury confirmed Mr. Bourke's statement regarding the action of the powers in Greece.

It is rumored that Lord Salisbury's statements regarding Ireland was due to a telegram from the Chief Secretary, Mr. Smith, saying repression was absolutely necessary. The Press Association states that the measure will include the proclamation of the National League, and remedial measures.

The Parnellite members of Parliament held a meeting last night to discuss Lord Salisbury's statement regarding the Government's Irish programme.

It is reported that the Parnellites have decided to debate Mr O'Brien's amendment in a week and also to support Mr. Collings' amendment to the Address on the subject of allotments. This will likely result in the defeat of the Government. The Government has consented to modify the new procedure rule so as to provide that the House of Commons shall meet at four and adjourn by one, abolishing the proposed dinner hour.

The War Cloud's Look.

The Attention of Europe Directed to It.

ATHENS, Jan. 26.—Mr. Rumbold, British Minister of Athens, in imparting to the Greek government Premier Salisbury's note, used language tending to break the relations existing between England and Greece.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—A despatch from Vienna says that Lord Salisbury's note to Greece was to the fact that he heard that Greece was about to issue letters of marque to privateers. It is reported that the finances of Greece are not in a flourishing condition.

A despatch from Varna says that the Sultan and Prince Alexander have agreed to a personal union of Bulgarians. The powers have assented to this settlement.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The Greek Minister has been interviewed in reference to the possibility of war between Greece and Turkey. He denied that the government of Greece had any intention of issuing letters of marque in the event of hostilities breaking out. His government, he said, had a sufficient number of vessels to cope with Turkey without resorting to such an extreme measure. Greece had no desire to follow the Alabama experiences of England.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 26.—The Journal de St. Petersburg says it is believed that Greece will still resist the promptings of passion, and will find that a course in opposition to the will of Europe is useless in view of Europe's determination to admit of no change in the territory which would infringe on the treaty of Berlin.

People of Athens, through a committee, have telegraphed to Gladstone as follows: "We place in your hands the Hellenic cause, with the firm hope that it will find in you a generous champion." Mr. Gladstone in response, telegraphed: "Considering the authority attached to the action of the powers, both on general grounds and by reason of their intervention in the formation of a Greek kingdom. I earnestly hope Greece will pause before placing herself on this occasion in conflict with deliberate and united recommendations."

The British Mediterranean fleet, under Admiral Hay, has been ordered to Piracus.

Athens, Jan. 26 (noon).—The cabinet council, with the King presiding, is now in session, discussing the political situation. New regiments are being rapidly formed for active service.

Athens, Jan. 26.—The Greek fleet has departed from Piracus to avoid being blockaded by the British fleet. The Greek fleet comprises 33 ships, including two ironclads and six gunboats. Seven Turkish ironclads are cruising in the vicinity of Preveza Espirus, on the north side of the entrance to the Gulf of Arta.

Haliburton.

Last week John Reid, our esteemed ex-constable, distinguished himself, whilst in company with C Austin, by the shooting of a big bear and the capture of two little cubs. The bear was discovered under the roots of a turned-up tree, and was shot through the head at once, but when the carcase was hauled out, it was found there were two little cubs, not more than two or three days old, with their dead mother. The cubs were removed and are being brought up by hand. The place where the bear was shot was just outside the village. She weighed 300 lbs., and had only three legs, one of the front legs having been evidently cut off in a steel trap. The skin was a fine one. The young ones are doing as well as can be expected.—Independent.

MR. WARDEN KIDD.

The EXAMINER takes pleasure in extending to Mr. A. R. Kidd, Reeve of Dummer, cordial congratulations on the occasion of his election as Warden, of the County of Peterborough for the year 1886. We feel sure that the new incumbent will discharge the duties of the office in a manner to justify the wisdom of the Council in elevating him to the position. Mr. Kidd is a native of the township he represents, having been born there about fifty years ago. He has an extensive and varied municipal experience, having sat in the County Council as Reeve of Dummer for seven years, beside sitting as Councillor for several terms. He has in turn also filled all the municipal offices existing in a township, except those of clerk and treasurer and may be considered and actually is well familiarised with all the principles and details of Municipal Legislation. He inherits, his aptitude in municipal matters, his grandfather, Mr. Alexander Kidd, having been the first Reeve of Dummer—in 1841, the same year that Mr. George A. Hill was appointed, by the Government, Warden of the old Newcastle district. Mr. Kidd is, therefore, the first representative of Dummer to fill the Warden's chair since 1841. The mantle has fallen on worthy shoulders this year, and no doubt Mr. Warden Kidd's large municipal experience and his personal popularity among the members of the Council, create conditions that will lead to his performing the functions of the office to which he has been elected, with credit, to himself and with credit to and in the interest of the County of Peterborough.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Voting on the Scott Act takes place in Pontiac county on Thursday.

A Toronto despatch states that there is intense activity on both sides of politics in getting applications for persons claiming to be entitled to vote under the Dominion Franchise Act.

There are other humorous papers in England besides Punch. The London Figaro describes Sir John Macdonald as "a statesman who has risen above party politics." Canadians do not need a foot note to tell them that "this is sarcasm."

A report that Sullivan, the noted bully and slugger who seems, to be the missing link, between the man and the brute, with the call decidedly in favor of the brute, had been shot and killed in New York, has unfortunately been proved untrue. He will still have a chance to knock down a few more waiter girls and newsboys.

Mr. Costigan, Minister of Inland Revenue, has been seriously indisposed for some weeks. He has not attended the Cabinet Council meetings lately and it is alleged that Sir John Macdonald is carefully studying that part of the British North America Act which provides machinery for the removal of a Cabinet Minister who will not resign.

Toronto is a modest city. It is proposed to send the Queen's Own and Grenadier regiments of volunteers to the Colonial Exhibition in London, as specimen bricks of Canadian soldiers. If Toronto will bear the expense, there can be objection to the proposal; but if the country has to do the paying, we had better look about us and select the crack corps of our native militia.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The first meeting of the Council elect for 1886, met in the Council Chamber on Wednesday, the 20th inst.

Present: R. C. Strickland, Reeve, in the chair, Messrs. McWilliams, Cox, Moore and Isbister, Councillors.

The Clerk reported that all had taken the regular declarations.

Minutes of former meeting read and adopted.

The following by-laws received their several readings, and were passed, sealed and signed by the Reeve and Clerk.

To appoint W. J. Wallace and W. M. Graham, Auditors.

To divide the village into wards for polling purposes.

To appoint Mr. Geo. Cochrane to the joint offices of Assessor, Constable and Health Inspector.

To appoint W. McDonald, Collector.

To appoint Isaac Watson, sr., Road Master.

Moved by Coun. McWilliams, seconded by Coun. Cox, that the Clerk be, and is hereby instructed to have prepared, a by-law by next meeting of this Council, to be submitted to the ratepayers for the issuing of Debentures, for the term of 15 years, to raise the sum of two thousand two hundred and fifty dollars, to purchase and improve Mill Reserve No. 1, Registered plan of the village of Lakefield, for a Town Hall and market place, payments to be made by sinking fund.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. McWilliams, seconded by Coun. Moore, that the following account be paid, and the Reeve's order due issue for the same, viz., David Arnott, stove pipes, etc., $23.75.—Carried.

Moved by Coun. McWilliams, seconded by Coun. Cox, that this Council do now adjourn to meet at the call of the Reeve.—Carried.

A GOOD APPOINTMENT.

At a meeting of the village council on Wednesday they appointed Mr. George Cochrane as village constable, and it is to be hoped that he will accept that office, since for the past year we have been virtually without such an officer, and the result was that rowdyism had full play, much to the disgust and annoyance of our order-loving citizens. With Mr. Cochrane in office we will have no fear that the infliction will be repeated, as he will show neither fear or favor, and transgressors may expect no quarter—except in the lock-up with an interview with some of our J. P.'s or the Police Magistrate in Peterborough.

IMPROVEMENTS.

In order to keep up with the times and to enable him to get on with his orders, Mr. Peter Baptie has just added some new machinery to his already well-appointed establishment, and can now turn out anything in the builders' or joiners' line in first-class style and in short order. Very few places the size of Lakefield can boast of as complete an establishment as Baptie's planing mill and sash factory.

HYDROPHOBIA.

The hydrophobia scare has evidently reached our village, as at the last Council meeting one of our "City" Fathers gave notice of his intention to introduce a by-law imposing a tax on dogs, not only to try and lessen the number of dogs kept in the village, but with the laudable desire to make up the deficiency in the revenue which will be caused by the Scott Act coming in force. The number of dogs kept in the village is not out of the way, and I have never heard of any complaints of their causing any annoyance, while it would be almost useless to impose a tax while all the surrounding municipalities have none. It was tried several years ago by the County Council, but, as it did not work, was taken off the books after one year's trial. In the next place, if our friend wishes to increase our village revenue, better tax those who voted for the Scott Act, or the whole village, not the owners of dogs. Better turn his attention to a cow by-law and save our gardens and shade trees during the coming summer; he will also receive the thanks of the ladies and children who now have to wade through mud or deep snow, while the pet cow monopolizes the sidewalks, leaving them in a state resembling a barnyard. The streets of a town or village are not meant for a cow pasture, and the sooner some people realize that fact, it will be better for all concerned.

TEA MEETING.

A tea meeting, in connection with the Baptist Church, will be given in the P.C.A. hall, on Tuesday evening February 9th. During the evening a lecture will be given by Rev. A. H. Munro, of Peterborough. Subject: "Lessons of Life." Look for particulars next week.

A Religious Maniac

Murders a Defenceless Old Woman.

A Henderson, Ky., despatch says:—A most heinous murder was committed at two o'clock yesterday morning three miles from this city. Colvin Simpson, a negro, forced an entrance to Mrs. Graves' residence. She and her two daughters fled out of the front door, followed by the negro. Mrs. Graves was overtaken by the negro and killed with a bludgeon. Simpson says he was sent by God to do the deed because Mrs. Graves would not pray. The girls escaped to a neighbor's house. Simpson then went to the residence of Miles Brown, near the place of the tragedy, drove him out of his cabin and took possession of it. The news spread rapidly, and the neighbors surrounded the cabin and stood guard during the balance of the night until officers from this city arrived. The doors were battered down and Simpson was captured and brought to Henderson. He feigns insanity, and claims to have captured the devil and set the world free. One of his first acts in the jail was to strike the deputy jailer, and but for prompt assistance he would have killed him. Mrs. Graves was 60 years old. There is talk of lynching the negro.

"After the Horse is Stolen."

From Winnipeg comes a despatch to the effect that "Col. Sproat, of Prince Albert, is making a survey of the lands occupied by French half-breeds at Batoche and St. Louis de Langevin. A survey will be made on a plan satisfactory to the halfbreeds. Mr. Duck, of the Land Department, is also at Batoche taking evidence in support of the halfbreeds' claims for patents to lands held by them." Had these steps been taken a year ago, the power of Riel to stir up a rebellion would have been taken from him, and the loss of life and the destruction of property that resulted from that hot-headed method of securing redress would have been prevented. Unfortunately for the country, the administrators of its affairs were too busy log-rolling for their speculating friends to pay any attention to the half-breeds till the conflict at Duck Lake brought them to their senses. Then it was too late.—Hamilton Times.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $200 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $100 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and those we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

J. B. STRATTON.

LOVE BY TELEPHONE.

I was the happiest man in the city as I folded and laid away in my pocket-book a letter from the dearest girl in the world, and jumped on the horse-car en route for my office.

Some months had passed since I saw my Agnes for the first time at a dinner at the Peyton's. I had frequently met Miss Georgie Peyton in society, and had been several times invited to her receptions, so I was not surprised to receive one day an invitation to dine with her "informally," to meet a young lady from Aiken, S. C. Of course I presented myself at this informal dinner in full evening dress, where I met some other gentlemen in similar attire—Clarkson was one of them—and a few young ladies, and was introduced to my Agnes. If I could only make you see her as she appeared to me that night—so fresh and blooming; the blue of her clear, peaceful eyes; the delicious curve of the delicate lips! But enough that then and there I yielded, and became her ardent adorer.

From the first she distinguished me with her favor. I was allowed to claim the best dances; they were always my flowers that she carried, and finally, for she returned to Aiken, I was her accepted lover.

The year had flown swiftly, and now a brilliant prospect seemed to open before me. My firm were about to establish a branch department in another part of the city, and proposed to make one of their clerks a junior partner and manager of the new concern. I had been the longest in their employ, and had reason to think I was regarded with favor by "Old Gruff"—as Mr. Gruffland, the senior partner, was called—and he would be the one to make the promotion and settle the question of salary.

Indeed, for some weeks I had seen that he was working the management into my hands, so I felt justified in writing to Agnes, urging our immediate union. The dear girl consented, and in the latter received that morning she told me she was coming again, to make a long visit at the Peytons, to "do some shopping." Entrancing words.

Well, she came. There was a demure but delightful meeting at the station, and an enchanting twenty minutes until I delivered her to Miss Georgie's arms at the Peyton's door.

Then followed days of devotion to work, followed by evenings of unalloyed bliss. I say "unalloyed," but there was one drawback. The Peyton family were very considerate, Miss Georgie especially so, but my darling Agnes was haunted with the fear that they would think her visit to them was only to enjoy my society, and was constantly suggesting that we should "join the family in the sitting-room." Old Mrs. Peyton was a bore, but a mild one—paterfamilias an unmitigated one; Miss Georgie was benignant, but slightly tiresome. There was only one other member of the family, a pretty little fellow named Ralph, but the girls had taken to calling him Raphael, from some fancied resemblance to one of the Sistine cherubs. He seemed a quiet little chap, with a sweet innocence of expression and demeanor, who posed a good deal of the time with his cheek on his hand, after the manner of the cherub aforesaid.

Agnes had been in the city a few weeks when, one morning, the telephone bell in our office rang sharply. This was of frequent occurrence, and Clarkson's desk was stationed near it to save time in answering the call. The rest of us scarcely looked up as the familiar "Hullo!" was shouted, or the concluding "All right! I'll tell Mr. Gruffland. Good-by!" But this morning Clarkson turned to me with: "This is for you, Dixon." Accordingly I shouted "Hullo!" and in return heard Miss Georgie's voice:

"Is that you, Mr. Dixon? Agnes is here and wants to try to speak to you."

Then I heard her giving directions. "Stand a little nearer; press this close to your ear—so."

"Good morning," I called.

In return I heard a giggle, and my Agnes' voice exclaiming: "Oh, oh! It tickles my ear!" Then more directions from Miss Peyton, and at last the sweetest voice in the world began in as nearly as might be a stentorian roar:

"Is that really you, Harry? Isn't this perfectly sweet? Are you sure they can't hear in the office?"

"Well," from Georgie, "I should say they certainly could, if you shout like that."

"Harry," in a half whisper, "if you are sure it's you, and that no one else can hear, I want to tell you something. Do you remember that queer Miss Blake in Aiken? Do you hear me, Harry?"

"Yes," I returned.

Then another little giggle. "Isn't it too funny? Do you know, Harry, now that I see how to use it, I am going to talk to you ever so often? Won't it be funny? But where was I? Dear me, how stupid. Oh, I know Miss Blake. Well, she has just sent me the loveliest——"

Here Clarkson muttered, "Old Gruff's coming," and knowing he would ask an explanation of my receiving the telephone messages, I was obliged to abruptly interrupt: "I must go now"—I had almost said "my darling." "Tell me the rest this evening."

"But, Harry!" I heard a grieved little voice; but Mr. Gruffland's footsteps were too near, and I hung the receiver upside down, and hurried back to my desk.

All day I worked in nervous desperation. Would she try to resume the conversation? Every time the bell rang I glanced at Clarkson. The thought that it might be her voice whispering in his great red ear covered me with cold perspiration. The fear that in Mr. Gruffland's hearing I might be called upon to answer some of her chatter was still worse. I made up my mind that I must make Agnes understand that very night that she could not amuse herself in that way, and I did so gently, but resolutely. I described Clarkson's ear, and I took some liberties with it. It would be just like the wretch to receive all her little confidences, and retail them for the amusement of the clerks.

Old Gruff was an ogre, capable of dismissing me without warning, if I did [illegible] ness. Our hopes of happiness depended upon his good pleasure. Miss Peyton was cool and dignified. I suppose she knew I was exaggerating. Agnes looked hurt. Her sweet lips trembled a little, and her eyes were suspiciously dim. I longed to have her alone for a little while to comfort her as I knew I could, but there was no chance, for, although Miss Georgie relented sufficiently to go up stairs to write an "important letter," Raphael was there, resting his elbow on the table and looking up at Agnes with an expression of deep pity in his beautiful but sleepy dark eyes.

And yet the next day the same thing occurred. Mr. Gruffland was there, and looked up from his papers with a glance of disapproval as I took Clarkson's place at the telephone. My "Hullo!" was rather savage.

"Oh, Harry, do forgive me? Indeed, indeed I felt so sorry last night, and wanted to tell you so; but, you see, Ralph was there. I'm all alone now. Oh, Harry, won't you forgive me?"

"Of course," I returned, feeling Gruff's eyes burning unpleasantly on the nape of my neck.

"Oh, Harry, dear, don't talk like that to me. Do say you love me."

Was there ever such a child? I felt like a cold-blooded wretch as I hurriedly replied:

"All right. I'll come up as soon as I can. Very busy now. Good-bye!"

I felt, rather than heard, a little sob at the other end of the wire. Gruff said nothing, but I was doomed to another miserable day. I managed to ask Clarkson if I was called again to say I could not attend, and five times I heard him give this message, and each time he turned away with a mighty grin. What might not Agnes have said to him?

Of course I hurried to the Peyton's, determined to see her alone. She came running into the hall to meet me, bright and loving, but the annoyance of the day had made me cross, and I said curtly:

"Really, Agnes, it is very strange you don't understand that a man can not take his business hours to talk with his friends. After all I said last night, I must say I was surprised to be called up again to-day."

Agnes stopped abruptly, and said, with dignity:

"I do not understand you!"

"Why, my dear little girl," I said, sobered by the change in her manner, "I do not mean to be cross, but how could I talk to you about my affection and forgiveness through the telephone, with all those fellows listening, to say nothing of old Gruff!"

"But I have not touched the telephone to-day, Harry!"

"What!" I exclaimed.

"Georgie!" called Agnes, stepping back to the sitting-room, and I followed to tell the story.

"It is very strange," said Miss Peyton; "but of course it is some mistake. The lines are out of order or crossed in some way. But mamma and Agnes and I have been out shopping all day, and we lunched down town, so we can prove an alibi."

It certainly was very strange, but we all concluded that it might be as Miss Georgie suggested, and the pater at once began to spin long yarns about queer messages till at last I coaxed Agnes into the conservatory alone, and the close of the evening was all the brighter for the shadow with which it began. The dear girl sympathized with me and forgave my impatience, and was so sweet that before I knew I found myself telling her the one event of my life I had determined to keep secret—the little entanglement I once had with Lucretia Chase. Of course she had been the most to blame, and Agnes thought her very horrid and forward, so I had to admit that Cretia had misunderstood some things I had said to her when a more boy, and then Agnes asked me if I really, really loved her best. Ah me! what a happy evening it was!

Again the next day the telephone annoyances began, but I felt sure of my ground, and told Clarkson he could refuse to listen. Imagine my surprise when he turned to me with a clever imitation of Agnes' voice, saying:

"She is quite sure Harry will come when he knows she wants to talk to him about Cretia."

I was thunderstruck! Lucretia Chase lived in Vermont; I was morally sure no one in the city knew of her existence—no one but Agnes. I rushed to the instrument. It was the same girl's clear voice. How could anyone have known that Cretia possessed such idiotic lines I had once written her—anyone but Agnes? Yet now I heard them repeated:

Oh Cretia! fairest valentine!
With thou accept this hand of mine?
A smaller gift my soul forbids;
But ten's the number of my kids!

I turned away in anger and surprise, only to meet Gruff's grim glance.

"If this thing goes on, Mr. Dixon, it might be well for you and Mr. Clarkson to change desks!"

I knew what that implied, and my heart sank to my boots.

"I do not understand it myself," I replied. "I assure you, sir, that I am exceedingly annoyed. I will not answer it again."

"I will, myself, sir," he growled, and I went back to my desk to upset the ink bottle, to make mistakes in my accounts and torture myself with the conviction that, since no one but Agnes could have sent the message, she was teasing me without realizing the fatal consequences to our happiness. And all day Mr. Gruffland would answer that confounded telephone. That some of the messages were meant for me I could tell, and that they must be utter nonsense I could conjecture from his occasional comments: "'By Jimminy Johnson!'" is a remarkable expression for a young lady, Mr. Dixon."

It would be too long to tell the story of those days in detail. Sometimes there would be respite, and then the nonsense would begin again. It was larks for Clarkson and the rest, but to me it seemed as if the bell of the telephone was ringing the knell of all my bright hopes. Agnes assured me of her innocence, and Miss Peyton was ready with explanations; they had been shopping, or calling, or practicing duets. But I could see that a coolness had come between Agnes and me. She feared that I doubted her, and I—what could I think? Again and again the messages referred to what I had said to her when quite alone. Could she have repeated my confidence?

At the office preparations for the new business were being hurried on, and not one word had been said to me of promotion. To crown all, Agnes informed me one evening that she was going to shorten her visit; she had heard of friends going directly to Aiken, and thought it best to secure their escort. I passed a wretched evening, but left, determined to make a desperate effort to clear the mystery. Agnes had told me that they were all to be out the next day, so I begged off at the office, reached the house at 10, and, persuading the servant that I wanted to rest and would let myself out when I was ready, I managed to conceal myself in a closet in the hall, where I waited four mortal hours. At last I was rewarded. A light step came through the hall, a chair was drawn to the telephone, and a clear voice wonderfully like Agnes' called: "Please connect with Gruffland & Co!"

Waiting only long enough to let him actually begin conversation in his usual style, I rushed out, and, catching the culprit by the arms, bestowed a resounding box on the ear of the astonished Mr. Raphael. The little imp! This was revenge for his well-deserved snubs. I have no doubt he heard every word of my conversation with Agnes.

Of course the Peytons were distressed and apologetic, and Agnes was persuaded not to hurry away, and old Gruff relented and I got the promotion in due time, but I never could endure the sight of that cherubic boy. I verily believe the box that I bestowed upon him was his only punishment, and I rejoice to think that it was such a stinger.

If this story has a moral it is a short one. The more innocent and guileless a boy looks the less he is to be trusted.

TAKING STOCK!

No duty devolving upon the business man is so important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's repeating clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognized duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shown in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out any winter goods left over, at cost.

We Direct the Attention

of our readers to the advertisement of the Egan Imperial Trust Co. in this issue. From a number of testimonials before us, they are very highly recommended and are the best that has yet come before our notice. Note the date and go and see the representatives of this Co. when here.

"The Beautiful Snow."

Through the courtesy of Mr. Wm. Cluxton we are in receipt of a fine piece of sheet music "The Beautiful Snow," a duet for soprano and alto, composed, both words and music, by Mr. William McDonnell, Lindsay. The song which is just published, possesses strong claims to popularity. It is on a par with the other musical compositions of the writer. The words of the song were written by the Mr. McDonnell many years ago, when he lived in Peterborough. They were subsequently set to music in England. As the music was not to the author's taste, he composed what is presented in the duet under notice. There have been many claimants of the authorship of the song, but there is no doubt that Mr. McDonell, wrote the words in 1841, when they were published in the Christian Guardian, on Feb. 21st. The "Beautiful Snow" is well worth the attention of vocalists. Strange & Co., Toronto, are the publishers.

Signs of Improvement.

There were a large number of farmers in town to-day, the sleighing being excellent and the day fine. Merchants report business brisk.

"Queen's Own."

Brand of cigars. Try them. Very choice. S. DAVIS & SONS. Factories, Cote St., Montreal. Toronto Branch:—34 Church St.

In our council report yesterday Mr. W.H. Moore, while referring to the quantity of slabs piled at the Nassau Mills as reported, said 20,000 cords. It should have been 3,000 cords.

Organ Recital.

Lovers of good music are requested to recall the previously announced date of the third organ recital to be held in St. Paul's Church on Tuesday, February 2nd. A capital programme has been prepared and there is no doubt that the entertainment will be a rare musical treat.

Dynamite.

About noon to-day a sleigh load of dynamite for the Trent Valley Canal Works was left standing on George street for some time. It was marked "Powder." An authority on such matters let the "cat out of the bag." When the teamster drove off he had the benediction of a large circle of citizens, said benedictions decreasing as the distance between them and the dynamite increased.

It was Money He was After.

Two well known Canadian Pugs., R. N. Harrison of Lindsay, and Fitzerald of Toronto, had a set-to in Lindsay, the other day, which resulted in a draw. Fitzgerald had the most points, while Harrison won for endurance. The combat drew a large crowd at popular prices. It was the "boodle" they were after.

A Winter Trot Proposed.

A number of the sporting men of the community met at the Grand Central last evening and discussed the advisability of having a winter meet and two days' races on the Little Lake. It was thought the 20th and 21st of February would be the best time for the races. A meeting will be held to-night at the Grand Central to decide upon the date and make other arrangements. Subscriptions will be solicited, and if a sufficient amount can be secured, liberal prizes will be offered to induce the speediest animals in the county to compete. The Peterborough track is proverbial for fast and fair races, and no doubt the winter trot will meet with every encouragement.

Playing for the Medal.

Considerable commotion is being caused in the local curling club over the first draw on the thirteen point game for a medal presented by the President and Vice-President of the club. Nine or ten contests have taken place already. A paper posted up in the rink announces that the game shall be finished by the 31st of January. The winner of the draw becomes the owner of the medal. The members of the club oppose each other singly in this game, the whole club being paired off. The defeated men of the first draw are dropped out of the second, and so on to the end of the game, when two men fight it out for the championship.

A False Impression Corrected.

An item published in Yesterday's Examiner, credited the Toronto World, stating that there was no one at the Union Station, Toronto, to meet Sarah Roberts, who was returning from Simcoe to the Hazel Brae Home here, would lead the public to believe that no arrangement had been made by the managers of the Home to meet the girl. It appears that the parties in Simcoe, with whom she was staying, arranged to send her to Toronto by a certain train, which they failed to do. The managers of the Home were at the specified train to meet the girl, and of course were disappointed. The blame all lies with the Simcoe parties. The managers of the Home learning that the girl was in the city took steps to have her properly cared for.

Personal.

Mr. Brooks, Manager of the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Company, is in Montreal making his first business trip for the Company. He has a beautiful line of locks.

Belleville.

The Moira on the Move.

BELLEVILLE, Jan. 26.—The river here continues to rise and is doing much damage. Hundreds of families are homeless. A general exodus is taking place from the flooded districts, but the poor people find it hard to obtain shelter. Front street and Bridge street and the lower parts of the city generally are completely covered by water. The city council, at a special meeting this morning, appropriated $600 for relief of the distressed, but a great deal more will be required. Mr. John Bell has kindly offered the city the use of the building formerly used as the Grand Junction depot, as a place of shelter for the sufferers. The floods threaten to paralyze the trade of the city, and have seriously affected the coal supply.

The Intelligencer says that when the temperature moderated on Monday the thermometer registered above freezing point, the rising water came to a standstill, and as soon as the anchor ice ceased to come down, the river began to recede. At 8 o'clock this morning the water had fallen over a foot and has been gradually going down ever since. The damage done, however, is in no way repaired, for the houses which were flooded will be untenantable until the summer season sets in.

The Street Surveyor received a despatch from Mr. Easterbrook, of Tweed, Tuesday morning, stating that his electric battery for discharging dynamite would reach Belleville by the stage at noon to-day. About 100 one pound dynamite cartridges will be placed in the river and discharged simultaneously in the hope that the shock will start the blockade and clear the river of ice and anchor ice.

Mr. R. Taylor, the Street Surveyor, Ald. Pringle, Frost, Lott and others who have had experience with anchor ice lapsing over several years, have no faith in the experiment. They say there is one chance in a hundred of the discharge having the desired effect, and for the sake of that chance they are willing to acquiesce in the expenditure.

Annual Meeting of the North Smith Dairy Co'y.

The first annual meeting of the above company was held at the factory on Tuesday afternoon, the 12th inst., when the directors made a very satisfactory report. During the season there were 601,881 lbs. of milk manufactured, from which was made 57,006 lbs. of cheese, being an average of 10 37-100 lbs. of milk to 1 lb. of cheese. The amount of money received therefor was $4,710.27, an average of 8 12-100 cents per lb., which, considering the very low price during the season for dairy products, is a good showing. The directors spared no pains in erecting a first-class substantial building for a factory and having it equipped with the best machinery which, together with the services of the celebrated John Wilson as manufacturer, has done much toward securing this desirable result.

The paid up stock of the company now, I think, amounts to about $1,800, on which the directors were enabled to declare a dividend of 8 per cent.

The management of the business was in the hands of the efficient and painstaking president, Mr. M. E. Sanderson, assisted by Mr. W. C. Manning as secretary.

After hearing the report of the directors and receiving the dividend, the shareholders proceeded to elect the directors for the ensuing year, when the ballot resulted in favor of Messrs. R. H. Braden, W. E. Sanderson, W. A. Graham, Milson Blewett and John Wilson, and at the directors' meeting which followed, Mr. W. E. Sanderson was again chosen as president.

The operations of the company for the coming season are expected to far exceed those of the past, and considering that the directors have again secured the services of Mr. Wilson as manufacturer, there is little doubt that these expectations will be fully realised.—COM.

Imperial Politics.

Lord Salisbury's Opportunity.

LONDON, January, 26th.—The sudden importance assumed by the Greek issue is likely to furnish Lord Salisbury an opportunity for retiring from office on a question of foreign rather than of domestic policy. This is a fortunate thing for him. It has, for the past forty-eight hours, been considered inevitable that he must resign, and from time immemorial it has been considered less humiliating for a British Prime Minister to be defeated on a question of foreign policy than one of local administration. His retirement and a reversal of the policy which ordered Greece to disarm, will relegate that bantam nation into its normal unimportance by removing the pretext for its inflammatory braggadocio.

Then Mr. Gladstone, forced back upon home issues, will find himself faced by the perplexities of one compelled to formulate a Government policy while yet uncertain of his following. The real extent to which England is willing to go in concessions to Ireland will then be tested. All that is known now is that Lord Salisbury's policy of no concession at all does not command a majority. Mr. Gladstone, however, will have a difficult task to get a majority of the Whigs and moderate Conservatives who will be willing to make concessions to Mr. Parnell and still look to controlling him by reason of needing his eighty-six votes on questions of general policy. No one is so confident of his ability to do this as is the Grand Old Man himself.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

Inauguration of the Session—The Speech From the Throne.

(By Telegraph to the EXAMINER.)

TORONTO, Jan. 28th.—The third session of the fifth Parliament of the Ontario Legislature was opened at three o'clock this afternoon by Lieut.-Governor Robinson with the usual ceremonies.

The following is

THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

It has once more become my agreeable duty to convene you for the discharge of the high public functions devolving upon this house, for your

of provincial administration, for such measures in legislation as may keep pace with the rapid strides of this great province, and for providing the supplies necessary to administer, the Government and give effect to your enactments.

THE NORTHWEST REBELLION.

Immediately after the rising of the house last year the attention of our people was anxiously drawn to the Northwest Territory by most unhappy occurrences. That vast territory, like the intervening Province of Manitoba, is allied to Ontario by the closest ties of affection and kindred. Many of the pioneers in those distant settlements are the sons of your constituents, or lately were themselves your constituents; and their hardships and dangers touch very directly the hearts and homes of Ontario.

When the volunteers were called out to restore order, it was gratifying to observe the spirit in which our Ontario youth answered the summons, and undertook what in every civil strife must needs be a most painful duty. While sincerely deploring the necessity for their services, we all felt a natural and as we witnessed their patient endurance on the march, and unflinching courage in action. When tranquility was restored, it was again gratifying to observe the alacrity with which they returned to their civil duties, and resumed the avocations of peaceful industry.

ONTARIO'S LEADING POSITION.

I am rejoiced to see by the official statistics that Ontario continues to maintain the lead of all Provinces and States on the continent in agricultural industry. The field crops of the past year have, with two or three exceptions, been very bountiful, though low prices and a wide-spread disease in the potatoe, have not permitted our farmers to realize the usual profits of some former years. I notice with pleasure that which is given to mixed farming and to live stock, and dairy products, has widened the basis of our agricultural prosperity and greatly limited the injury arising from the failure of a single crop or a single branch of this most important of the occupations of our people.

The recent organization of

by the Commissioner of Agriculture has furnished most important agencies for the exchange of valuable experience, and for the diffusion of scientific principles and methods among our whole farming community.

These institutes have been largely attended and highly appreciated; The Professors of the Agricultural College have personally interested themselves in the proceedings, and have established between College and Institutes cordial relations of the greatest mutual advantage. In order to secure the permanent affiliation of practical husbandry with scientific research, a measure will be submitted for the formation of an whom the commissioner may consult in the management of the College and Experimental Farm.

THE LIQUOR LICENSE DECISION.

I congratulate you upon the result of the appeal taken to the Imperial Privy Council by the Government of Canada, respecting the Dominion Liquor License Acts. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council have declared these acts to be WHOLLY NULL AND VOID.

Thus their Lordships have not only justified the Provincial jurisdiction to the extent adjudged by the Supreme Court of Canada, but have

SUSTAINED THE FULL CONTENTION OF ONTARIO, and have declared the entire subject of tavern, shop, vessel and wholesale licenses to belong exclusively to Provincial jurisdiction.

DOMINION GOVERNMENT CLAIMS.

Notwithstanding the decision of Her Majesty in Council in 1884, determining in favor of the Province, the long pending dispute respecting our westerly boundary, the settlement of the territory called the Rainy River district, and the developement of its resources, have been further delayed by a claim recently set up that all the Crown Lands in this Territory belong to the Dominion as Indian Lands, though in the case of the other provinces all lands similarly situated are admitted to belong to the province within which they lie, the Dominion Government having covered large tracts of the awarded territory with licenses to cut the timber. My Government, to preserve the provincial domain from further waste, applied for and obtained an injunction against some of the licenses, the effect of which has been to deter as far as known all Dominion license and other trespassers from further operations in the territory.

The court granting the injunction decided that in Ontario as in all the older provinces the title to such lands lies, not in the Dominion but in the provinces. An appeal from this decision is still pending.

PREPARING FOR SETTLEMENT.

A measure will be submitted to you for the opening and settling of the land of the rainy river district to take effect as soon as the claim of the Dominion Government has been abandoned or set at rest by the tribunal of last resort.

ONTARIO AND DOMINION ACCOUNTS.

I regret, that notwithstanding the earnest efforts of my Government, no progress has been made towards a settlement of accounts between Ontario, the Dominion and the Province of Quebec. In view of this further delay and of the apparent uncertainty as to the time when a settlement may be arrived at, my government deem it inadvisable to any longer postpone paying to the municipalities entitled the interest on the Land Improvement Fund, derived from the sale of school lands prior to Confederation; the principal, though not yet received, having been advanced by the Province to the Municipalities in 1882. Provision for this purpose will be made in the estimates.

SETTLEMENT ENCOURAGED.

The early settlement of lands, recently made accessible by railroads and highways, continues to receive the earnest encouragement of my Government.

The past year witnessed a partial revival of the mining industry, and our valuable deposits of minerals and metals are again attracting attention.

I congratulate you upon the liberal bonuses received at the timber sale, deemed necessary last fall of a limited area of scattered and dispersed limits upon the north shore of the Georgian Bay.

DEALING WITH THE EPIDEMIC.

An unusually severe visitation of smallpox in the commercial metropolis of the adjoining Province excited much sympathy with our afflicted neighbors. The virulent character of the epidemic occasioned my Government the most anxious and watchful solicitude on account of our close business relations and constant intercourse with that city. Prompt and energetic measures were taken through our to maintain a vigilant quarantine on the frontier and to insist on the examination and vaccination of passengers and the disinfecting of railway carriages and merchandise.

Local boards rendered effective service, as well in forcing general vaccination, among our own people, as by other precautionary measures, in devising and carrying into effect the preventive measures necessary, with the enlarged powers conferred last session by the Public Health Act,

WERE OF EMINENT SERVICE.

The result of the vigorous action taken has been that no where within our limits did the epidemic obtain any dangerous foothold, and that our towns and villages generally have enjoyed complete immunity from the dread disease.

CONSOLIDATION OF THE STATUTES.

During the recess I issued a commission for the consolidation of the Provincial Statutes now again dispersed through many volumes. Substantial progress has been made in this important work and it is hoped that a report by the commissioners may be ready for submission to the house during the present session. Bills will be laid before your embodying improvements in the law recommended by the commissioners or suggested in their discussion.

LEGISLATION TO BE INTRODUCED.

Other measures are to be submitted for your consideration, including a bill for the auditing of the public accounts of the Province; a bill for increasing the usefulness and efficiency of Mechanics' Institutes; a bill for the amendment of the law relating to the estates of deceased persons, and a bill for injuries suffered by their workmen. I regret that in many branches of industry the present supply of labor seems so far to exceed the demand as to depress wages and RENDER EMPLOYMENT UNCERTAIN.

RESPECTING THE LIABILITY OF EMPLOYERS

Under these circumstances my advisers continue to regard it as unwise for this Province to stimulate the immigration of the working classes from abroad, lest the hardships of the present situation should be aggravated.

NEW PARLIAMENTARY BUILDINGS

I had hoped that the past year would have witnessed active operations on the projected parliamentary and departmental buildings, but unexpected difficulties in the plans have intervened. I derive, however, much pleasure from the confident anticipations that early in the present season these much needed buildings will be in active course of erection.

ADDITIONAL ASYLUM BUILDINGS.

The urgent need of increased accommodation for the lunatic and idiotic of our population was recognized last session and appropriations were voted for additional buildings at Hamilton and Orillia. It was found, however, that before the intended structure at Hamilton could be made available some interior accommodation for lunatics must be provided in order to the

IMMEDIATE RELIEF OF OUR GAOLS

and overcrowded asylums. The department was so fortunate as to secure, under a five years lease, the use of Begiopolis College as a branch asylum, which has been placed under the management of the officers of the Rockwood asylum. After some repairs and slight alterations, very suitable accommodation was thus provided for one hundred and fifty patients. This will, it is hoped, be found sufficient for the public wants, until necessary permanent provision is made.

DEPARTMENTAL REPORTS.

The reports of the various departments of the public service for the past year will be laid before you. There will also be submitted the first report of the Master of Titles on the operation of the of last session; and the report of the Commissioners appointed to enquire into complaints made against the Warden of the Central Prison.

THE ESTIMATES

for the current year have been prepared with a view to economy and efficiency, due regard being had to the varied requirements of this great and progressive province.

I feel assured that your legislative labors will, as heretofore, be marked by earnestness of purpose, and by a sincere and disinterested consideration of the public welfare.

Belleville's Flood.

Making an Opening.

Eighteen charges of dynamite were discharged near the Grand Junction dock yesterday afternoon with good effect. The charges were placed about nine feet apart and opened up a large space. Mr. Taylor is at work again this morning enlarging the opening; the river will be opened up to-day or to-morrow.

Mr. Grey, the Government engineer, sent to investigate the cause of the flooding and to devise a remedy, arrived from the west on the noon train to-day. In the afternoon Mr. Grey, accompanied by several city officials, examined the harbor and flooded parts of the city.

Imperial Politics.

England's Peril.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The Times ascribes the defeat of the Ministry to its hesitations and delays and claims that it goes out needlessly on a side issue. It says Mr. Gladstone will have to reckon with the country and that it is certain his Parliament will be short-lived. It will be the duty of all who regard patriotism more than party attachments to maintain an unflinching resistance to the measures of such a government as that now threatened, and to wage war against it till the Commonwealth has been delivered from a peril greater than any that has pended over England for upwards of seventy years. It is barely possible that Lord Salisbury may to-day advise the Queen to dissolve Parliament.

A STATE OF CHAOS.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—The defeat of the Government last night has left all political parties in the House of Commons in a state of chaos, and may result in a dissolution of Parliament and an appeal to the country.

THE "NEW FORCE."

DUBLIN Jan. 27.—The Freeman's Journal is jubilant over the defeat of the Government, and says: "The action of the leaders of the National League in defeating the Government emphasizes the fact that there is a new force in politics which Parliament has to consider.

RELY ON GLADSTONE.

The Irish Times says: "The Parnellites rely for help on Gladstone alone. They believe he will make them an offer looking to the settlement of the Irish question.

RESUMING OFFICE.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—Gladstone held a conference this afternoon with Granville in relation to the resumption of office by the Liberals. Salisbury will have an interview to-day with W. H. Smith, who was yesterday sworn in as Chief Secretary for Ireland, A meeting of the Cabinet will also be held to-day, after which the Ministers will proceed to Osborne to place their resignation in the hands of the Queen. The crisis excites but little interest among the general public. Everything is quiet and the commercial and financial markets are but slightly weaker.

Trouble at Coboconk.

Mr. Hector Cameron's Constituents Becoming Critical.

COBOCONK, Jan. 23.—The Tory Convention for North Victoria was held here to-day. Hector Cameron, M.P., arrived last night by train from Ottawa. The convention was called by posters all over the riding, signed by A. Haslip, President, and A. E. Stoback, Secretary. The intention was to nominate a candidate in the Tory interest for next election. A telegram was received in the forenoon that, on account of the roads being blocked by snow, the Haliburton and Northern delegates could not arrive, but their unanimous vote was to be counted for Mr. Cameron against all others. By noon the Fenelon Falls and Fenelon delegates arrived; soon after the Eldon, and Bixley, and Somerville delegates appeared. The air was full of opposition to Mr. Cameron. The majority was CLEARLY FOR A LOCAL MAN.

Mr. Cameron felt his way, and concluded to draw a herring across the track. It was evident that he could not make the convention unanimous for him, so after the meeting was organized he was called upon to make a speech. He at once went into the Franchise Act. He showed the necessity for vigilance on the part of his Tory friends, and beseeched and entreated them to watch the Grits, to be sure and get every Tory vote on. He went on to say that the municipal officers under the old law were frauds; that the Tory party were always cheated out of their rights by the municipal officer, but now if the party were viligant, as he hoped they would be, they would at last have their rights. He then announced that there would not be any choice of candidate to-day, that another convention would be held at a future time, that he was going to England, and that he had paired with Coursol, the Bleu member for Montreal, on the want of confidence vote. The herring did its oft-repeated duty, and seemingly all acquiesced till up got Dr. Wood, of Kirkfield, who went for Mr. Cameron, rough-shod. He charged him with a neglect of duty, of attending to his own instead of the public interest, of a great wrong in pairing with Coursol, just now when the Government and country were in danger, and announced himself

IN FAVOUR OF A LOCAL CANDIDATE.

He charged him with making use of his position to speculate in the property of the people, with grabbing timber limits, coal limits, railway charters, and general jobbery, and with always looking out for No. 1. The Doctor is a fluent speaker and stands well in his party, and Mr. Cameron felt the force of his remarks but did not blush. He only replied to one of the charges, coal land speculation. He said he bought the coal lands from the Hudson Bay Company, and he sold it again. He dare not touch on the timber limit questions, as two of the Mc Kenzies were present, and they did not intend to allow him to make the false statements again that he had made at Fenelon Falls. He kept the meeting till near night, when all were glad to get away. He thus staved off the nomination to a more convenient day.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Henry George, the distinguished writer, will visit Canada in March and lecture in various cities.

The Dominion Franchise Act by requiring a twelve months residential qualification, though the party may be fully qualified in in other respects, will and does disfranchise thousands of voters in the Dominion.

An Ottawa despatch states that the tenders (sixty-one) for deepening the Welland Canal to 14 feet have been opened at Ottawa. When will the telegraph lines be bothered with a message announcing tenders for the construction of a new stretch of the Trent Valley Canal?

Any male subject of Her Majesty, occupying a room in any building in any town, who has paid for the past 12 months an annual rental of at least $2 per month is entitled to have his name put on the list of voters. Every young Liberal so situated should secure a form and make application to the Revising Officer to have his name put on the preliminary list.

The confidence of the British public in Gladstone is shown by the fact, that the defeat of the Tory Government has not, as is usual, when administrations fall, to any extent, depressed stocks and securities. There is a feeling that the shifty, temporizing policy of Lord Salisbury will be succeeded by a declaration of a positive policy that will tend to solve great existing problems.

The Bobcaygeon Independent speaking of Mr. Blake's speech says:—As an impeachment of Sir John the speech is splendid. It crumples him up, covers him with ridicule, exposes his false claims, sets in the strongest light the miserable failure of the Tory policy, dwells with startling earnestness on the enormous debt in which Sir John has enveloped Canada, and speaks of the gross and shameless corruption which prevails wherever Sir John has influence or power.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

January Session.

SECOND DAY—WEDNESDAY.

Afternoon Session.

Council resumed at 2 o'clock, p.m.
All the members present.

South Monaghan Union.

On motion of Mr. Lang, seconded by Mr. Fitzgerald, a deputation from South Monaghan was heard.

Mr. Wm. Smithson was the first speaker. He said there was a growing sentiment in the township in favor of closer union with Peterborough. As at present situated, the township of South Monaghan belonged, in a way, to 3 counties—to Northumberland for judicial and municipal purposes; to Peterborough for agricultural, market and electoral purposes, and to Durham for school purposes. He thought that if the County of Peterborough would consent to build an iron bridge at Rosa's, those in the township favouring union, would have some grounds on which to appeal to the people in favor of severing their present municipal relations with Northumberland and Durham and joining Peterborough.

Mr. Wm. Emberson said that he agreed with Mr. Smithson's remarks, but if practicablethe people would like to retain their present connection as far as related to school matters, for they were well satisfied with the way in which their schools were now conducted and inspected. The fact could not be denied that Peterborough was the market of his township and he thought that if Rosa's bridge were constructed, the township and county of Peterborough would become, not only more closely connected, but a shorter route would be opened to a first-class market.

Mr. McAllister and the other members of the deputation, Messrs. T. M. Willian, R. Nurse, John Buckham, Wm. Robinson, Asa Barnard and M. Parker, endorsed the general sentiments expressed by the previous speakers.

Mr. Lang moved, seconded by Mr. Sanderson, that the matter of the proposed annexation of South Monaghan be referred to the Finance Committee to take into consideration the terms of a basis of union.

Mr. Sanderson remarked that if the town gave one third and the county two thirds of cost of the proposed bridge, that such an action would be in the interest of both parties to the expenditure.

The motion was agreed to

The Scott Act.

Moved by W. H. Stephenson, seconded by John Brown,—That whereas the Scott Act has been adopted by the ratepayers of this county by a large majority; and whereas it will come into force on the first day of May next, and it is advisable that the said Act should be strictly and stringently enforced in order to carry out the wishes of the ratepayers—therefore it is resolved, that this Council do request the Ontario Government to appoint a Police Magistrate for this county and that this Council do appropriate a sufficient sum of money to pay the expenses of such officer or officers, person or persons, for enforcing or assisting to enforce the Scott Act, and for the payment of any costs or expenses that may be incurred in or about enforcing or attempting to enforce the same.

Mr. Sanderson objected to passing the resolution till the June session. He thought that in the interval the Dominion Government might repeal the Scott Act. If they did not do so, then the motion could be introduced and voted upon at the June session.

Mr. Strickland, while personally opposed to the Scott Act, believed that, since a large majority of the people had pronounced in its favor it should be enforced. As a majority of the voters in Lakefield had voted in favor of the Act, he considered it his duty to see its provisions strictly carried out.

Mr. Burnham declared that he was opposed to the principle of the Scott Act—did not believe it would do any good, and was not in favor of the County Council pledging itself to such a sweeping resolution as the one now before it. There was no telling what the cost would be, and he thought if the Council decided to adopt the resolution, some limit should be placed to the expenditure. Personally, he would vote against the motion, no matter what the amount was. After some desultory discussion, the motion was withdrawn, and the matter referred to the Finance Committee for consideration.

Hawkers and Peddlers.

A deputation composed of merchants from town and the surrounding villages, was allowed to be heard, to urge upon the County Council the necessity of protecting business men in their rights, by placing a much higher license upon the hawkers and peddlers.

Mr. R. Graham, Lakefield, was the chief speaker. He referred to the great injustice it was to ratepayers in business, who contributed their full share of taxes for the maintenance of county institutions, that their trade should be cut off by parties who paid no rent nor taxes for the privileges they enjoyed. He did not believe that farmers derived any advantage from dealing with peddlers, over their dealings with the established trader in a regular way.

Mr. Burnham—Do you go in for prohibition or high licenses? (Laughter.)

Mr. Graham—Local option with a moderately fair license. (Renewed laughter.)

Several other gentlemen expressed their views and the matter was, on motion of Mr. Elmhirst, seconded by Mr. Lang, referred to the Committee on Petitions to prepare a by-law and report.

The Council then adjourned till ten o'clock the following day, and the Committee on Petitions went into session.

THIRD DAY—THURSDAY.

There was no sitting of the Council this morning, the members being engaged in Committee work.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this papre who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

"FAINT HEART NE'ER WON FAIR LADY."

"A hat of last year's fashion!"

"But her eyes were like gray stars."

"And her manner dreadfully quick and decided."

"My dear Richard, you are really absurd! The girl is a hospital nurse, and what woman with any refinement or delicacy would take up any such a profession as that? It shows she can't be nice."

"Ladies do such things nowadays" —less defiantly.

"Now you know you are only saying so because she is pretty. Of course ladies do queer things nowadays, but that doesn't excuse an unwomanly feeling. Besides she is only a solicitor's daughter. I shan't ask mamma to call."

"But don't you think common civility——"

"No, I don't. She is only staying at the Rectory, and we are not forced to call on every one's friends. Besides, Captain Hardwicke is expected home, and it would make it awkward. What would one of Lord Belmont's people say if we asked them to meet a girl like Miss Travers?"

"All the same, she's as pretty and ladylike as anyone I ever met in these parts."

"Very likely, but she is not in our set. Now, Richard, if you say any more, I shall begin to think that you are falling in love with her, if the idea is not too absurd."

But Richard had closed the drawing-room door upon his six sisters' languid voices and was half way across the wide lawn with its brilliant parterres of summer flowers. Poor Richard Allerdyce! only son of the richest banker in Chellowdean, people of good family, but with just that uncertainty of social position which made them afraid of overstepping any boundaries, rather gratified at being on intimate terms with Lord Belmont and the Hardwickes, he was of divided mind this summer afternoon. He had been greatly taken by that sweet face and slight figure in the Rectory pew last Sunday; was sensible of a thrill of more than civil interest when he met their owner walking home with the good old rector after service, and was introduced to "Miss Travers," while the eyes "like grey stars" were suddenly raised to his; and he had ever since spent a larger portion of his time than was strictly needful in walking past the Rectory's rose-covered garden gate. But on the other side, his sisters' words had certainly struck home.

Brought up, as all the Allerdyces were, like hot-house plants, sheltered from every breath of frosty air, it was not strange that Richard at five-and-twenty, though a big, burly enough young Englishman to look at, was but little of a man in heart or mind. Knowledge of the world had been carefully kept from him, as from his sisters, lest they should learn evil; but their very ignorance had cost them the loss of power to choose between evil and good and had given them weak prejudices and conceited opiniouativeness, instead of a mind able to discern and prefer the right.

Richard's handsome face was overcast as he swung out of the lodge gate and down the road. Miss Travers a hospital nurse! certainly it was a shock. Not only did it seem to him unwomanly for a woman to work at all, but infinitely more so to do menial work. And then the awful thought of what his mother and sisters would say, were they asked to receive a hospital nurse as his future wife! For it had gone as far as that in Richard's susceptible mind, even in these three short days. All at once his thoughts broke off as Miss Travers herself, sweet and bright as ever, in her black dress, came out from the Rectory gate, the great Rectory mastiff pacing behind her.

Now Richard's own collie was at his heels and there was a bitter feud of long standing between those two faithful followers. There was one angry growl, a heavy rush, a thud, and then a brown body and a black rolled together in the dust in a manner suggestive of a dog's funeral on one side or the other. Richard, who was actually staggered by the suddenness of it all, could not for a moment regain his senses; and when he did it was to find Miss Travers, both hands locked in the hair of Rollo's shaggy neck, pulling him from his foe with all her strength, and calling to "Mr. Allerdyce" to "take hold of his dog and pull him off."

She was being whirled round in a cloud of dust by the frantic waltzers before Richard could hardly settle on where to "take hold," but the task was performed for him by a gentleman in tweed knickerbockers, who started out of the "White Hart," a few yards away, and ran to the rescue. Between Miss Travers and himself the combatants were separated, each carrying away a few fragments of the other's person; and Miss Travers, flushed, panting, covered with dust, but looking lovelier than Richard had ever seen woman look before, sank back against the Rectory wall and tried to laugh. The stranger lifted his hat, looking straight at her with a pair of piercing brown eyes.

"Excuse me, Miss Travers," he said, in a rather off hand manner, "but that was about as rash a thing as any one could possibly do. The dogs might both have turned on you and bitten you badly."

"Thank you, Captain Hardwicke. I had not the least fear," was her only response, given with a little haughtiness; and the gentleman, with a nod to Richard, turned and strode away as rapidly as he had come.

"Miss Travers! are you hurt?" Richard was able to articulate at last. "You never should have done a thing like that; Hardwicke was right; it was awfully rash! By the way, you know Hardwicke?"

"No, I am not hurt a bit." The wonderful grey eyes were dancing with fun now. "Don't scold me please; I know it was a silly thing to do, but I didn't stop to think. Pray don't look so horrified."

"But if you had been bitten!"

"Well, I wasn't." And her face dimpled with a friendly smile at his shocked look.

"But you know Hardwicke?" he persisted, unable to get over his surprise in that quarter.

"O[illegible]" stantly. "Captain Hardwicke was in hospital with an accident some months ago—my hospital. I had charge of him there, that's all." And she pulled a rose so sharply from the hedge, that it fell to pieces in her hand.

"Look here!" she laughed, showering the petals on the ground before her, "let us cover over the battlefield with flowers," and she laughed again.

Richard went home more thoughtful than ever. Surely this woman was a novel thing in his experience of men and manners. She acted with the skill and daring of a man; and yet he would rather not think what his sisters' faces would be like had they but seen it! Was it actually ladylike? or should she not rather have fled from the scene of conflict, or screamed and fainted? To be sure, she looked as beautiful as an avenging Amazon; but was it quite correct conduct for a girl? And Captain Hardwicke's manner, so abrupt and dictatorial; he seemed to show her the difference in social position between a nobleman's nephew and a hospital nurse. It must have been an awkward meeting, as his sisters had said. And then a cold shiver came over him as he thought of Miss Travers introduced as Mrs. Richard Allerdyce at Belmont Castle, and Captain Hardwicke's stony stare of surprise. And yet—and yet—she was so beautiful.

Nearly three weeks had passed since the dog episode, and Richard's courage still wavered in the balance. He had grown to know Miss Travers well in those three weeks, and to know her well was but to love her better. There never was a woman so sweet, so clever, so sympathetic, so beautiful—he was certain of that—no woman he more ardently longed to have for his own; and yet—and yet! That terrible strength of character, that profession, that lack of pedigree! Only last night, in the moonlit Rectory garden, he had almost flung all prudence to the winds, she had been so dangerously, fatally sweet (she was always especially kind to him) but he reeled back from the gulf just in time when she mentioned casually, without a change of voice or countenance, that she had an uncle who was a chemist in Rochester. "A chemist! Shades of my ancestors protect me!" Richard recalled again as he thought of it, and fancied Hardwicke's look if he could have heard her. For Captain Hardwicke was still at the "White Hart," and perhaps his presence, and the atmosphere of exalted society about him, had been one of Richard's restraining though unconscious influences. Now as he slowly worked his way up the steepest hill in the neighborhood, on his new tricycle, he was pondering the old question in his mind. Could he take the fatal plunge, or was it too costly?

A trim, graceful figure on the road before him, as at last he gained the summit, drove all else to the four winds; and in a moment he had overtaken the object of his cogitations, and sprung to the ground beside her.

"Mr. Allerdyce!" she said, turning with her own bright look to shake hands; "how like a ghost you stole upon me! Oh, I see, it was a tricycle, and what a beauty! Do let me look at it." And Richard, nothing loth, began to display his new toy—a perfect thing in build and finish—the Allerdyces' possessions always were the most perfect of their kind.

He began to explain it to her, forgetting all about the chemist uncle, but she interrupted him.

"Yes, I know all about them, thanks. I see it is a regular bit of perfection. I should so like to try it. May I?"

Once more Richard was dumb with surprise. A lady on a tricycle was as yet an unheard of thing in rustic Chellowdean, and it seemed an outrageous idea to him.

"I really don't think you could," he faltered. "My sisters never have done such a thing."

"Your sisters? oh, perhaps not," with a little smile at the idea. "But I am quite used to tricycles. I ride one whenever I can get a chance."

Further blow for Richard; but there was no knowing how to refuse her, and so he stood aside. She took her place like one who was thoroughly used to tricycles, and he could not but admit that she adorned her position.

"What a delicious hill to run down," she said with a happy little laugh, as she placed her dainty feet on the treadles. "I really must try it."

"Pray, pray don't attempt it!" was Richard's horrified remonstrance, for the hill stretched down even more abruptly than on the side he had ascended, and near the bottom there was a sudden sharp turn, with the railway line running just below—the nastiest bit of road for miles around. Perhaps even Agatha Travers would have hesitated to hazard it, had it not been for the consternation in Richard's face.

"Mr. Allerdyce, you are faint-hearted," she said gaily as she started on her downward course—a little more rapidly than she at first had intended, but Richard's new tricycle worked smoothly. His heart stood in his mouth, as the country folk say, as she began to glide rapidly off. She turned her head and flashed back a merry defiance. "My uncle, the chemist at Rochester, used to say"——Then the wicked sparkle faded suddenly, and she called quick and clear, "Can you not stop me, please? The break is stiff: I can't make it work; it's running away."

Poor Richard of the faint heart! it seemed to die within him. The next second he had darted forward, but it was just one second too [illegible] check she had been able to put on the heavy machine with the treadles ceased to keep it back, and faster and faster it tore down the perilous road.

In all his life to come, Richard will never know any minute so long as that next, while the straight slight figure flying through space seemed to swim before his eyes, and his knees knocked together as he stood.

On, on—faster, faster! she managed somehow to cling to the steering handle, and keep the machine in the middle of the road; but the mad pace grew more desperate. She could never turn that fatal corner by the railway embankment; over it she must go. And it was just then that Richard and she both together saw the puff of snow-white smoke from the hill-side, that told them the evening express was out of the tunnel, and thundering down that very bit of line.

It all flashed over Agatha in one rush; would the fall kill her, or would it be [illegible] it must be one or the other; the next second or two would settle that; and a swift prayer was on her lips, but what she never quite knew; for even as she breathed it, some one or something in brown tweed knickerbockers hurled itself over the road-side stile before her, a stout stick darted into the flying wheel, and with one quick swerve the tricycle crashed into the ditch, and lay there, a confused mass of spinning spokes and mutilated tires, while Agatha flew out from its midst like a ball, and alighted on a grassy bank a yard or two away; and the express rushed past with a wild yell on the line just below, and vanished round a sharp curve that matched the curve above it.

Then, and then alone, did Richard's legs regain their power of motion; and he set off as fast as they could carry him to where the little black figure lay. Somehow it took longer to run down that hill than the last descent would have led one to think; for when Richard, panting and breathless, reached the scene of the accident, the little black figure, very much out of its usual trim neatness, was seated on the grassy tangle that broke her fall, busily binding up with her own small handkerchief a deep gash in the hand of the knickerbockered person who knelt at her side. It was a very pale face that looked up at Richard's, with the sort of awe that any human creature must wear who has just been face to face with death; but her great grey eyes had a wonderful shining light in them.

"The poor tricycle!" she said; "I am so sorry. Is it very badly hurt?" And, in the fervor of his relief and gladness, Richard could find words for nothing but—

"Bother the tricycle!"

He was ready enough to say something, however, presently, when he found himself obliged to stop and see its remains decently cared for, while Captain Hardwicke took charge of Miss Travers' return to the Rectory. She said she was none the worse for her fall, but perhaps she was a little shaken; but Captain Hardwicke kindly offered her his arm, and she took it. Richard hurried after them before long, his whole heart aglow. That awful minute this afternoon had taught him that life without Agatha Travers would seem a poor and worthless thing, were she a factory-girl. He hurried after them, therefore, and came in sight of the Rectory gate as two hands, one very neatly bandaged, unclasped over it, and a small dark head raised itself swiftly from a brown tweed shoulder, where it seemed to have been resting.

"Good gracious!" was all Richard could utter, as Agatha vanished, and Captain Hardwicke, looking odiously radiant, sauntered toward him.

"Ah, Allerdyce, old fellow, caught us, have you? Then I may as well tell you all my tremendous good luck at once, and take your congratulations. Perhaps you've heard how Miss Travers' nursing saved my life last year, and when of course I fell in love with her, as who wouldn't? She would have it, it was only gratitude, and refused to let me make what she called a misalliance, just because there's that brute of a title coming to me some day. I told her I thought all that rubbish was obsolete, and offered to drop the title altogether if she liked; but nothing would do, and we parted rather out of temper. I heard she was down here, and ran down to see my uncle, hoping he would talk her over, but I began to think it was no use. And, do you know, I was frantically jealous of you, old fellow! I saw she liked you, and I almost believe you could have cut me out, early in the day, if you'd had the pluck to try, she was so set against me. But to-day has made it all right, and she thinks I've saved her life this time, so we're quits. Well, old man, am I not the luckiest man alive?"

"But—but—" stammered the wretched Richard, "surely her family!"

"She's an orphan. Oh, I see what you mean; she told me she had been shocking you with an uncle who's a a chemist, or a butcher, or goodness knows what. Bah! I should think the mere fact of being a hospital nurse was a patent of nobility to any woman. But if my little girl were a beggar-maiden she would still be a real princess. God bless her!"

And Richard's groan may have been an assent.—Lilian Campbell Davidson in Cassell's Magazine.

TAKING STOCK!

No duty devolving upon the business man is so important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's repeating clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognized duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shown in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out any winter goods left over, at cost.

Magisterial Handiwork.

During the quarter ending the second Tuesday in December, 1885, there were made by Her Majesty's Justice of the peace in the County of Peterborough, sixty-four convictions, and of these about fifty, or seventy per cent., were secured in Peterborough town.

A Little Lake.

Water flooded the sidewalk at the corner of Brock and Water streets yesterday afternoon. During the evening many an unwary pedestrian put his foot into it, and, sometimes passed a remark berore he could realise the situation. The water had evidently drained from the hill during the afternoon.

We Direct the Attention

of our readers to the advertisement of the Egan Imperial Truss Co. in this issue. From a number of testimonials before us, they are very highly recommended and are the best that has yet come before our notice. Note the date and go and see the representatives of this Co. when here.

See advertisement.

Some Day the Dog Must Die.

An information has been laid against a prominent town official for keeping a vicious bull-dog. The animal referred to has had the attention of the Magistrate directed to him on several previous occasions for breach of the peace. This will probably be the last call. There are more ways of killing a bull-dog than setting a pigeon at him, but such is likely to be the means employed. There is another dog in town which, it seems, requires the attention of the authorities. It is owned by an ex-town official. This morning it sharpened its teeth on the shin bones of one of our carrier boys.

The Supplement.

The January number of the "Home and School Supplement," an illustrated monthly magazine, devoted to art, literature, science, travel, humor and education, is an admirable one. It is brim full of interesting matter, touching on the above topics. It contains many handsome illustrations, and is a magazine, whose low price, $2 per year, will admit of its brightening, as it should do, every home in the land. It is well edited, healthful in tone, pure in literary style, and cannot fail to exercise a powerful educating, as well as entertaining influence. It has a large circulation, both in Canada and the United States, and is published in Toronto and Buffalo, simultaneously. If the reader has not seen a number, it will pay him to send 20 cents to the "Supplement" Company, Toronto, for a specimen copy.

Anti-Sawdust.

At a meeting of the Anti-Sawdust Association held last night in the Mechanic's Institute, it was decided to send a deputation to Ottawa to interview the Governor-General, opposing the petition from the Peterborough mill-owners asking for exemption from the Navigation and Fisheries Act.

Congregational Meeting at St. Paul's.

The annual meeting of the congregation of St. Paul's Church was held in the school room of the church. Sheriff Hall occupied the chair. Reports from the session, deacon's court, envelope committee, missionary societies, Sunday school, ladies' aid and building committee were read, showing a very satisfactory improvement in the work of the church. The envelope committee reported a marked improvement in the contributions by this method over the pew rent system. The missionary societies reported the contributions towards the mission fund for the past year. The Ladies Aid Society reported the organ debt liquidated and a surplus on hand. The building committee reported a deficit of $500 on the floating debt, when all outstanding subscriptions are paid. The attendance was large. An excellent tea was provided by the ladies previous to the business meeting.

The Walkerfield Stock Sale.

The Walkerfield stock sale, which was conducted by Mr. Charles Stapleton the popular and pushing auctioneer, yesterday, was very successful in every particular. There was a large attendance from the surrounding country, and many from a distance. Bidding was brisk, and farm stock, implements and produce all went at good figures. Horses sold from $114 to $185. Thoroughbred sheep, sold at a moderate price, averaging $7.50 each. The cows sold from $50 to $110. Yearlings, from $41 to $75. Calves from one to two months old sold from $15 to $30. The produce and implements sold at about their market value.

Curling at Keene.

The local curlers who engaged in a match with the Keene curlers yesterday, report a glorious days sport and another victory. They assert that the hospitality of the Keene Club was liberal and general. Two sleighs met the rinks at the station and conveyed them to Kennedy's hotel where they were entertained in royal style. The following rinks:—Geo. Walker, C. McGill, A McNeil, R. S. Davidson, skip; C. A. Weller, John McClelland, W. VanEvery, W. H. Cluxton, skip. Messrs. Reid and Kennedy, skipped the Keene rinks. The scores were as follows:

PETERBOROUGH.	KEENE.
R. S. Davidson—21	W. H. Cluxton 25
John C. Reid—12	M. Kennedy—16

Majority for Peterborough—18.

The Peterborough curlers are high in the praises of the Keene men and also of their rink. They say the rink, which will permit of three rinks playing at once, is ahead of those of Lindsay, Whitby, Orillia, Belleville and other large places. It is expected a return match will be played soon.

Police Court.

T. A. McMurtry, appeared before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning, to answer to the charge perferred against him by P. C. McGinty, of driving at an immoderate rate on George street. McMurtry admitted the charge. The magistrate remarked that speeding a horse was pleasant, but it was dangerous on a public street, and must be stopped, and imposed on McMurtry a fine of $5.

Geo. Lipsett was charged with a similar offance. He did not appear in court, as he had to leave town. He previously admitted to the magistrate that he bad broken the law. A fine of $5 was also imposed on him.

Mr. E. C. Hill was charged with injuring an ornamental shade tree in the Central Park, by driving a spike into the tree to fasten up a bill board. Mr. Hill said he did not consider himself guilty, as the tree was spiked before he put his board up. He also explained that the spike used was a carriage bolt drawn very thin, and could not hurt the tree much. He put the board up for the interest of the public. The magistrate considered Mr. Hill was guilty of an infringment of the town by-law, and, in the interests of the public, imposed a fine of $2.

The Winter Races Decreasing.

The meeting of the local horsemen, held at the Grand Central last night, to take steps in arranging the preliminaries for a two day's trot this winter was poorly attended and the interest manifested in the matter was not very great. No decided steps were taken other than the appointment of a committee to solicit subscriptions. The fine imposed, in the Police Court this morning, upon two drivers of fast steeds for practicing upon George street will not, it is thought, materially assist the project.

Fenimore, the man who had his legs crushed while coupling cars at Hochelaga last Sunday, has died. His wife will bring suit for damages.

Eleven cars on the Intercolonial railway were derailed on Wednesday near St. Fabian, Quebec, by a broken rail; causing a delay of three hours.

The employees of the Great Western section of the Grand Trunk railway Wednesday, demanded a restoration of the 10 per cent. reduction made a few years ago, but were refused.

Jos. Leduc, dry goods merchant, Montreal, assigned on Tuesday with liabilities of between $25,000 and $30,000. Robert & Pare, carriage makers, also assigned, with liabilities of $3,000.

Mr. Deardon, the old Englishman whose jewellery was seized in Montreal the other day, has deposited $20,000 with the collector of customs, being the full value of the goods, pending the decision of the authorities at Ottawa.

F. X. Archambault, who sued the G.N.W. telegraph company for $25,000 for transmitting by associated press, a report of an action taken against him by a Miss Smith, was awarded a verdict of $50 damages. The appeal of the company and counter appeal of plaintiff, is now being heard in Montreal.

Wednesday, in discharging a young man named Robt. Hutchison for larceny, Judge Rose, of Toronto, pleaded with him to refrain from frequenting taverns, and said he would feel thankful when the Great Being would put it into the hearts of the people of Toronto to shut up public drinking places as there should be no such public temptation allowed.

Naseous Nepotism.

In addition to appointing his nephew, Major Macpherson, to a position worth $1,800 a year without examination, and superannuating a capable official to make room for him, Sir John Macdonald has imported another dude nephew, named Sparks, from England, and given him a place in the Interior Department at $1,100 a year. Sir John also has a brother-in-law drawing a superannuation allowance of $3,000 a year. No wonder there is a huge deficit, and yet Canadian taxpayers are told that Sir John has never been guilty of nepotism and that he has no relations feeding at the public crib while rendering no public service.—Exchange.

A Word for Workingmen.

Mr. T. V. Powderly, President of the U. S. Knights of Labor, has given to the millions of workingmen who look to him as a guide, one or two very sound ideas. Recently he insisted very strongly on the fact that many of the evils from which workingmen suffer would be done away with if the curse of strong drink were removed, and they were to lay up what the drink would cost them, and he used his immense influence to dissociate labor movements from their greatest evil, the tavern. Now we find him propounding another idea of immeasurable import. He says: "If every laborer and every employer would read daily a good paper and keep posted on the topics of the time, I feel certain there would be less trouble." Very much of the quarrelling in this world is similar to that of the two warriors who fought over the question whether a certain shield was gold or silver, each seeing it from the opposite side.

Keene.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

We are going to be gay and festive this winter. Keene is becoming noted for its numerous and very enjoyable entertainments. And still they loom up in the future—we are to have an "Old Folks Concert" soon. Then, next week, Wednesday, February 3rd, we are to have a social and literary entertainment in Keene town hall. Price as usual. An unusual feature of the programme being the presence and services of a distinguished ventriloquist.

CURLIANA.

"Let southern climes have gems fu' rare.
"An' flowery groves that scent the air,
"But a' their joys can ne'er compare
"Wi' our gran' game o' curling."

A well contested and most exciting curling match was played here this afternoon between eight gentlemen from Peterborough and as many knights of the "stane and besom" of Keene. Below are the names of the contestants:

PETERBOROUGH.	KEENE.
Rink No. 1.
C. A. Weller,	Dr. Shaw,
J. McClelland,	Jas. Miller,
Wm. VanEvery,	John Dickson,
W. H. Cluxton, skip.	M. Kennealy, skip.
Rink No. 2.
G. Walker,	Wm. Campbell.
C. McGill,	S Mather,
A. McNeil,	Robt. McIntyre,
R. S. Davidson, skip.	John C. Read, skip.

In rink No. 1 Peterborough won by nine points—the score standing 25 to 16. Rink No. 2 also gained nine points. Score, 21 to 12. The well-pleased company left after cheering on both sides, and a capital supper finished a fine afternoon's sport.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance, British Political Speculations.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Standard says Chamberlain will be Irish Secretary in the Gladstone Government.

The Daily News expects Granville, Rosebery and Spencer will be members of the next Cabinet, although it thinks the appointment of Granville as Foreign Secretary will elicit a deep groan from the Liberal party and country. It admits that Lord Hartington has completely severed his connection with the Liberal party and that Goschen will give the party no assistance.

The Telegraph says Sir Charles Dilke will be offered a seat in the new Cabinet but that he will ask to be excused until the Crawford Dilke suit has been settled.

The entire press is opposed to the appointment of Granville to be Foreign Secretary.

The Eastern War Cloud.

ATHENS, Jan. 28.—The Porte threatens the immediate invasion of Thessaly. It is rumored that the British fleet has arrived at Crete. The fall of the Salisbury Government in England has raised the hopes of the Greeks.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 28.—Thirty thousand Martini rifles from America have been forwarded to the front. The fleet is taking on board three months' provisions and a large supply of ammunition.

VIENNA, Jan. 28.—The Greek Government recently bought the steamer Hammonia for conversion into a man-of-war. Germany objected to the purchase, which was consequently annulled.

An order from the Greek Government for 1,200 horses has been received in Trieste.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 28.—The Novoi says England's action in regard to Greece is merely a pretext for sending a fleet to Turkish waters.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Bulgaria has ordered the Servian frontier closed to traffic. The Servians are greatly irritated by this action.

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—Jessen, an American citizen, was arrested at Kiel yesterday afternoon and expelled from the country, the time given him by the Government having expired.

The Panama Canal.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The De Lesseps party includes the unusual adjunct of a doctor. When leaving Paris De Lesseps said: "I will be back in sixty days. I cannot die before the opening of the canal." A large concourse witnessed the distinguished engineer's departure. There was much enthusiasm, the crowd cheering and shouting, "Vive De Lesseps." The party will embark for Panama at Southampton to-day.

Bulgaria and the Porte.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Times' correspondent at Constantinople, in a despatch concerning the understanding arrived at between Turkey and the Bulgaria, says the Porte will bestow upon Prince Alexander the title of Mushir and Governor-General of Eastern Roumelia.

A despatch to the Times from Constantinople says the rumor is current there that a skirmish between the Greeks and Turks has taken place at Glasove, on the frontier of Epirus.

The Evening News says it has authority for stating that Lord Salisbury has advised the Queen to summon Lord Hartington to form a cabinet.

Talk About the Weather.

This is an extraordinery winter. Away down south, in the Gulf states, nothing equal to it for severity has been know since they were settled. There has been destruction among the orange groves of Florida; and in Texas large losses to cattles owners through the sudden down coming of the wave. To the astonishment of our American neighbors, cattle on the Canadian ranges in the far west have escaped almost unharmed, while south of the border the loss and damage have been great. The lower elevation of the Canadian territory and the "chinook" winds may largely account for the difference in favor of our own side. Perhaps the lower elevation of the more northern region may be the reason why the warm winds from the Pacific ocean reach it, while they cannot pass the mountain barrier to the south. But, whatever the cause, the fact of the climate in the grazing regions being warmer to the north than it is to the south may be held established.

Not alone on this side of the Atlantic has the winter been an exceptional one so far. One cable correspondent says that Europe is covered with snow from the Hebrides to the Arno. London has not seen so much snow for fourteen years. Scotland not as much for twenty years. On the continent the winter has been the snowiest known for "a long period," so it is said. This time, at all events, Canada compares very favorably with other countries.—World.

Municipal Appointments.

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

SIR,—Will you kindly allow me space to draw the attention, not only of the ratepayers, but of the Council also, as our representative body in particular, to the above subject. Municipal appointments in general are made from the ranks of the Council's favorites, and merit is not, as it should be, considered the only qualification to such appointments. I am far from going into detail, criticising all the appointments, but will make it a point to refer to the most important and most difficult to fill. I earnestly hope the Council will not act rashly [illegible] the past [illegible] ratepayers in the appointment of a Chief of Police. The public will remember, full well, how, in 1884, burglaries were committed in rapid succession such as the Post Office, McKee & Davidson, Mills, Wilson, Halpin and Belleghem, and how lamentably our police force failed to discover any clue to the barefaced perpetrators. An indignation meeting of the ratepayers was the result, who called on the Mayor to communicate with the different city authorities for an energetic officer to fill the position of Chief of Police. A year has passed in the same old routine, and I wonder if that meeting had really such fury in its train as to frighten the burglars away. Then the necessity of an energetic Chief has passed away.

Are we so secure as to fall asleep with the assurance that such repetitions will not take place again and again? Unfortunately for the town, when at that meeting ratepayers were told by a councillor to protect their own property, as for himself he felt sure burglars would find little to pay for their trouble. Sad to relate all ratepayers have not the good luck to be blacksmiths, masons or carpenters, whose stock in trade wants only protection from unfavorable weather. But what equivalent has the Council to offer the ratepayers for the taxes if not protection? Whatever the Council may do in filling all other appointments, the position of Peterborough, with the increased railroad facilities, whereby all chances of visits from such desperadoes are made easy by the facility of easy access and departure, it is of the greatest importance, for the well-being of the town, to fill that position with an energetic, sober, clear-headed officer, who treats everybody without fear or favor. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your kindness, I remain,

Yours, etc.,
W. LECH.

Peterborough, Jan. 29th, 1886.

With Bob Burdette's Eyes.

Bob Burdette of the Hawk-Eye, in the Brooklyn Eagle, says of Canadians:—

"It is pleasant to tarry among people whose girls wear satin slippers when they dance and arctics when they wade through the snow. Our fair Canadian cousins have no dread of comfort. The snow has no terrors for them; they dress for the storm as sensibly as for the reception. They dress prettily. And if there is a prettier figure on the North American Continent than a daughter of Canada, apparelled for the ice or the toboggan slide, herself a part of the snow drifted landscape, a picture of health and comfort that fairly softens the piercing winds into a sense of warmth, I have not seen it. She dresses in perfect harmony with the winter and landscape, she has a complexion clear as the ice of Ontario, and her warm blood shines through it rich as the flashes of the aurora, graceful and free in every movement—when you look at her you forget there is such a thing as a roller rink or an American banker in Canada.

Everybody dresses for the winter here when the winter comes, and yet it is a climate no more severe than that of New York State. I was the only man in Ontario with a stiff felt hat and a cloth overcoat, and I felt all the time I was in the province as though I was a lost Arctic explorer, and had eaten my fur overcoat, cap, mittens and boots, and was waiting for a rescuing party to find me. Before I had time to die of starvation, however, J. Ross Robertson and the Toronto Press Club found me, and carefully nursed and fed me back to life. They would have fed me more had I been a larger man with greater stowage capacity, for their hospitality is as boundless as their land, which, you know, is bounded not on the north by anything, and reaches away out into the great unknown beyond.

TORONTO, Jan. 28.—The handsome rooms of the New Reform Club on Wellington street west, were formally opened to-day, the members and their lady friends attending in force. Sir Richard Cartwright, the President, did the honors gracefully, and he was ably seconded by the other members in office. Among those present were Hon. E. Blake, Hon. O. Mowat, Hon. T. B. Pardee and other members of the Government, and M. P's. and M.P.P's. in abundance. The Reform Club of Toronto under its present management must be a power for good.

Wm. Kyle, who is already under indictment on a charge of forgery, was arraigned at the Police Court this morning on a charge of conspiring with Colin Munro to defraud the Merchants' Bank out of $30,000 by uttering forged paper. The Police Magistrate said he could not understand what the prosecution wished to establish, as Kyle had been already committed for trial by him for forging or uttering forged paper. After considerable argument the prosecution withdrew the charge.

Hastings

Last Thursday forenoon, while Mr D. Ryan was engaged in threshing at Mr. Thos. Humphries, a few miles west of this village, a peculiar accident occurred. All the hands being busily occupied at their respective positions—the machine running well and at full speed—did not observe a sheep which had strayed into the barn. The animal was nibbling at the chaff and grain that fell from the feed table, but approaching too close to the turning shaft, the wool was caught by the rapidly revolving rod which wound up the poor brute in a few seconds, and brought the machine to a sudden stop. Mr. Ryan, who was feeding, went to the rescue, and when on raising the sharf to extricate the animal, it was found to have been actually flayed alive, all the skin except a small portion on one of the shoulders was torn from the body. On being released the sheep jumped to its feet ran a few yards and dropped, when one of the men killed the poor thing to end its misery.—Star.

Frozen Oranges.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 25.—The Times Union says from reports received authenticated by personal investigation, it appears that the actual money value to growers of oranges rendered unmarketable by reason of being frozen on the trees is about $1,100,000. Young nursery stock in the northern part of the State is badly damaged. Bearing oranges and lemon trees nearly down to the line of the South Florida Railroad are injured to the extent of losing a large part of the fall growth, on which the bloom comes, so that the crop of 1886 will be largely reduced. Pineapples in the same region, with guavas and other tender tropical fruits, are killed to the roots and will require a year to recuperate. Early vegetables have been badly damaged, but can be replaced. The whole money damage to the fruit and farm interests of the State will exceed $2,000,000.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

January Session.

THIRD DAY—THURSDAY.

There was no sitting of the Council this morning, the members being engaged in Committee work.

The Committee on Schools went into session to consider the following matters which have been referred to them :

Petition for Removal of Inspector.

To the Members of the County Council of the County of Peterborough :

GENTLEMEN,—We the undersigned ratepayers of the County of Peterborough, pray that you will take the necessary steps to remove James Coyle Brown from the office of Public School Inspector of this county, as he is neglecting to fulfil the duties of that office.

This petition was signed by Wm. Lynn and about fifty others.

Public School Inspector's Report.

To the Warden and Members of the Council of the County of Peterborough :

GENTLEMEN,—I herewith lay before you a detailed report of the schools of the county, chiefly for the last half of 1885. The report is not as satisfactory as could be desired. The attendance at the schools was less than usual, in consequence, I think, of the late harvest and the general depression. During the Model School Term there were nine teachers in training. At the end, eight of these obtained certificates, and most of them are now teaching. The smallness of the attendance was due to the fact that comparatively few succeeded in passing the non-professional examinations at midsummer last. Now, however, there are large classes at both Peterborough and Norwood preparing for the non-professional examinations of the current year. I think it probable that three or four times as many will pass this year as did last. There will, I anticipate, be a corresponding increase in the number of teachers in training during the Model School Term. In this way I hope, at no distant time, every teacher engaged in the Public Schools of the county, will have received special training as a teacher, and when such things as permits will be unknown.

You will doubtless be called on to assist the Collegiate Institute of Peterborough and the High School at Norwood. I believe that never in the past were these institutions more deserving of your encouragement and support. The attendance at each is exceptionally large, the organization excellent and the teaching staff eminently satisfactory.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
J. C. BROWN,
P. S. Inspector.
Peterborough, Jan. 28th. 1886.

A Teacher's Complaint.

To the Members of the County Council of the County of Peterborough :

GENTLEMEN,—I am of the opinion that Mr. Brown acted unfairly in not giving me my professional certificate last December, and in order to give you some impression as to the probability of his doing, so, I willsubmitthe following :—

I obtained a non-professional third-class certificate last July at Norwood. I attended the model school held at that place during the last session. About the first of the session I heard of a vacancy in the Township of Douro. I went to see the Trustees of this school and they told me that their teacher was going to leave at the end of the year 1885. They told me to see them in about a week from that time. In the meantime one of the Trustees of said school had a conversation with Mr. Brown, P.S.I., who had told him not to engage me in that school. Up to this time I taught but four or five lessons in the model school, when I taught 30 lessons in all, and Mr. Brown never saw me teach in the model up to this time. I then went tosee the Trustees of said school in Douro and engaged with them for the year 1886. After the examination, that is the final examination held at Norwood last December, I asked Mr. Hutchinson for the result of the examination. He told me that it was all in Mr. Brown's hands. I told him I thought Mr. Brown was angry with me since it was rumoured about that I under-bid the teacher of the school in which I was engaged, Mr. Hutchinson answered me by saying "well yes, I heard about that, and I told you repeatedly not to do so and Dr. Tilley the Model School Inspector, told you all in the school the same thing," I then went to see Mr. Brown and asked him the result of the examination. He said he had to see Mr. Hutchinson before he could tell me the result. I saw Mr. Brown shortly after and he told me that I failed in teaching by a few marks. I saw Mr. Davidson, head Master of the High School, a member of the Board of Examiners for the county of Peterborough. He and I spoke to Mr. Brown ; I told Mr. Brown the reason I failed was because I bired in the School in Douro. That same afternoon he consented to grant me a permit to teach which I refused to take. Mr. Davidson told me he heard that I under-bid a teacher in the Douro School, and took it out of her hands.

Respectfully submitted,
NEIL MCNULTY.

Mr. Nulty, appearing before the committee, explained that he had applied for a school in Douro about the time that he went to the Model School at Norwood and he thought he had been harshly used by Mr. Brown, by the latter having discredited him to the trustees of the school for which he had applied, before he (the Inspector) knew anything of his abilities or had a chance of examining his papers or seeing him teach. He believed he had passed the written examination, if properly examined, and he thought he had good grounds for an appeal to the Education Department, but for the decision of the Inspector in connection with his standing as a teacher, while in the model school ; thus he had no opportunity of appealing, as the Inspector's decision was final. He had believed that Mr. Brown had been and was convinced of the fact, since Mr. Brown had discredited him the Douro trustees, before he had an opportunity of judging of his abilities.

ACTUATED BY SPITE,

Mr. Brown on the other hand, held that the papers had been honestly examined and that Mr. McNulty was "plucked" on his merits.

The matter was held for further consideration of the committee.

Several other minor matters, respecting school section bounds, etc., were considered and the result will appear in their report.

Afternoon Session.

In the afternoon the Council resumed, all the members present, the Warden in the chair.

Piscatorial and Aboriginal.

On motion of Mr. Mansfield, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, Mr. P. Galvin, of Ennismore, was heard by the Council.

Mr. Galvin pointed out that the stringency of the Fishery Law operated greatly to the hardship of the Indians. As it was, they were not taking enough fish for their subsistence, and in consequence there were some of them in a starving condition. He appealed to the Council to see that the law be made more liberal so that the Indians may be allowed to fish at all seasons. The matter was referred to the Committee on Petitions.

Enforcing the Scott Act.

On motion by Mr. Strickland, seconded by Mr. Fitzgerald, the Scott Act deputation was heard by the Council.

Mr. Geo. A. Cox was the first speaker. He said that the deputation appeared on behalf of the Scott Act Association, to urge upon the Council the great importance, in the interests of the Act, of appointing a Police Magistrate to see to its enforcement. He had spoken to Mr. Dumble and that gentleman was willing, in case the Council extended his jurisdiction, to act in the desired capacity for $200 per year. He thought that with two assistants at $200 each the law would be in a manner enforced. He thought, in view of the fact that so large a majority of the electors had pronounced in favour of the Act, it was the duty of the Council to make some provision for its enforcement.

Dr. Fife thought it was only reasonable for us to take steps to have the law, adopted by ourselves, properly administered. The County Council paid its share of the fund for the administration of justice and the Scott Act being in the interests of morality, he hoped the Council would see its way to having the law rigidly respected. The men who pay the taxes had by a large majority adopted the Act, and in so doing have shown their willingness to bear their share of the expense consequent upon its proper enforcement, rather than have it remain a dead letter.

Mr. J. W. Flavelle read the clause of the statute showing that the fines went into the hands of the municipality, therefore the amount asked for would be returned in the shape of fines.

Moved by Mr. Stephenson, seconded by Mr. Brown,—Whereas the Scott Act has been adopted by the ratepayers of the county by a large majority, and whereas it will come into force on the 1st day of May next and whereas it is advisable that the said Act should be strictly and stringently enforced in order to carry out the wishes of the ratepayers. Therefore it is resolved that this Council do request the Ontario Government to appoint a Police Magistrate for the County at a salary of $200, and that two inspectors be appointed by this Council, one in the east, the other in the west, at a salary of $200 each, for carrying out the provisions of the said Act.

Mr. Burnham moved in amendment, seconded by Mr. Strickland, that the matter be referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Burnham contended that, although the majority of votes cast in the election, were given in favour of the Act, the majority of the entire listed vote was opposed to it.

On a vote being taken the amendment was lost and the original motion carried on the following division :

YEAS.—Messrs. Stephenson, Forster, Lang, Fitzgerald, Crough, Hicks, Stewart, Foley, and Brown.—9

NAYS.—Messrs. Moloney, Moore, Walsh, Burnham, Strickland, Mansfield, Elmhirst and Sanderson—8.

The County Magistracy.

Moved by Mr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Strickland, that the Police Magistrate to be appointed, be a resident of the county.—Carried.

Mr. Burnham said that if a man were to be appointed, a resident of the county should be selected.

Mr. Cox remarked that the motion just adopted was perfectly satisfactory, as the town was a part of the county for Scott Act purposes.

Mr. Burnham—Then we'll pass a resolution letting the Government understand what we mean—that he must be a resident of the county.

Mr. Walsh then moved, seconded by Mr. Moloney, that the Police Magistrate be not a resident of the town of Peterborough.

A vote being taken on this motion, it was lost on the following division :—

YEAS.—Messrs. Moloney, Moore, Burnham, Walsh, Strickland and Foley.—6.

NAYS.—Messrs. Hicks, Crough, Mansfield, Stephenson, Elmhirst, Forster, Brown, Lang, Stewart, Sanderson and Fitzgerald.—11.

The original motion, involving the appointment of magistrate and inspectors, was put and passed on the following division :—

YEAS.—Messrs. Hicks, Foley, Fraser, Stephenson, Lang, Elmhirst, Brown, Stewart and Fitzgerald.—9.

NAYS.—Messrs. Moloney, Crough, Burnham, Strickland, Mansfield, Sanderson, Strickland and Moore.—8.

Collegiate Institute Grant.

On motion of Mr. Elmhirst, seconded by Mr. Brown, the deputation in waiting from the Peterborough Board of Education was heard in support of a grant from the county, to the Collegiate Institute.

Mr. James Stevenson thanked the Council for the liberal grant of last year, which was highly appreciated by the ratepayers and the Board. It tended to bring about a better feeling and more intimate relations between the county and the town. Since last year he was pleased to say the school had largely as well as in numbers. At present there were 174 pupils in attendance, and of these there were 117 from the county and 57 from the town. The school is doing good work. It is composed of all classes, the principal part of whom were preparing themselves for the teaching profession The county would be benefitted by being able to avail themselves of these to teach their schools. They were well trained and would make efficient teachers. The Collegiate Institute cost the town last year $3,700 ; there was received from the Government two grants of $780 and $753 respectfully ; the county granted $750 and $800 accrued for fees, making a total of $6,783. The county pupils were admitted on the same terms as town pupils, and he hoped, considering the large proportion of the advantage derived from the school, enjoyed by the county, that the council would see its way clear to making a liberal grant.

Mr. Cox said the school was succeeding admirably. It was desired to so maintain the efficiency of the school as to give it

A PROVINCIAL REPUTATION.

He believed in the free education of the youth of the country and he had always been in favour of admitting pupils to the Collegiate Institute from the county on the same terms as town pupils, whether the county gave a grant or not. He hoped that the Council, in a matter of such great importance, would act with commendable liberality.

Mr. Stratton endorsed the remarks made by the former speakers and urged the Council to promote the educational interests of the county by contributing to the maintenance of the institution in question.

The matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

Colonization Roads.

Moved by Mr. R. C. Strickland, seconded by Mr. Moloney,—Whereas, the rear part of the county is largely composed of Government lands, and whereas it is in the interest of this county, that the lands should be thrown open for settlement by the improvement of the present colonization roads, viz., Bobcaygeon, Beckhorn, Burleigh and Wellington, that this Council request other counties similarly situated to join in memorialising the Local Government, that in future all monies voted for colonization purposes should be placed in the hands of the several County Councils of the counties in which the proposed expenditure is to be made, and that the Councils should have full control of the expenditure thereof, provided they supplement the grant by an equal amount.

Mr. Strickland supported this resolution by contending that the money appropriated to colonization roads was not properly expended, and that the municipalities did not get a quid pro quo, as far as the laying out of this money went.

Mr. Mansfield was opposed to the motion. He said the municipalities were never treated so liberally as they had been in the matter of colonization road expenditure, by the Ontario Government. He could testify positively, from his own personal experience, that the money granted had been properly and judiciously expended. Not one dollar could be misappropriated.

Mr. Elmhirst asserted that the townships he represented had got in the neighborhood of last year, and he did not think that the county would be willing to grant an equivalent to that amount. He was further of the opinion that the adoption of the resolution would tend to the back townships not getting such liberal government grants in the future. The main roads in the back country were never better than at present, thanks to the liberality of the Ontario Government. The side lines needed improving, which, he hoped would yet be done, with the aid of both the county and the government.

$1,500 FROM THE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT

At the suggestion of Mr. Burnham, Mr. Strickland withdrew his motion

The Sawdust Subject.

On motion of Mr. Strickland a deputation composed of Messrs. Hazlitt Hilliard, Geo. A. Cox and J. M. Irwin, adressed the Council, asking that body to pass a memorial to the Dominion Government, asking the latter to exempt the waters of the Otonabee from the obstruction clauses of the act. If the mill owners were to alter the construction of their mills or be hampered by frequent fines imposed through the agency of the Anti-Sawdust Association, they would be compelled to shut down their mills.

A familiar discussion followed and Mr. Burnham contended that the memorial should not be passed without both parties being heard. The matter, after some conversation, was referred to the Committee on Petitions.

Moved by Mr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Walsh, that the Clerk be authorized to notify the Secretary of the Anti-Sawdust Association, that a meeting of the Committee on Petitions will be held to-morrow, at 10 o'clock, to consider the application of the mill owners.—Carried.

Inspectors Appointed.

Moved by Mr Strickland, seconded by Mr. Burnham,—That Mr. Geo. Cochrane, of Lakefield, be an inspector for the West Riding, and Mr. Jas. Humphries, of Asphodel, be inspector for the East Riding, to see that the Scott Act is strictly enforced in this county. Duties to commence on the first day of May next.—Carried.

The Council adjourned till ten o'clock to-morrow.

FOURTH DAY—FRIDAY.

There was no sitting of the Council this morning, the members having been engaged in committe work. The Committee on Petitions spent the morning in considering the application of the saw mill owners, respecting the sawdust question.

Rome.

Where are the footprints of the ancient dead
Who dwelt and wrought in Rome and made mankind?
What memory have the mighty left behind
In this imperial place where they were bred?
Like minute sands the centuries have sped
To cover nations with their dust-cloud blind;
Fragments of beauty past are all we find,
Whose purpose, with the flying years, is fled.
In this vast universe is left no place
For that fleet breath that fleeting man calls "Fame."
These stones, that mind us of some fading name,
And watched the passing of earth's strongest race,
Will vanish too; the long years hold no grace
For earth's memorials of praise and blame.

—The Spectator.

Metre for the Meter.

Inscrutible, consolidated liar,
And secret mystery of wheels and things,
That makes our monthly bills for gas mount higher,
And into every household trouble brings!

Here would you now be loaded with the curses
Of angry men who in revilement vie,
Could these so poor, human, weak, and halting verses
Get over words as fast as you can lie.

How meek and open-faced your dire delusion!
How secret and insatiable your sin!
How quietly you work in safe seclusion,
Daily and nightly dragging dollars in!

Explain your vast and wondrous powers of suction;
The secrets of your prison-house declare;
How does it happen that the rate's reduction
Becomes a mockery, a fraud, a snare?

What is there in your cormorantist nature,
Your mechanism wierd and intricate,
That makes you swallow up a Legislature
And hold and bind the people of a state?

Some time the rule of law will be completer,
And by an honest Legislature then
Strict justice will be meted to the meter,
And peace at last possess the souls of men.

Living on His Father.

There are a number of men in Cleveland who paint and powder their faces. I know that this is true, for I have been in their rooms and seen them lay on their complexions. It is very easy to do so, and it makes the boys look charming by gaslight. Still one can see that the stuff is there. I know one pretty fellow who doesn't work, because it takes too much time and makes him tired, who spends enough money each week in powders, cosmetics, complexion washes, hair preparation and brushes, and perfumery to keep a family of six. And the man has enough ability to earn his daily bread if he had to. But he does not. He practices financial cannibalism—"lives off the old man," as he puts it. If he were my son I'd take a club in one hand and a loaf in the other to him for each meal. He should choose between my offerings and work. I tell him so, but he laughs a languid laugh, asks me not to rail at his "habits." Says that I'm not his father, and that he only enhances a beauty bestowed upon him by nature. I couldn't stand such picturesque impudence as that and wandered out.

Agriculture in Minnesota.

The annual report of the Commissioner of Statistics give some interesting facts regarding the changes taking place in Minnesota agriculture. The change is the favorable one from a single crop to diversified products. In 1881 the total area devoted to wheat culture was 2,884,160 acres; in 1882 it had decreased to 2,829,969, notwithstanding the fact that the area under cultivation had increased by more than 436,000 acres. The gradual abandonment of the old system is apparent from the fact that in 1878 the percentage of the total area sown in wheat was 68.98; in 1879 it was 68.30; in 1880, 66.59; in 1881, 62.49, and in 1882, 53.35, or only a trifle over one half of the cultivated area. At the same time the acreage in oats, barley and corn has correspondingly increased from 24.89 per cent. in 1878 to 37.80 in 1882. The history of Minnesota is that of other Western States. In the beginning wheat is the easiest crop to raise. As the country grows older, and fills up, and the farmers get means, they see the danger of relying on a single crop, increase their cattle, and so, gradually, get into the better way.—Boston Herald.

The eight Arabs who landed in New York last March penniless, but laden with beads and crosses made from the wood from the Mount of Olives, are now about to return to their native land rich enough to buy camels and become merchants, a financial condition which they could never have hoped to attain at home. They intend to start an agency to send out shiploads of Arabs next spring.

Gertude Donald, a sixteen year-old school girl of Alliance, Ohio, was shot and instantly killed by a peculiar accident. While a wagon load of household goods was passing through the street a drawer in one of the bureaus slid out and off the cart. It so happened that a loaded pistol was in it, and the force of the fall to the ground discharged it. Singularly, the ball struck Miss Donald in the back and killed her almost instantly. She lived only long enough to say, "O, I'm shot."

When Field Marshal von Moltke was recently staying at Ragatz two young Frenchmen inhabited an adjoining room, and, learning who their neighbor was, proceeded to annoy him with unearthly noises at night. On the illustrious soldier remonstrating with them, they remarked that "he might win campaigns, but he could not attack them in their own rooms, and that if he did not like French music he had better change his quarters." This, with a quiet dignity, and without further remonstrance, he did.

In 1827 Charles Babbage superintended the printing of a set of trigonometrical tables for the ordnance survey of England and Ireland. Only thirty copies were printed. The tables contained six millions of figures. They were prepared and corrected with the utmost care, and when completed were hung up in the hall at Cambridge University and a reward offered to any one who could find an inaccuracy. Since their first issue in 1827 no error has been discovered, and it may reasonably be concluded that they are absolutely correct.

In Washington they tell that John McCullough once, when playing there, went out to the hotel at Cabin John's Bridge for dinner, and thoughtlessly tarried there until a quarter past seven, when, for the first time, he remembered that he must appear on Ford's stage as Spartacus at 8:20 precisely! And he was fourteen miles away from that stage. It took five minutes to get the swiftest horse at the hotel harnessed to a light wagon, and there remained just an hour for the drive and to dress in. Mr. McCullough came on the stage only five minutes late, and never played Spartacus better in his life than then.

A story is going the round of the French papers to illustrate the ways of the English abroad. A "couple" staying at Schaffhausen ordered an illumination of the Rhine for their own special benefit, and the work was put in hand accordingly. The villagers got wind of the matter, and assembled to see the sight; whereupon "milord Anglais," remarking that he had paid for himself and not for the public, countermanded the illumination and gave orders that none of the lamps or fireworks should be lighted. Presently, however, one of the heavy thunderstorms which visit Switzerland broke off over the falls, and an electric spark set the fireworks off. The English "milord," it seems, was as furious as the storm. A great many morals are possible to this story.

Some of the coast negroes of Africa still worship the shark and regard its stomach as the road to paradise. They offer it poultry and goats two or three times a year, and at least once a year try to propitate it by offering a ten-year-old child. The little victim is bound to a post in the sands at low water, and, as the tide rises, mingles its shrieks and screams with those of its mother until the ravenous fishes drag it out of sight.

A Model Wife.

Jones was well aware that his wife was in the habit of rifling his pockets when he was asleep, but, like a wise man, he kept silence on the subject. One night, however, he awoke and caught her in the act.

"Ha!" he exclaimed, "what are you doing, my dear?"

The lady started, her cheeks flushed, the pantaloons dropped from her grasp, and she was about to make a full confession when a bright idea entered her head. Recovering her composure she said:

"I was looking to see whether your pantaloons needed any buttons."

"They do, they do, my dear," he exclaimed, springing from bed, "needed 'em for weeks, months, and I wondered why you didn't sew 'em on; but I waited, for I was sure you would get to it some time. And how kind of you to get out of bed at this time of night to attend to 'em. Say what you will, there's nothing in the world like a good wife. Let me turn up the gas a little, so's you'll have all the light you want in sewing 'em on. Got your needle and thread and the buttons? No. Well, tell me where they are and I'll get them for you."

Mrs. Jones proceeded to sew on the buttons, while her husband sat on the side of the bed and encouraged her with words of praise for her wifely care and thought for his comfort, occasionally remarking that go where he would he would always say there was nothing in the world like a good wife.

Then he went to the wardrobe and brought out several pair of trousers, a coat, two or three old vests, and a number of shirts, from all of which buttons were missing, and cheerily observed:

"While we're at it we'll make a night of it."

Two hours later, when Mrs. Jones, with a weary sigh, removed the thimble from her finger, Mr. Jones patted her on the cheek and said:

"I say it again, my dear, say it again, that wherever I go I will make it known, proclaim it from the housetops, shout it in the highways and byways, that a wife who gets up in the middle of the night to sew buttons on her husband's clothes is a priceless treasure, a crown to that husband, and an ornament to her sex."

Then Mr. Jones, chuckling to himself, lay calmly down and slept the sleep of the just.—Detroit Free Press.

TAKING STOCK!

We duty devolving upon the business man is so important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's repeating clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognized duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shown in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out any winter goods left over, at cost.

He will be glad to welcome all his old friends and to make new ones. The bar will be found stocked with the choicest supply of fine liquors, ales, cigars, etc., and every attention will be given to promoting the enjoyment of the guests of the Albion.

Ordered to Keep Order at the Barracks.

Mr. P. C. Pidgon has received notice from Mayor Stevenson to attend the Salvation Army meetings nightly, and remain their from 8 to 10 o'clock. Mr. Pidgeon will no doubt assist very materially in maintaining order in the barracks. Probably the Mayor will see fit to detail one of the staff to attend the Opera House to keep the necessary order there. The constables would not object and it is not thought the public would.

An "At Home" at St. Luke's School.

Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, Rector of St. Luke's, and Mrs. Bradshaw, gave an "At Home" in St. Luke's new Sunday School Wednesday evening. An invitation was extended to all the members of the congregation, who attended in large numbers. During the evening a programme, consisting of music by the choir, recitations, etc., was given. Refreshments were also served. A social conversation was one of the main features of the gathering. One of the objects of the "At Home" was to promote the social harmony of the congregation. Mr. Bradshaw is a firm believer in the doctrine that though the world may make distinctions, the church should know none.

A Daring Deed.

The Riverside toboggan slide is the scene of many a lively incident. Every day some person is absent minded enough to forget to sit on a toboggan when going down the slide. Yesterday a daring youth stepped on one of the runways and took a standing slide. "The boldest held his breath for a time," but when he reached the bottom in safety the cheering was long and loud. An insurance agent says he could not have been induced, during the act, to take a risks on the fellows life, or the slide either. He was of opinion that if the youth had dropped during the run it meant certain death to himself and destruction to the slide. And still they come and go and the slide stands.

St. Paul's Social Tea.

Yesterday evening was one of great festivity in St. Paul's Church Sunday School. All the regular and irregular attendants of the school, armed with a free admission ticket, presented themselves at the door, and were ushered into the festive hall. The Bible Class room was converted into a dining room, where the ladies of the church supplied an excellent tea to hundreds of hungry mortals, large and small. After tea was dispensed with an adjournment was made to the large class room, where an interesting entertainment was given. A number of lively choruses by the children and a charming solo by Miss Logan completed the musical part of the programme. Mr. D. B. Gardiner then produced a magic lantern and entertained the audience for the remainder of the evening. The gas was extinguished and a large number of interesting views were presented on the white wall in rapid succession, which Mr. Gardiner described as they were shown. The greater number were comic ones and created no little amusement. Rev. Mr. Torrance was unable to be present owing to indisposition caused by a cold. The children enjoyed themselves thoroughly. The managers of the tea and entertainment are to be congratulated on the success of the annual Sunday School social.

Young People's Entertainment.

The monthly entertainment of the Young People's Association, in connection with the Baptist church, will be held on Friday evening, the 29th inst. The entertainment will consist of readings, recitations, vocal and instrumental music, etc. A good programme programme has been arranged. Admission, 10 cents. All are invited to-night.

Valentines.

Mr. Thos. Menzies is the first of the dealers in Valentines to place his goods on exhibition. His window displays to advantage a very tasty lot of valentines. St. Valentine's day, 14th of February, falls on Sunday this year, and both Saturday and Monday will be observed as the day. The dealers look forward to large sales. Valentines may be had for both love and money. Vulgar ones are out of date.

A Local Skater at Bobcaygeon.

Mr. E. J. Hartley, of Peterborough, the champion fancy skater, delighted the 'Caygeonites at the rink on Tuesday night. The Independent thus alludes to his performances:—"Tuesday evening Mr. Hartley, of Peterborough, the champion skater, perhaps of the Province, spent an hour on the ice, and treated those present to some of his quality. He performed some wonderful movements with the greatest ease."

What They are Saying.

They object to my bull-dog now, next I shall be forbidden to pasture my black mare in my back yard.—Inspector Beavis.

I'm rather down on fancy poultry; I can't tolerate "dove"-cotes in town.—Mayor Stevenson.

If the anti-sawdusters don't shut up we'll have to shut down.—Sawmill owners.

All the anti-sawdusters are mere boys.—One of the mill men.

Where do you find your men if you call us boys?—Bearded anti-sawdusters.

It's the first time I ever heard of a peeler being detailed to protect an army.—P. C. Pidgeon.

It's a plan to get ye convarted.—P. C. McGinty.

What We May Expect.

The Fire Brigade Band at the rink to-night.

Lawson, the Scotch elocutionist, at the Y. M. C. A. hall to-night.

A meeting of the dancing classes this evening.

Good market to-morrow,

And fresh eggs to put in an appearance.

The county councillors to wind up their week's work with a rush to-morrow morning.

Cloudy weather, with local showers of sleet and snow, followed by northwest to west winds and partially clearing weather; slightly lower temperature.

Tobogganers' Trip.

Yesterday a company of about fifteen tobogganners set out for Lakefield with the idea of taking the Lakefielders by surprise. But the latter became apprised of the invasion and were ready to receive their confreres with open arms. The visitors were met at the station with a veritable fusilade of attentions. The party was conducted to the slide and the ladies furnished with good looking escorts, and the gentlemen provided with toboggans. A delightful few hours was passed in the dizzy delights of the dashing toboggan. The visitors were charmed with the hearty hospitality of the Lakefield toboggan devotees, and if, as is probable, they ever come to Peterborough, they will be welcomed with all the cordiality possible. "The best in the town will not be too good for them."

An Evening With the Children.

Skating Tickets.

The Skating Rink company announce a reduction of skating tickets to half-price for the remainder of the season.

Mr. Smiff and our Curlers.

Mr. Smiff the talented leader writer of the Independent thus gracefully alludes to the recent visit of their curlers to Peterborough:—"Altogether, the Bobcaygeon teams express themselves in the warmest terms of the gentlemanly and sportsmanlike reception given them by the Peterborough curlers. They also have a warm corner in their hearts for their old friend Snowden of the Phelan House, who looked after their personal comforts so thoughtfully and generally."

Personal.

Mr. Chris. Mather, formerly of this town but now of Morden, Man., is in town visiting friends. He expressed himself as greatly surprised with the growth which Peterborough has made during the last seven years.

Rev. Mr. Torrance, who has been confined to his house for the past week with a severe cold, was out yesterday afternoon. He is recovering from the effects of the cold and will in all probability be able to attend to his duties on Sunday.

Dr. Washington, throat and lung specialist, registered at the Grand Central this morning. He will remain at the hotel until February 2nd.

Mr. Jos. Simpson, of Denver, General Passenger Agent of Chicago, Burlington and Quincey Railway, was registered at the Oriental to-day.

The Deadly Blizzard.

DODGE CITY, Kan., Jan. 27.—John C. Kimbrel, his wife and three children, were frozen to death in a wagon near here during the recent blizzard.

Scott Act Defeat.

The Scott Act was defeated yesterday in Pontiac county, Quebec. The majority against the Act so far is 345, with several places to hear from, which are expected to increase it to 500.

Bobcaygeon.

The cattle buyers are skirmishing around, picking up any animals that are to be bought. Several farmers are now doing their own butchering, and selling their beef at Peterborough. Saturday's market in that town, was chiefly beef in carcase, that was being bought for shipment to the larger cities.—Independent.

Death of the Oldest man in Canada.

WINDSOR, Jan. 28.—On Tuesday night Freeman Coleman died here at the advanced age of 121 years. He was born in Buckingham County, Va., on August 4, 1764, twelve years before the Declaration of Independence was made. His Christian name was given him because he was born and always remained a freeman. He was of mingled Indian, Spanish and negro decent.

Until last Saturday Mr. Coleman was about the house, active and in full possession of all his faculties, busying himself with various little pieces of work, and went to bed that night feeling as well as usual. Sunday he was too weak to rise, and he gradually sank until the hour of his death, eight o'clock Tuesday night. He was able to count a numerous progeny, his children, grandchildren, great grandchildren, and great-great grandchildren, numbering in all 138. His oldest living child is Mrs. Mary Dunlap, 76 years of age, who resides in Ohio.

The Chllender Branch.

The last spike in the Callander branch connecting Ontario with the Canada Pacific through line has been practically completed. It shortens the distance between Toronto and Winnipeg by some 214 miles, and ought to lead to much increased travel over the Pacific. Connections is made at La Vase, on the shores of Lake Nipissing, and in a few weeks the ballasting will be completed and the line open for traffic, so that one may travel by rail from Toronto to Vancouver's Island over Canadian territory.

The Partisan Reviser's Act.

"The Government has since taken from the Provinces the power which each Province had up till lately exercised of settling the Dominion Franchise. It is a power which, as the neighboring Republic proves, it is more consistent with the federal spirit to leave with the Provinces. They have thus created a double Franchise, a double registration, double trouble and expense. Their Franchise is less liberal than that of the late Ontario Act, and they retain the plural vote. They have conferred on the unenfranchised Indians, of whom the bulk are shown by their own official reports to be uneducated and dependent, who have not yet got, are declared unfit for, and do not want the other privileges and responsibilities of citizenship, who are the wards of the First Minister and Chief Superintendent, the right of voting for their guardian's candidate if they choose and against him if they dare. They have taken from the municipal officers the preparation of the lists, and, contrary to the English System, have seized the appointment of makers and revisers into their own hands. Their use of the power has been moderated for the time by the vigorous opposition and the force of public opinion; but they have in some cases greatly abused the power by the choice of partisans whose names figure in the records of election petitions, and are embalmed in the judgments on the trials. This Act should have an end."—Hon. E. Blake at London.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and those we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

LIBERALS, LOOK ALIVE!

Now is the time to be alive to the importance of every Liberal name being put on the "perliminary" list—the basis of all future lists under the Dominion Franchise Act.

Tory newspapers do not need to appeal to individual members of their party, to take action, for Sir John's revising officers are paid by the people of Canada to work in the interest of the Conservative party, and Conservative "unions" are working night and and day to see that every Conservative vote goes on the first list.

Every Liberal elector has to look out for himself personally, if he desires to have a vote at the next general Dominion election. The EXAMINER has published the qualifications necessary to constitute a voter; but the grand qualification is to get your name on the first list.

If you are qualified, and are not on the assessment roll, you must send to the revising officer or his clerk AT ONCE a declaration of qualification.

You can obtain the necessary forms of application by applying to Mr. R. E. Wood, barrister, Mr. E. B. Stone, barrister, or at the EXAMINER Office.

There is not a moment to lose. The first lists must be made up, printed and distributed before the first of March.

Don't delay; delay means disfranchisement.

A Cold Wave Coming.

ST. PAUL, Jan 28.—It is snowing and blowing here to-night, and growing colder. Report from Forts Buford and Assiniboine, where the last blizzard orginated, show a fall in temperature.

Darlington.

Diptheria is said to be in Darlington Township. A young man, seventeen years of age, called Ormiston, was the first victim and now four more of the family are prostrated. It is said that so much was the disease dreaded that no one has entered the house to render assistance to the afflicted ones.—Port Hope Times.

Cheered Out of Ireland.

DUBLIN, Jan. 28.—Lord Carnarvon, ex-viceroy of Ireland, left Dublin castle to-day, accompanied by his wife, for their home in England. The retiring viceroy was followed to the railway station by enormous crowds, and his route all the way to Kingstown, where he took the ferry for Holyhead, was lined with people anxious to witness his departure. He was cheered almost continuously from the time he left Dublin castle until he departed from the the Irish coast. The enthusiasm of the populace was phenomenal.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

Golden weddings are few and far between; but now and then they occur and are the occasion of many congratulations. One of these pleasing events last Tuesday celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the nuptials of Mr. and Mrs. J. O'Leary of this town. The venerable party are hale and hearty, quite active and in the possession of excellent health. They received many congratulations from friends and acquaintances, amongst whom they are held in high and affectionate esteem. There was during the day and evening a large family gathering at Mr. O'Leary's residence, Lindsay street, south, and several friends joined them in the evening, making a large party. The happy old couple are happy indeed surrounded by their children, grand-children, and great-grand-children. The presents comprised a golden crown on which were placed in gold two $10 pieces, eleven $5 from the eleven children, thirty-seven $2.50 from the grand children, and two $1.00 from the little great-grand-children; and a number of other articles of value suitable to the occasion. Since coming to Lindsay Mr. O'Leary has taken a prominent stand as a public man. His family have grown up and are well to do citizens. They are eleven in number. Among them being Mr. Arthur O'Leary, Police Magistrate of Lindsay, and Mr. Hugh O'Leary, Barrister, Lindsay.

Mr. H. L. Dunn, B. A., formerly assistant master in the Lindsay High School, has taken the first scholarship ($100) at first matriculation examination at Osgoode Hall, Toronto.

The Sons of Toil.

Items of Interest to Working Men.

GENERAL.

It is asserted that there is not a non-union lather in the city of New York.

A Mr. Lippincott, of Brooklyn, N. Y., being so requested by his employes, reduced the working hours from sixteen to twelve per day.

The Toronto tea and grocery clerks are busily engaged in the work of organization.

The Bakers' Convention at Pittsburg, Pa., lately adopted as its title "The National Union of German Bakers," and New York as headquarters.

The upholsterers and cabinetmakers of New York have announced that on and after the 1st day of May next they will only work [illegible].

The Brotherhood of Railroad Brakemen of the United States have accepted the proposition to admit the Conductors' and Brakemen's Association of Canada, with a membership of 3,000.

John Noonan, of Akron, Ohio, has entered suit against the Excelsior Coal Company for $10,000 damages, because of his being by that company "blacklisted," so that he could not get employment at any of the surrounding mines. The company charged him with being the instigator of a strike.

The wireworkers' strike at East Haven, Conn., which lasted six months, came to an end last week. The men claim that they gained the point for which they struck, while the employers say concessions were made on both sides. 70 of the 120 who struck returned to work.

Steps are being taken by the textile works of New York with the object of forming a National Union.

The strike of the United Nailers, Heaters, and Rollers, of America, is now in its seventh month, and it is asserted that not a man has been lost from the ranks during that time.

The next convention of the Federation of Trades of America will be held at St. Louis.

The miners of Blue Stone Creek, Pa., have gained all they struck for, and are to start to work at once. The strike lasted a month.

On January 19, Superintendent Skitt, of the Fourth-avenue surface road, N. Y., issued a notice that on and after Feb. 1st, twelve hours' labor, including time spent on stand at both ends of the road, will constitute a day's work. Rates of wages will remain at $2.

The Labor Committee appointed by the Congress is busy at its work. Lately the Chairman was instructed to present to the House a resolution calling on the heads of Departments to furnish information as to the number of hours during which employees are kept at work. The committee are under the impression that the eight-hour law is being generally disregarded, and they want to see it enforced. The committee will also ask leave to print a circular addressed to the laboring men of the country, asking them to state their grievances. These circulars are to be furnished the members of Congress, with the request that they send them to labor representatives in their several districts. Chairman O'Neil says that this committee will do as much good as any committee of the Forty-ninth Congress.

The recent advance reported in the price of steel rails is expected to cause a corresponding increase in the wages of the members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers of the United States.

An agreement has been entered into, to hold good for six months, between the hatmakers of the United States and the Hatters' Union, by which all the shops are to be under the control of the latter body, subject to certain restrictions which, is is hoped, will prevent strikes. All differences are to be settled by arbitration.

The Rose Valley Cotton Mills, in Delaware County, Pa., destroyed by fire last winter, have been rebuilt, and will go into operation again about the middle of February next, thereby giving employment to over 250 hands.

The stock of print cottons on hand throughout the United States on January 1st, 1885, amounted to 1,111,000 pieces, while at the present time the stock amounts only to 440,000 pieces. At Fall River only three days' product of the mills is on hand, while the quantity sold ahead is computed at some 1,995,000 pieces.

Atcheson, Kan., has a co-operative stove foundry, and a co-operative planing mill is about being started.

Owing to the strike in the Edgar Thompson Steam Works at Braddock, Pa., 3,000 men are idle.

Steps are being taken to bring into one body the various Miners' Unions of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

The operators of the Lawrence Colliery at Fraeville, Pa., have ordered their employees to make all their purchases from a store kept by themselves.

The number of pottery kilns, exclusive of the decorating kilns, in operation in the United States last year, was 276, representing a capital of over $8,000,000. The wages paid during the year aggregated between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000.

The New York Central Labor Union have appointed a committee to confer with the Board of Education of that city regarding the employment of cheap labor in the erection of school buildings.

The strike at the Clerk and Lennox Morocco Factory at Wilmington, Del., has been adjusted through the agency of the Knights of Labor. This strike was in existence four months.

Shorter Hours of Labor.

The increasing amount of attention that is being paid on this continent, and more particularly in the United States, to the labor question is one of the most important signs of the times. The influence of the closer organization of labor and the increasing disposition of the workers to make their power felt in politics, is having a market effect. An eight-hour law has been on the national statute book for some time, making eight hours a day's labor for all employes of the government. But hitherto it has remained practically a dead letter.

President Cleveland has now declared his intention to carry out the law, which he considers "a sound and good one." "It shall be enforced to the letter" is his emphatic declaration, and when he says a thing of this sort he always means it. He intends, too, that the reduction in hours shall not be deprived of its value by a reduction in pay, but that all government employes shall receive a full day's wages for their eight hours work.

This action on the part of the president will greatly strengthen the hands of the labor reformers in their struggle for the general adoption of the eight-hour system. The president, in his utterances upon the subject, shows himself clearly alive to the change wrought in the situation by improvements in machinery and natural discoveries. Where men are continually crowded out of their occupations by improved labor-saving processes no sort of combinations among them can keep up the price of labor. It is only by lessening the supply that the equilibrium between supply and demand can be maintained, and eight hours as a means of decreasing competition among workingmen by making room for those now idle, meets the necessities of the case in a strictly scientific and practical manner.

The organized labor of Canada ought to demand eight-hour laws from both the Dominion and the local governments. Eight hours ought to be made a legal day's labor, and all government laborers put under this rule. There is another, and a kindred reform, which workingmen who are endeavoring to ameliorate the condition of their class as may be, of the contract system for government work, which always operates to cut down wages to the lowest notch. Contractors, figuring to underbid each other, of course endeavor to obtain cheap labor. The system is a direct premium on the employment of underpaid workmen. Governments in this age ought to be ashamed to save money at the expense of the poorest class of citizens, and if the contract system is considered essential, contractors ought to be bound to pay fair wages to their employes, which many of them now do not. Those employers who treat their men fairly have as much interest in this matter as the laborers themselves, for such are at a disadvantage in bidding for government work.

If the workingmen had a few good representatives on the floor of the Dominion and local legislatures their side of these and many other questions could be fairly presented to the public. But while they vote for partisans they must expect no more consideration than they now receive.—News.

Toronto Topics

JANUARY 29.—The afternoon "At Home" at the newly established Reform Club was quite a success, residents and non-residents of Toronto fraternizing in the most pleasant and profitable way, under the management of Sir Richard Cartwright and a reception committee.

Mayor Howland in his crusade against unlicensed whiskey sellers asks the co-operation of the Executive Committee of the Council. His request for funds to assist in compelling observance of the law was tabled, to be taken up at some meeting of the Committee when he is present.

The number of persons out of work is assuming alarming proportions, and it is being swelled by recruits from outside cities.

Dominion Doings.

At Hamilton on Thursday John Boyle, keeper of the Dundurn hotel, was found guilty of selling liquor to a minor.

At Hamilton on Thursday John Cole, a farm laborer, aged 38, hailing from Milton, was duped out of a gold watch, value $50, and $20 in money.

There are five commercial travelers' associations in Canada: Toronto, with a membership of 2300; Montreal, 1500; London, 500; Winnipeg, 150; Halifax, N.S., about 150.

Richard Whitehead, and employe of the Welland Vale works, St. Catharines, was seized with a violent fit of coughing Wednesday evening and died in a few minutes. He had been suffering from a severe cold for about two days.

Seeking Mythical Millions.

Meeting of Heirs of the Alleged English Lawrence-Townley Estate.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 27.—The claimants of the Lawrence-Townley estate, England, to the number of nearly 200, held a meeting here to-day preliminary to a grand assemblage of heirs at Fraternity Hall to-morrow. The alleged heirs are from all parts of North America, about 100 coming from Canada, where the existence of this fabulous $800,000,000 estate is more firmly believed in than in this country, since the publication of Minister Phelp's letter. The heirs have combined to fight for the estate under the name of the Consolidated Lawrence-Townley Association. Vice-Chancellor S. H. Blake, of Toronto, is the association's solicitor, and at to-morrow's meeting he will lay before the heirs supposed proof of the existence of the estate. William Sturgeon Stewart, of Toronto, secretary of the association, says that Lawrence-Townley is a misnomer, and has been the cause of misunderstanding and confusion; that the estate is the Peregrine-Edward-Townley estate, and exists wholly in lands in the neighborhood of Manchester, Durham and Newcastle, and is worth $800,000,000 at a low estimate. Edgar A. Weeks, of this city, attorney for many of the heirs, has withdrawn from the case, as he believes the estate exists only in tradition.

Help Others to get on the Lists.

After newly-enfranchised Liberals have made out their own applications and declarations and have transmitted same to the Revising-officer, they should do all in their power to get other persons put on. In respect of Toronto, send to the Secretary of the Local Reform Association (D. H. Allen, Room V., Young-street Arcade) a list of all your neighbours and neighbours' sons and boarders whom you believe to be qualified, with their addresses. A little activity now will bear splendid fruit hereafter.

Wants a Divorce.

A Canadian Woman Pleads for Divorce in a Michigan Court.

DETROIT, Jan 27.—In 1883 Hannah Workman married a young farmer named Alex. Young. They went to farm at his home, nine miles from Kingston, Ont. In her bill of divorce filed to-day in the Wayne Circuit Court she says that she is the sister of the Rev. Geo. C. Workman, of Victoria College, Cobourg, at one time engaged in ministerial work in Peterborough, and was always accustomed to living in a comfortable and reputable manner. Young, however, she alleges, obliged her to live in a room furnished with only a bed, washstand and chest, and that he fed her on cornmeal and such food, and developed such habits that she could not live with him. That after six months she tried to leave him, but he cruelly treated her and she ran away, but he brought her back. The next day she walked nine miles to Kingston, through slush and mud. Several abscesses, she says, broke out as the result of her ill-treatment.

The resignation of Lord Salisbury's Cabinet is announced.

THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

January Session.

FIFTH DAY—SATURDAY.

The Council met in Committee early in the morning and at 10.30 went into council.

On the reading of the minutes of the previous sitting, Mr. Strickland asked to have the word "nuisance" in his motion to allow the anti saw dust deputation to address the Council, changed to the word "question." This matter he said had been so often referred to as "a nuisance" that the word slipped in inadvertently.

The change was made and the minutes adopted.

12. That the Council grant $50.00 towards finishing the road on the eastern boundary of the County of Peterborough, from the 14th concession of the township of Chandos to the northern boundary, provided the County of Hastings grant a like amount for the same, and the local Legislature grant $100.00 towards the same, and provided Mr. Frank Elmhirst, Reeve of Burleigh, Austruther and Chandos, be deputed to expend such money.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

JOHN MOLONEY, Chairman.

County Council Chamber, Peterborough, Jan 30th, 1886. } Report adopted.

On motion of Mr. Walsh, seconded by Mr. Moore the Committee on Schools reported.

The Committee on Schools beg leave to report as follows:

HAVING A PICTURE TAKEN.

How Some People Sit Before a Photographer's Camera.

"Queer sitters? Hundreds of them," said O. B. de Morat, the photographer, yesterday, repeating a question and answering it. "My greatest trouble with sitters is that they will almost invariably sit as if they had swallowed a ramrod. A man will come in, sit down as stiff as a poker, and say: 'I want my picture taken this way.' I take it that way, and as a matter of course he is dissatisfied. Had he said to me, 'Take it the way you think best,' he would have been sure of a good picture. Very few people know how to assume a proper expression—and really they have no business to assume any expression but a natural one. I like to see business men come in, for they give me very little trouble, having no desire to look better than they are.

It is very funny to see some people trying to look pleasant. One day a philanthropist, whose countenance is as mild as a woman's, and beams with gentleness, wanted to be photographed. His face had a strained look as he sat in the chair, and I told him to assume a more cheerful expression. The poor man screwed up his face in such a manner that he looked like a red-handed murderer. I worked with him for half an hour, and during that time he managed to make himself look ridiculous in a hundred different ways. One moment he looked like an imbecile, the next like a stage villain. I finally got a negative, but nobody would have taken it for the picture of a philanthropist. Now, if he had only looked natural there would have been no trouble at all.

"I don't want to be thought ungallant, but I am forced to acknowledge that the ladies are far more troublesome than men. Nearly all of them want to look sweet and smiling, and in their efforts to do so some of them simper in a way that is almost enough to break the camera; and they all want to look young. That's a woman's weakness. An old lady about 60 called on me one day, and, selecting the photograph of a young and voluptuous actress, said she wanted her picture taken like that. The actress in the picture had on a low-necked dress, and looked charming. 'Do you want it exactly like that?' I asked. 'Yes, sir,' replied the lady with determination. I photographed her and exhibited a proof. 'That's not the kind of a picture I want,' she cried. 'It doesn't look a bit like the one I showed you.' 'But, madam,' I expostulated, 'I can not make a lady of your age look like a young woman of 25.' 'My age!' she screamed; 'my age!' and flounced out, boiling with indignation.

"The ladies have got a neat little dodge now that bothers us a good deal. Say, for instance, that Mrs. X. wants to be photographed. Of two of her favorite dresses she does not know which would look best in the picture. How does she overcome the difficulty? Very nicely. She has her picture taken in one of the dresses. She subsequently calls to look at the proof, and after a cursory glance says it does not suit her. Of course she must sit again. This time she is attired in the other dress. Then she selects whichever picture suits her, and frequently takes the first, after all. The photographer who can get ahead of a woman deserves a monument.

"Ah, the ladies are a queer set. As a rule, a lady does not bring her friends with her when she comes to be photographed. But when she calls to examine the proof she is accompanied by a dozen. Eleven of them will look at the proof and pronounce it charming, but the twelfth—ah, there is the stumbling-block. She looks at it very carefully, gazes at me as if I had robbed her, and then says, in a voice that warns me not to contradict her, that the picture is miserable and does not look at all like her friend. The others take another look, while the twelfth lady calmly points out the imaginary defects, and finally all agree that the picture must be taken over again.

"Country people are frequently amusing. Two very green country girls came to be photographed. While I was taking the negative of one of them the other got very curious and wanted to look into the camera. I told her to go on, and she poked her head under the cloth. One peep was enough. She looked horrified. The lens, you know, reverses the picture on the focusing plate, and she saw her sister upside down. I lost a customer. She said she wouldn't have her picture taken that way, and all my explanations were in vain."

The Museum of St. Petersburg has a bank note, probably the oldest in existence. It is of the Imperial Bank of China, was issued by the Chinese government, and dates from the year 1399 before Christ.

A dry-goods merchant said to me: "I have a young man in my store who has been with me seven years. He has been well trained and understands the business thoroughly. If he was a head tailor I would pay him $20 a month more than I do now. He is too small for a successful dry-goods clerk.

Miscellaneous.

Pineapples, known in most countries of Europe as ananas, are biennial, with the habit of an aloe, and came originally from Brazil. In the center of the foliage rises a stem about two feet high, on the upper part of which are the flowers, crowded in the shape of a conical spike. Pineapples, in a strict botanical sense, are not fruit, but clusters of leaves which undergo wonderful changes just before ripening. The leaves greatly enlarge, enclosing the central stem, bracts, calyx, corolla and ovary, much like a common mulberry, though without seeds. Pineapples are of slow growth, but are quick to ripen. The first ever seen in England were sent as a present to Oliver Cromwell. The largest canning factory for pineapples is at Nassau.

The famous village of totem poles at Wrangel, lies along the beach, the mountains rising high in the rear, with snow on their tops. About a dozen white people live there. There are about 200 native houses or huts. The designs of the totem poles are different. [illegible] they are all of wood, and sometimes the tree or log from which they are made is hollowed out in the back—another tops off with a fish or bear, and humor and gravity are comically intermingled. One of the simplest, and yet most interesting poles, has a bear on the top looking down with a grin, as much as to say, "Here I am, high and dry, and well out of your way." Tracks of the bear are cut in the upright pole—a foot and a half thick—on three sides of it, the toes are pointing up. An Indian grave, built of logs laid up "corn cob houses" fashion, is surmounted by a life-size wooden figure that closely resembles an alligator, although it is a mystery where these Indians got the idea of an alligator.

There is a young man in this city, a good-looking young fellow, who has a sweetheart out in the country a few miles, and he spends two evenings every week in her society. A few nights ago he stayed to the usual hour, and, as he passed out the front door, he discovered that it was cloudy and dark. He did not relish the idea of driving alone through the gloomy night, and hinted about a good deal to get an invitation to remain, but it was not forthcoming. But the young man was equal to the emergency. Going down the steps he artfully contrived to slip and fall gently to the ground. The ruse worked admirably. The girl screamed, the men folks jumped out of bed and carried the young man tenderly into the house. His horse was put up and he was assisted to undress and deposited in the spare chamber He had hardly began to chuckle over the success when the girl's mother put in an appearance, armed with a mustard plaster a foot square and ten-horse drawing power. This she immediately proceeded to clap on the small of the young man's back, where he had incautiously located the damage to his frame. For two mortal hours that woman sat by the bed, and was not satisfied till she beheld with her own eye a blister an inch deep. The young man is now a reformed liar.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, on its MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

TAKING STOCK!

No duty devolving upon the business man is so important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's resetting clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognised duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shown in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out any winter goods left over, at cost.

The Young People's Association of the Murray street Baptist Church gave one of their select musical and literary entertainments last night, in the basement of the church. A varied and well-chosen programme of particular excellence was presented to a delighted audience. Those who failed to attend last evening missed one of the best entertainments given by the association.

Police Court.

John McGowan was brought before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged by P. C. Adams with being drunk and disorderly in a public place. McGowan admitted the charge and pleaded that it was the first offence, and promised, if allowed to go, to mend his ways. The magistrate dismissed him—with a warning.

Thomas Billings was charged by James Telford, a sergeant in the Salvation Army, with disturbing a congregation met for public worship. Telford testified that on Wednesday evening, the 27th instant, he was detailed to keep order on one side of the church. He noticed Billings spitting on the floor and notified him that it was not allowed, and showed him a card prohibiting the practice. Billings refused to obey him. He put his hand on Billings' shoulder and remonstrated with him. Billings told him to take his hand off and invited him out to fight. The defendant spoke loudly and attracted the attention of the assembly. He was in the habit of making disturbances and led the boys, and acted No. 1 blackguard.

Wm. Donnelly was sworn and said he heard Billings and Telford talking, but did not notice any unusual disturbance. Wm. Sloan also saw them talking. He saw Billings spitting. He had noticed Billings act unruly before.

The magistrate remarked that a great number who attended the Salvation Army meetings did not think it improper to spit tobacco on the floor.

Alick Woods, sworn, said he heard Billings and Telford talking. Telford ordered Billings to stop spitting and said he would jerk him out. There was a considerable laughter in the hall, caused by the remark of the captain, who said, "Some straight-faced people would not dance, but if the Lord tickled her toes, she would dance." Telford made as much noise as anyone in the hall, and by his actions made the boys laugh.

John Beach and William Lasher were sworn and testified that they had heard no disturbance.

The magistrate said that the form of worship of the Salvation Army was more noisy than the churches, but he was pretty well convinced that there were those who did disturb the meetings. The meetings were of such a character that the actions of the members did not call for the same respect as the churches. The girl's saying was likely to have caused laughter. He did not think the defendant caused any disturbance that would bring him under the law. Much depended upon the person who kept order. The habit of spitting tobacco was beastly, but those who put the stuff in their mouths did not see much impropriety in spitting on the floor. They either had to swallow it or spit. He did not think the conduct of Billings would bring him under the statute. If parties could not go there without disturbing the meeting they should stay away. He would punish severely when the evidence brought the charge home. The Salvation Army were all right, if their methods of worship were peculiar. He would punish severely any whom he found guilty of disturbing the meetings. The charge against Billings was dismissed.

Disastrous Fire in Glasgow.

GLASGOW, Jan. 28.—Templeton's carpet factory in this city was burned to-day. Loss, $150,000. Three hundred workmen are thrown out of employment.

Wheat in Illinois.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—A special from Springfield, Ill., says the forthcoming report of the state agricultural department on the amount of wheat raised and consumed during the year 1885, will show a condition of affairs not known to exist for the past twenty-five years, there being a deficit in the crop of 5,000,000 bushel. The acreage harvested was 1,068,364; the amount annually reserved for seed and consumption is 13,759,029 bushels, but the amount produced was 8,299,243 bushels.

"El Padre" Cigars.

Universally acknowledged to be the finest 5c cigar manufactured. Don't be persuaded to take other brands. No chemicals or artificial flavoring used.

At the Toronto criminal assizes Geo. M. Bingham, formerly ticket agent at the Northern Railway office and who was arrested in Detroit, was found guilty of forgery in altering a receipt for ticket sales from $11 to $41.

A Perrytown Mystery.

A few days ago a fine black horse was found tied to a fence behind a clump of cedar bushes at the side of the road about a mile south of Perrytown. The animal was dead. Its throat had been cut and the halter and bridle was left on the dead beast. Its legs were covered with mud. It had evidently lain there since the deep fall of snow. It was completely covered with snow. Some suppose the body of a man will be found in the vicinity when the snow melts in the spring. No one in the neighborhood can identify the horse.—Guide.

CLANDESTINE MARRIAGES.

Talmage's Sunday Discourse on the Marriage Ring.

Elopement Means Eternal Ruin—Satan's Genius for Getting People into Trouble Stop These Meetings

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Notwithstanding the inclement weather the Brooklyn Tabernacle was crowded yesterday. Dr. Talmage preached the third of his course of sermons on "The Marriage Ring," and dealt with the evils of clandestine marriages. In part, he said:

The Garden of Eden was a great orchard of fruit-bearing trees, covered with large, round, ripe fruit, bushel upon bushels and the horticulturist and his wife who had charge of the place got a hankering for the fruit of one tree simply because it was forbidden to be touched. Solomon discovered this principle in human nature and the disastrous result of it when he says in his text: "Stolen waters are sweet and bread eaten in secret is pleasant. But he knoweth not that the dead are there." I want this morning to show up clandestine marriages and escapades. That ship coming up the Narrows to New York harbour has on it all the evidences of a tempestuous passage. The salt water marks appear from the top of the smokestack down and all the pumps are working to keep the ship from sinking before she gets a wharfage. So it is with which God launched in the Euphrates. It has been assailed on the one side by freeloviam and by Mormonism on the other side, and the hurricane of libertinism has struck it on all sides, until the old ship needs repairs in every plank, bolt, and spar. In other words, the opinion of modern society must be re-constructed on the subject of the marriage institution. New England, by many considered the most moral part of this country, has 2,000 divorces a year. Massachusetts the headquarters of steady habits, has one divorce for every fourteen marriages. The State of Maine, by many supposed to be very high in propriety, has 478 divorces in a year. In Connecticut there are women who boast that they have been divorced three or four times. Protestantism is worse in this respect than Roman Catholicism. Protestantism has anything and everything for an excuse for divorce, while Catholicism has only the excuse that Christ admitted. In proportion as Protestants are numerous in a community divorce is prominent. I have all these facts substantiated, and I ask you, with such a condition,

DOESN'T PROTESTANTISM NEED SOME TONING UP?

Aye, this divine institution of marriage is being destroyed by clandestine marriages and escapades. I admit that there are cases that are justified. There are parents who are monomaniacs on the subject, who will prevent unions that are all right. There are parents with such absurd family ambition as to render any other means than a clandestine marriage simply impossible. If the one chosen for a life partner has good morals, has means of support, social position—the parents have no right to prevent a marriage union if it seems a matter of the heart. I have known a few cases where clandestine marriage has had the blessing of God, but I here declare that ninety-nine out of a hundred—aye, nine hundred and ninety-nine out of a thousand—of all clandestine marriages and escapades mean

RUIN IN THIS LIFE AND RUIN FOREVER.

Satan presides over their escapade; he introduces the two parties, gets them to plight their troth, buys their railroad tickets, puts them on board of the express train, and when they are going forty miles an hour he leaves them in the lurch, for while Satan has great genius for getting people into trouble, he has no genius for getting them out.

I think the modern novel has much to do with many elopements. Would a young woman sit up half the night reading an ordinary case where the parents freely gave their consent? No! No! The story must be freely filled with narrow escapes, ending in sunshine and parental forgiveness. If a man be able to support a wife there is no temptation for an escapade. There are many men who are as happy as princes on $3 a day, but he should not marry a woman brought up in a twenty thousand dollar home. This almost always has this history:—First year, they are happy because it is odd, romantic; second year, they settle down into perfect dislike of each other; third year, they apply for divorce, or more probable, the man becomes a drunkard and the woman a prostitute. Clandestine change of single for married life is to be deplored because it is almost always in defiance of mental wisdom and forethought. Most parents are wrapped up in the welfare of the child respecting the hopes of the married union. But yet there are those who scoff at the protests on the part of parents and who don't realise that parents have a keener appreciation of the demolition that comes from alcohol in the young man. They don't realise that parents have a keener appreciation of a man who stands with his hands in his pockets while his wife supports him. If a husband becomes invalid it is beautful to see a wife with the needle, pen, washing machine, supporting him. A fugitive marriage is also to be deplored,

BECAUSE IT IS BASED ON DECEPTION.

You must deceive everybody but God, and Him you cannot deceive. If there is objection to your marriage wait until circumstance change; wait for time to remove the obstacles. The young man's habits may change; he may get into some worthy occupation. Inexorable parents may be transported to celestial citizenship. (Laughter.) Wait until the right time comes.

In view of all this, I charge you, if you are engaged in clandestine correspondence to quit. If you make clandestine meetings at ferries, skating rinks, or at the house of a mutual friend,

STOP THESE MEETINGS.

Don't have letters come to you under assumed names at the postoffice. Don't use terms of endearment at beginnings and endings of letters. Engage in no correspondence which makes you nervous lest some one by mistake should open your letters. Take your mother into your confidence; she can give you more advice in five minutes than you can otherwise get in five years.

TO DEPOSITORS—Deposits are received by this Company both on current account and for periods of one year or longer. The rate of interest paid on amounts deposited on current account and which may be withdrawn by check in such sums as the depositor may from time to time require, is FOUR per cent., either paid or compounded half-yearly, and the rate on yearly deposits is FIVE per cent.

TO INVESTORS—The five and ten year FIVE PER CENT DEBENTURES of this Company which are issued in denominations of $100, $200, $300 and $1000 each, transferable by endorsement, with half-yearly interest Coupons attached, payable at the Head Office of the Company in Peterborough, or at any Branch of the Bank of Toronto in Canada, afford a safe and convenient mode of investment.

The funds of the Company being invested in first mortgages on Real Estate, no better security can be offered to depositors or debenture-holders, they having a first claim or mortgage on the whole Assets of the Company, the shareholders having the second. The annual statement shows that the amount so invested was over $800,000, and on the security of real estate at least double that value.

By the laws of Ontario, Trustees, Executors and Administrators may deposit Trust Funds of the estates which they control in this Company, and are free from all further liability, a privilege of which many have largely availed themselves.

TO BORROWERS—Money is obtainable from this Company on approved Real Estate security at the Lowest Current Rates of Interest.

The Mortgage may be repaid by yearly instalments, or otherwise as may be agreed upon, the interest ceasing at once on all amounts paid on account of the sum borrowed.

Applications may be made either to the Head Office, or to any of the Agents.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

A Commendable Policy.

We have been told that Mr. Blake's speech lacked the necessary essential of a definite policy. Those Tories who are unable to see a very clear exposition of the principles guiding the leader of the Opposition, as set forth in his London speech, must be blind indeed. That speech made the Liberal platform, and it is broad enough for all to stand on it. It is divided into two distinct parts, namely, general issues, and the special issues connected with the Northwest rebellion. The principles of the former are:

1. Wise readjustment of taxation, judicious relaxation of onerous duties, and honesty, economy and retrenchment in government.
2. The encouragement of inter-Provincial trade.
3. Reciprocity with the United States.
4. A change in the policy of assisted immigration.
5. The right to negotiate our own commercial and judicial treaties.
6. Reform in the present system of granting Provincial subsidies.
7. A senate elected and responsible to the people.
8. Repeal of the Gerrymander Act.
9. Repeal of the Dominion Franchise Act.
10. To impose checks upon the systematic violation of the independence of members of Parliament by the executive.
11. Maintenance of Provincial rights and the application of a policy of decentralization.

The principles in connection with the Northwest are as follows:—

1. That the present Government in the general dealings with the Northwest manifested the most scandalous procrastination, neglect, delay, incapacity, bungling and mismanagement.
2. That it neglected to settle the half-breeds' claims till the rebellion broke out and it then issued a commission.
3. That the Tory press has been fomenting a war of races and creed to obscure the real issue.
4. That the execution of Riel is a subject for Parliamentary discussion and also the charge by Government supporters that they were misled into believing he would not be executed.
5. That the Government should immediately, without delay, deal with the sentences of the halfbreeds in a large and merciful spirit.
6. That party divisions must be upon the questions of public policy, and not of race and creed.
7. That the Government should explain why it tried Riel for a political offence instead of murder, if it originally intended to execute the sentence?
8. That as Judge Richardson, who tried Riel, was the paid legal adviser, the political law officer of the Government, and a member of the Northwest Council, the Government should explain its reasons for such a choice, in selecting a judge to try Riel.
9. That the reason for the last repite of Riel's sentence should be forthcoming.
10. That the Liberals will welcome accessions to their ranks from Quebec of those independent Bleus who are in substantial agreement with the principles of the Liberal party.

In working out and enforcing the principles laid down in these two platforms Mr. Blake and the Liberal party have an ample field before them. It is a great pity for the welfare of the country that at present the opportunity cannot be afforded to put them into practice.

The "Three Acres and a Cow."

The allotment question upon which the Salisbury government was defeated, was an issue of first-class political importance, and one calamitous to the Tories. It was the allotment issue which drove the Tory counties over to the Liberals with astonishing swing, which in two or three days polling redeemed all the Liberal losses during a week's contest in the boroughs. As a piece of party stratagey, it was absolutely without a drawback to the Liberals, and should an immediate dissolution be forced by the Queen, and an appeal to the constituencies made, the Liberal candidates go back to the rural voters with buoyant spirits. In the counties the land reform cry will subordinate the Irish issue altogether, whereas in the boroughs the Irish vote will swing a host of seats around to the Liberals, as in the recent general election, it swung them the other way. The Tories made merry over canard, but it is a vote upon the only proposal which embodies any foundation for the canard that they have been defeated. As a tactician Lord Salisbury has blundered in a manner which his party will rue for years.

"THE THREE ACRES AND A COW"

This land allotment scheme of Mr. Jesse Collings, is one which is dear to the agricultural laborer's heart; and when the arguments in its favor are studied no doubt remains upon the wherefore. One eminent medical authority declares that in Leicestershire—a rural county—he found that two-thirds of the laborers' children were dying for want of milk. Actually dying in a dairy country for want of a milk diet! And why! Because the laborer was allowed no land upon which to keep a cow—the commons which a century ago covered millions of acres, have in the intervening period been nearly all [illegible] claimed by titled land thieves and [illegible]ors, upon one pretence or another—and the laborer's wages were too small to permit of his buying milk for his family. The scheme proposed by Collings and endorsed during the election by Joseph Chamberlain and now by Gladstone himself, is that compulsory powers shall be granted for for allotment purposes, and that a man receives an allotment at a fair rent and on the condition that he cultivates it.

This proposal is "an invasion of the sacred rights of property," will be exclaimed, but the truth is that some of the so-called rights of property are an invasion of the principal right of man, the right to live! [illegible] Tuesday night and, compulsion has nothing in the nature of it that should make us shrink from enacting it." All governments have long recognized the right to expropriate lands for public purposes! What difference is there in the principle by which a railway company is empowered to expropriate lands for its purposes at a valuation to be determined judicially, and that of legally established local boards acquiring lands for allotment purposes at a fair valuation to be determined judicially? None! Both are defensible because they are in the interests of the community as a whole.

The idea of the allotment scheme is not necessarily to give the laborer a from which he can draw all his sustenance, as it is to afford him the means whereby he can grow garden stuff, keep a cow, and supplement his wages. It is in this aspect really a proposal in the interests of the farmer. It will make his laborer more attached to the soil—it will permit his working at moderate wages, without drawing excessively from the earnings of the farm—and it will give hime that increased comfort which means improved standard of education, intelligence, and prosperity. Viewed all round, the allotment scheme promises a distinct gain to the national prosperity.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[The publisher of THE EXAMINER does not hold himself responsible for the facts asserted, nor the opinions expressed by correspondents.]

"Hydrophobia."

To the Editor of the DAILY EXAMINER:

Being a reader of your valuable paper, I notice in the same from your Lakefield correspondent the following notice. An article. "Hydrophobia scare has reached the village and one of the city fathers has given notice of motion of his intention to introduce a By-law imposing a dog tax." Such is not the case, however, I would advise your correspondent not to rush into print till he has a better article than Hydrophobia. He speaks as if the object of the tax was for revenue. But having so many curs snapping at people's heels and being requested as a member of the council to bring before them the nuisance of such grievance, I, in my place, neither thought it any shame or disgrace to do so. So much for that part. When the Scott Act come, in force in this lovely little village, the village of Lakefield will probably respect it with as much good friendship as any other municipality in the county.

Your correspondent does not see too many dogs in the village. The writer of this article saw no less than 8 curs to-day on Queen street after one horse, and it occurred to his mind to reply about dogs. About his supposed cow grievance it is scarcely worth notice, not being a grievance—yet the writer of this don't intend to be able to cope with a giant or a great professor about ladies and children. They have not been much annoyed yet. The writer would rather have cow farming than dog farming, and baby farming is quite necessary sometimes. But Lakefield council do not propose to go into any of these kinds of farming. Hoping Mr. Editor, you will give this publication.

Terrible Assassination!!!

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

Dear Sir,—The meanest, most cowardly, and most contemptible kind of assassination is, stabbing a man in the dark. Now that is what Agents of the old line, high priced, Insurance Companies are doing to injure the fair fame of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association, the most successful institution on the Continent. Such is the enormous wealth of these old companies, that they can afford to subsidize all the journals, financial and otherwise, in the country to circulate their malicious slander, under the cover of paid locals. When I write an article, I am not ashamed of it nor of the Company I represent. I am prepared to meet my traducers in the columns of the public press, on any subject pertaining to Life Insurance, and give them all the light they want, provided they sign their names. This is the second time I have made this request in your valuable paper.

Yours Truly,
GEO. A. MORRISON,
Agent of Mutual Reserve.

The King of Greece Tired.

The German Minister of War has ordered the training of a number of dogs to be used as night sentinels.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29th.

Mr. Geo. D. Hawley, member for Lennox, was introduced to the House by Hon. C. F. Fraser and Hon. James Young.

Mr. Robert Ferguson, member for Kent, was introduced by Hon. A. M. Ross and Mr. Balfour.

The debate on the address was opened by Mr. Hawley, of Lennox, in a capital, calmly delivered speech.

Mr. Commee, of West Algoma, seconded the address, and spoke with great force and vigor, chiefly on the boundary question, which, from the circumstances, is, to him [illegible] gave a glowing picture of the vast resources of the Algoma district and after castigating the Opposition for their unpatriotic course in joining hands with Sir John Macdonald to deprive the Province of Ontario of this territory, closed by asserting that the present Government would be equal to assisting in its development.

Mr. Meredith began his address with a protest against the discussion of dead issues. The said dead issues he apparently conceived to be the Boundary case and the License question. As to the first he evidently forgets that the Dominion Government has not yet signified its acceptance of the Privy Council's decision. As to the last the triumph of the Province is so recent and the issues involved so important that Mr. Meredith surely would not deny the right of the Legislature to congratulate itself thereon.

Hon. Mr. Mowat followed the Opposition Leader, speaking in his best vein and exposing the fallacy of very many of Mr. Meredith's contentions in a manner much enjoyed by the House. He pointed out that the Government had long been opposed to a system of assisted immigration; that that system is the recognized policy of the Dominion Government; that, although immigrants were not assisted, still expenditure had been necessary in connection with the securing of desirable immigrants, and that up to the present it had been undeniably necessary to employ immigration officials, This is an incontrovertible statement of the position. Assisted immigration has not been the policy of the Ontario Government, but to argue from that fact that all expenditure on immigration has been unjustifiable is obviously absurd.

Mr. Mowat denied the statement of Mr. Meredith that the Torrens Lands Act is not giving the measure of success that was anticipated, but that, on the contrary, those who had taken advantage of the provisions of the Act were entirely satisfied. He easily disposed of Mr. Meredith's shallow defence of the discredited constitutional authority. He showed that in the Insurance case, the Escheats case, and the Rivers and Streams Bills case, the Dominion Premier adopted the cause of the defeated contestants, and therefore must share in their defeat. He showed also that Sir John Macdonald was wholly responsible for the license controversy, and could not escape the humiliation it has brought upon him. He also took occasion to arraign Mr. Meredith for his unfailing, untiring sympathy with Sir John Macdonald as against Ontario, and to point out that in every struggle for the rights of the Province the Government had had the active hostility of Mr. Meredith and his whole following the Legislature.

The Government were anxious to close the debate on the Address to-day, but could not secure the assent of the Opposition. Mr. Morris moved the adjournment of the debate, and will therefore have the floor when the House reassembles on Monday.

COUNTY COUNCIL COMMENTS.

The County Council, which closed its session on Saturday morning, is a body of rather extensive representative character, its constituency embracing a total population of nearly thirty-five thousand souls. Therefore its deliberations demand some little notice. During the five days that composed the late session the members applied themselves pretty diligently to business, and among the legislation effected there is room for both commendation and blame. Some of the actions of the council were not characterized by that breadth of view that should be exhibited by so important a representative body.

The refusal of the County to make a grant to the West Riding Agricultural Society, was an action certainly not in the interests of the constituency they represent. It is singular that a body composed of fifteen-seventeenths of farmers, could be so short-sighted as to overlook the interests of themselves and their constituents. It was shown that the West Riding Agricultural Society gave in prizes to the farmers ninety per cent. of the entire prize list of the last exhibition. To this sum the farmers themselves contributed only the insignificant amount, with one or two exceptions, represented by their membership fees. It is not probable that the action taken will secure the members who opposed the grant any increase in favour in the eyes of the farmers. No person with self-respect is willing to receive favours without some equivalent, and we do not think the farmers of this county would object to giving a substantial grant to the society which is maintained chiefly in their interest and of which they receive 90 per cent of the advantage.

Another remarkable piece of illiberality is the refusal of grants to the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Norwood High Schools. Here is another case in which the council has placed the county in the position of reaping the largest share of benefit from these institutions without contributing thereto a dollar. Over sixty per cent. of the pupils of the Peterborough School is from the rural districts, and the vast majority of the latter are fitting themselves for the teaching profession, with the object of supplying rural schools with teachers. So that not only are the young persons of the County educated, but the County is supplied with teachers in a school to which the representatives of the people refuse to contribute a single cent to maintain. This is not equitable nor fair, nor strictly honest, regarded in the broadest sense.

Now that the Scott Act has been adopted by a large majority, the Council took the ground that it should be given a fair trial, and consequently took measures with a view to its enforcement. The Scott Act Association must acknowledge, in this connection, the assistance given them by Mr. Mansfield, of Galway, and Mr. Fitzgerald, deputy-reeve of Smith, and other gentlemen. Mr. Strickland's move to secure the appointment of Mr. Golborne as the police magistrate, was hardly in keeping with his professed anxiety to see the Act enforced. His appointee would most certainly not have been in the interests of the enforcement of the Act. Mr. Mansfield took the correct position in moving that the appointment of a police magistrate be made by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council on the recommendation of the Scott Act Association. He contended that these gentlemen had carried the Act and the people looked to them to enforce it, and if they were hampered in the commencement, it was hardly the fair thing. He was personally opposed to the Act, but now that it had been carried, he was not going to handicap its supporters by placing a man in the position of police magistrate whom he doubted very much would be satisfactory to the Scott Act people.

The union of South Monaghan with the County of Peterborough is a matter of the gravest importance to both town and county, and it is to be hoped that no effort will be spared to bring about so desirable a consummation. It will be noticed in the discussion of the subject before the council that it was brought out that there is something for the town to do, and Peterborough's enterprise has always proved equal to the proper action in any emergency involving her progress and improvement.

Mr. Strickland, Reeve of Lakefield, generally takes a prominent position in the deliberations of the Council, but this session he seems to have excelled himself in securing prominence and, so unobtrusively brought to the surface his desire to make political capital, that he was unmercifully sat on. His desire to get a "slap" at the Ontario Government, was so great that he did not hesitate to propose a course of action that would have involved the County in ruinous expense. If his motion respecting colonization road expenditure had been adopted, it would have resulted in the necessity of making thousands of dollars of grants to back country roads. How would the reeves of the older townships relish the idea of giving an eqivalent of $1500 for roads in Burleigh, and a proportionate amount for other townships?

The buncombe resolution of Mr. Strickland, respecting the Northwest rebellion and the endorsation of the course of the Dominion Government for the hanging of Riel, was more outrageously partizan than the former attempt, and received as summary a snubbing. With the first part of the resolution we can heartily agree, but Riel was not hanged for the murder of Scott—on the other hand Sir John rewarded him for that by a large money present. Mr. Moloney expressed the opinion that Mr. Mansfield's action, relegating the motion to the village council of Lakefield, was a proper disposal of so gratuitously offensive a specimen of political buncombe.

If Mr. Strickland desires to air his political opinions and strengthen his political position in view of future designs on the East Riding, let him begin at home. If the Lakefield Council chooses to submit to it, that is its affair. But the County Council, of a fairly divided political complexion, is, as the ambitious reeve of Lakefield has found out to his humiliation, the wrong audience to be entertained by the "whistling of party tunes," and the political ambition that strives to hew stepping stones for itself out of material, purloined from a municipal body, must be blind if it cannot read the decided lesson set at the last session of the County Council of Peterborough.

A Great Statesman on Imperial Federation.

SIR JOHN MACDONALD at Horticultural Pavillion, Toronto, Nov. 23, 1881:—

"Imperial Federation is utterly impracticable. (Applause). We could never agree to send a number of men over to England to sin in Parliament there and vote away our rights and privileges. I am, as far as this question goes, up to the handle a Home Ruler. (Applause.) We will put on the taxes ourselves. If we choose to misgovern ourselves we will do so—(laughter) and we do not desire England, Ireland or Scotland to tell us we are fools. (Laughter.) We will say, if we are fools, we will keep our folly to ourselves. You will not be the worse for it, and we will not be the worse for the folly of yours." (Cheers.)

SIR JOHN MACDONALD at St. George's Club, London, Eng., Jan. 4, 1885:—

"With regard to the question of Imperial Federation he fully agreed that there must be Imperial Federation. He believed that as the auxiliary nations of Australia and Canada and South Africa increased, the present relations, comfortable and pleasant as they were, could not remain permanently fixed. As those auxiliary nations must increase in wealth and in population, so they must increase in responsibilities, and speaking for the Dominion of Canada, he might say they were ready to increase the responsibilities, they were ready to join the Mother Country in her offensive and defensive league, to sacrifice their last man and their last shilling in defence of the Empire and the flag of England." (Cheers).

Fraserville.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A grand concert was given in connection with the Foot Ball Club on Wednesday evening, January 27th, in Fraserville hall. It was well attended, and all were pleased with the exceptionally good programme presented.

The members of L. O. L. No. 46 intend having a series of concerts in their hall during the winter months.

The Methodist folks, at Fraserville appointment, intend making some necessary changes on their church, by way of a main entrance, tower, etc.

It is said that Centreville concert, to be held on Friday, February 5th, in connection with the Agricultural Society of South Monaghan, will be the concert of the season.

Both of the village merchant have opened out a full feather, and believe me "friends" great bargains will be realized, as both men are alive to business and thoroughly posted as to the wants of the people.

Mr. Alex. Lackie is postmaster here.

At a written examination held in Cairo School on Friday, January 29th, the following is the result:—3rd class examination in Geography, was Province of Ontario (minutely), taking counties, cities, town and villages with over 600 population; also railways, 150 marks obtainable. Minnie Clarke 142, Bessie Goodfellow 104 James Steers 100, Robt. Hollovan, 97, Maude Laing 94.

5th class examination in arithemic,—James Laing 1st, Hannah Campbell and Lena Emerson (2) equal, Ada Rae 3rd.

No. 2 second class,—Fred Goodfellow 1st, Harold Baptie 2nd, Maude Bothwell 3rd. Attendance 44.

At the poultry exhibition held in the city of Ottawa during the last week of January, Mr. James Baptie of Springville carried off the highest number of prizes awarded to any one individual. His poultry being far the grandest on exhibition. He was awarded fifteen 1st prizes, twelve seconds and 3 thirds; also three special prizes as follows:—One for finest Duck, another for best Hamburg and the other for best collection. Mr. Baptie must be congratulated on his great success, and the rank he has attined to amongst the poultry exhibitors of Ontario. The question asked at all poultry exhibitions is, "Has Baptie of Springville any birds here? if so he'll take the cake."

We hear Jim is still Grit. A Springville correspondent intimated he possibly might turn Tory. I guess there is too much luck for Jim and he mill remain Grit a while longer.

ANOTHER REMARKABLE TESTIMONIAL.

Consumption Cured in the Last Stage.

Captain William Walker, No. 37 Granville St., Halifax, N. S.

N. Washington, M. D., Throat and Lung Specialist, Toronto:

Dear Sir,—When you visited me in the latter part of January of this year, I had been given up to die of consumption by a consultation of Physicians, who considered that my recovery was simply impossible. I had no hope myself, nor had my family. When you expressed a hope of my recovery it was received with doubt. Confined to my bed, very low, weak, wasted, night sweats very bad, troublesome cough, raising large quantities of matter, in fact every appearance of a speedy death. After using your Respirator and Spirometer and medicines, I began to recover very fast, so much so that during three hard winter months I have gained from 20 to 25 lbs, and was able to walk out on Easter Sunday. My strenth is daily increasing, and I shall be able soon to be at work. To you I owe a deep sense of gratitude, and am anxious for others who are suffering as I was to consult you. You can make what use of this letter you see fit, and thanking you for what I consider a most wonderful treatment,

I remain, yours truly,
CAPT. WM. SALTER

A WAR REMINISCENCE.

A rather interesting story of the war was told by Joseph R. Perry, at the national convention of soldiers, which was held in Indianapolis last summer; but, as the reports of the session were necessarily abridged, it escaped publication at the time.

"It was sometime in the summer of 1861," Mr. Perry said, "that the 21st Ohio regiment was down in West Virginia, in the Kanawha river region. The regiment was composed of men gathered up promiscuously in the Black swamp region of Ohio. There were one or two companies of gray-haired men, too old to bear arms, who had gone into the service to fight for a principle—not merely to put down the rebellion, but to emancipate the slaves. They were very religious, and they would hold prayer-meetings at night. They would pray for the freedom of the slaves, and that the negroes might have equal rights with the white people. Their prayers were very interesting to us young fellows who would go there to listen to them, because they were asking for something more than the issue of the war promised at that time, but everything that those old fellows asked in their prayers came about afterward, and it is out of those results that this incident I'm telling you about came to a conclusion. We camped one day near a little town called Red Bank, on the Kanawha, and after our coffee had been prepared we found that we hadn't a spoonful of sugar in camp. There were a lot of negro cabins over on a hill opposite our camp, and I agreed to go over and try to get some sugar from the negroes. There was but 13 cents in money in the whole camp, but I took that and started over with a tin can to get the sugar. I entered one of the cabins and found a buxom negro woman with two little pickaninnies hanging to her linsey dress. They drew off into a corner of the cabin, half frightened when I went in, but I told them that they needn't be afraid; that I only wanted to get some sugar, and that I had the money to pay for it.'

"'I'se kindy feared o' you 'uns,' said the negro woman; 'mastah told me not to have anything to do with you Yankees, 'cause you'se gwine to take us off to Cuby and sell us to get money to carry on the wah.'

"'My good woman,' I said to her, giving her a little blarney, because I wanted the sugar, "you don't understand what this war is about. We Yankees are fighting for you, and if this war comes out the way we want it to, you will be free, and you won't have any master, and will have all the rights that white people have. Your little boy there will be sent to school, and he will have just as good a chance to become governor of Virginia as any white boy.'

"'Fo' de Lord, you don't say so!' she exclaimed.

"I went on to tell her then that the black people were just as good as the white, and how they would be benefited if we were victorious. Before I quit talking she brought out an old can and gave me what sugar I wanted. She didn't want to take the money, but I told her that she'd better, and she accepted it. It was only an incident of the day, and after I told the boys in camp how I got the sugar I thought no more about the the matter. I had forgotten it entirely until about three years ago, when I was returning from the city hospital one night, when the car stopped for an old negro woman with a basket of clothes. I was sitting near the door, and helped her to lift the basket into the car. She sat down beside me, and remarked: 'Mighty cold to-night. Don't have any such weather down whar' my ole home is.'

"'Where was your old home?' I inquired.

"'At the little town of Red Bank, down on the Kanawha river, in Wes' Virginyah.'

"'Did you live in a little cabin, with a well beside it, and opposite a big white house?' I asked her.

"'Right dar was whar I lived.'

"'And do you remember when the Yankee soldiers camped over in the meadow, near your cabin?'

"'Deed I do, sir. I remember that mighty well.'

"'Do you remember a young soldier with a brass horn strapped to his shoulder and a small sword at his side, coming over to your cabin to buy some sugar?'

"'I should say I do. I remembers dat young man mighty well. He spoke the first good words I ever heard said about the colored people. He told me that I was to be free, and that my little boy might be president some day. Why, he gave me 13 cents. I kept that money ever since for luck, and I've got it right here!' and the old woman drew from her bosom a small, dirty purse, from which she took the coins that I had given her twenty years before.

"'Do you think you would know that young fellow if you should ever see him again?'

"'Deed I would. I'd know that young man the minute I set eyes on him.'

"'Well, auntie, I'm that young man.'

"'For de Lord's sake, honey!' she exclaimed, and threw her arms about me. It was doubtless a funny scene to the passengers in the car, but her demonstrations made it a little embarrassing and a trifle unpleasant for me. I learned afterward that the woman's husband was a carpenter here in the city, and that they were moderately prosperous."—Indianapolis Journal.

Clock-Mending Tramps.

"All the old lays are played out and it takes an artist to live fat like we used to. I really believe the chickens roost higher than they did in the good old days. Oh times is getting awful!" The fellow retired to a cave of gloom, metaphorically speaking, as he gave way to the flood of memories of the time before tramp business had been prostrated by overproduction. "A man has to either steal or work some fake, like mending umbrellas or mending chiney—that's about as handy as any.

"Oh, there ain't much to it. All a man's got to carry is some samples, which must be straight, and some Persian cement—glue, water, or anything to hold the dishes together till the man gets out of the neighborhood. You tie up the dishes with string and tell 'em they must let 'em alone at least twenty-four hours to dry, which gives you time to skip. I run out of glue water once and I cemented my dishes with molasses, which I got out of a farmer's pantry. It was pretty much the same.

"Cleaning clocks is another good fake, only it has been worked to death. One of us goes ahead and tinkers up the clock, taking it partially to pieces, tickling it up with a feather, and anointing it with ile or lard or something. I always, when I'm on the tramp, carry boa constrictor ile or yak ile for the purpose. It's coal ile or lard, just as it happens. When I come to put it together if I don't know exactly where all the wheels go I do the best I know how, and if there is any overflow of wheels with holes to put 'em in, as is usually the case, I just quietly slip 'em into my pocket. I then hand-spike the hands ahead a half hour and tell the folks it is unhealthy to turn them back and that they had better wait until the time comes pointed by the clock before they start it running. This saves disarrangin' the innards, I tells 'em. That half hour lets me out, and I goes if the clock don't."—Erie Dispatch.

Dr. R. J. Gatling, of Hartford, who invented the famous Gatling gun, is a stout man with a chubby face and a stubby gray beard. His eyes are small and squinty, requiring the use of strong lenses to aid them. The doctor is an enthusiast on the subject of building up the defenses of America.

A lady in Athens, the mother of a large family of interesting children, has never struck one a blow in anger. When a child does wrong she keeps a bottle of castor-oil and rhubarb on the mantel and at once forces the culprit to take a dose of the mixture.—Columbus (Ga.) Enquirer.

A Princeton, N. J., druggist who recently poisoned a young man by giving him the wrong prescription evinced great sorrow for his mistake and offered to make reparation to the father of his victim by letting him poison his son. This was fair, but the offer was not accepted.—N. Y. Graphic.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to every one out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

TAKING STOCK!

No duty devolving upon the business man is so important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's repeating clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognized duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shown in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out [illegible] at cost

Musical.

We have been requested to publish the following from the Perth Courier:—"We are authorized to state that the choir of the Catholic Church intend to give a vocal and instrumental concert in the Town Hall, Perth, on the evening of St. Patrick's Day, March 17, prox., and that in addition to the local talent available, they hope for the assistance of musical friends from other quarters, to help them in their effort to contribute to the fund that will be required to meet the expenses of contemplated repairs to their Parish Church, the coming summer."

Another Free Tea and Entertainment.

The annual tea in connection with the Charlotte Street Methodist Church has been postponed from Tuesday to Friday evening next, when tea will be served in the church from 6 to 8 o'clock by the ladies of the congregation. After tea the annual reports and the financial statement of the church will be made. The remainder of the evening will be occupied with vocal and instrumental music, etc. There will be no admission fee, nor will there be any collection or subscription asked. A full representation of the congregation is expected.

Bound to Become Crack Curlers.

The rink of junior curlers who went to Lakefield on Saturday and engaged in a game with the Lakefield boys, succeeded in defeating their opponents by one shot. The following are the contestants and the scores made:

LAKEFIELD.	PETERBOROUGH.
Allen Bell,	Geo. Boucher,

Phil. Alcombrac,	V. Halliday,

Victory for Peterborough boys, 1 shot.

The boys are bound to become crack curlers and believe in persistent practice. They should try a whack at the Lindsay juniors.

"Irish Aristocracy."

Gibson & Ryan, the famous Irish comedians, will appear in Bradburn's Opera House on Thursday, Feb. 4th, in Barry & Fay's "Irish Aristocracy." The New York Morning Journal, in speaking of the performance of the play by this company, says:—"Gibson and Ryan, two clever performers, began a short engagement at the Theatre Comique, Harlem, last night in Barry & Fay's most pronounced farcical success, 'Irish Aristocracy,' a piece which has heretofore been performed under the title of 'Muldoon's Picnic.' The farce is intensely amusing and very well suited to the capabilities of the company engaged in illustrating the roaring, rollicking and boisterous situations and incidents with which it abounds. Gibson and Ryan, the stars, are well fitted in the parts they undertake, and the representation as a whole is all that could be desired."

Sudden Death.

We regret to record the sudden and unexpected death of Mr. George Tanner, of Lakefield, formerly a resident of Peterborough. Recent unfortunate events, and their result, preyed upon his mind to such an extent that his health became undermined, and serious illness supervened. He had been confined to his room for some time, but on Saturday last there were apparent indications of an improvement in his condition. After taking his medicine at the hands of his wife at about 11 o'clock the latter, encouraged by what appeared to be symptoms of improvement, took advantage of his being in a sound sleep to snatch a little rest. A little later her attention was attracted to the patient who had turned to his side, and had opened his eyes and closed them again. This the wife regarded as an indication of his returning to his natural sleep. But on approaching the bed about two o'clock and placing her hand on Mr. Tanner's forehead, it was cold and clammy. The physician was at once sent for, but on his arrival he pronounced the patient dead. The funeral will take place from the family residence, Queen street, Lakefield, on Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock, to the Little Lake Cemetery, Peterborough.

The slide is in prime condition, and some fine sport is expected. All members of the club, and full members of the association are requested to be present.

Lakefield Tea Meeting.

The annual tea in connection with the Lakefield Baptist church, will be held in the P. C. A. Hall, Lakefield, on Tuesday evening next, February 9th. The tea will commence at 6 o'clock sharp. After tea Rev. A. H. Munro, of Peterborough, will deliver his interesting lecture on "Lessons for Life from Life." Admission to tea and lecture 25 cents.

The Second Carnival.

The second grand carnival under the auspices of the Fire Brigade Band will be given on Friday, February 19th, afternoon and evening. It has been decided to have a carnival for children in the afternoon, and adults' in the evening. A special and valuable prize will be given for the best representation of any character in Shakespear's plays.

A Lively Runaway.

Two local sports, while out driving yesterday afternoon, had an interesting spill and runaway. Their horse, a spirited young animal, was harnessed too close to the cutter. When near the postoffice on Brock street, stepping at a lively gait, it struck the whiffletree with its heels, became excited and ran. The sport who was not driving became alarmed and attempted to assist his pard by turning the horse, with the effect of upsetting the rig and spilling them both in the snow. The horse made for the sidewalk, where it slipped and fell, and was recaptured. One of the ejected men held the horse's head and the other went to gather up the robes and take possession of the lines. The horse, excited by over-attention, bolted, leaving the sports in the lurch. It ran down Water street, around the market, up George street and around to the Grand Central yard. The cutter was wrecked.

Police Court.

Mr. Thos. Beavis was up before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning, charged by Mr. W. G. Ferguson with keeping a vicious dog.

Mr. Beavis said he was not aware that the dog was vicious, and if he knew that he had harmed anyone, he would immediately put an end to him.

The magistrate reminded Mr. Beavis that he had on a previous occasion been before the court on a similar charge, when he promised to dispose of the dog. Mr. Beavis admitted the fact, but pleaded that the dog was not in the wrong, as the parties who were attacked by the animal were hooking pigeons.

Mr. W. G. Ferguson stated that the animal in question, a large, white bull-dog, had ran out at and chased his boy, and on one occasion, nearly two years ago, had bitten him.

Adam Ferguson was sworn and stated that one day, nearly two years ago, when on his way home from school, the dog ran out at him and caught him by the leg, knocking him down.

Mr. Beavis said it was strange that the dog never attacked anyone but Mr. Ferguson's children.

Mr. Ferguson said he had attacked Mr. W. Stratton and torn his coat, and that Mr. Beavis had had to pay for it.

Mr. Beavis admitted that it had bitten Mr. Stratton, but he had attracted the dog's attention by swinging his cane.

The magistrate reminded Mr. Beavis he he had undertaken to kill the dog before, which he had failed to do. He would as soon be bitten by the dog as scared to death by him.

Mr. Beavis pleaded that he could not live where he was without the dog. He required a good dog to protect his property. He chained the dog with a dog-chain. He asked permission to give it away.

The magistrate said he could not trust Mr. Beavis, as he had broken his word before, and ordered him to kill the dog within twenty-four hours.

A Great Musical Entertainment.

Professor Doucet of Peterborough, assisted by a fine array of the best foreign and local talent, will give a grand musical entertainin the Opera House, on Friday evening, February 12th. Among those who will contribute numbers to the programme, are Mr. Richard Gardner of New York, the solo cornet player of the United States. Mr. George Joseph of Montreal, will furnish his inimitable coffee-pot solos; Miss Annie Howdeu of Millbrook, one of the most cultured of Canadian vocalists, will sing several selections. Miss Annie Delaney will appear in both vocal and instrumental selections, and Miss Begley will also contribute to the vocal numbers of the programme. Miss Edmison, Miss Pearse, Miss Hurley of Peterborough will take parts in the concert, together with the phenomenal violin soloist, Little Maud. Professor Doucet is the first teacher of the violin who has remained in town long enough to advance his pupils so that they can creditably appear in public, and the public will have an opportunity of observing how signally successful he has been in bringing his pupils on with this fine but difficult instrument. One striking feature of the enterment will be the presence before the footlights of one of the best orchestras that ever appeared in Peterborough. This orchestra will be composed of no less than twenty pieces, in the hands of first class performers. Altogether, this concert promises to be the musical event of the season. Not only on its merits is it worthy of patronage, but the Professor has honestly earned a claim to the patronage of the people of the town. He has always been willing to render his musical services to entertainments, got up in the interests of the several churches, and has invariably given his valuable assistance free of charge. It is nothing more than fair play for the members of the churches, thus benefitted, to recognize Professor Doucet's efforts in this respect. Besides, all who attend will be amply rewarded by hearing one of the best musical entertainments ever presented in the town. Remember the date, the Opera House, Friday evening, February 12th.

The Chief of Police.

Mr. George Cochrane as a Candidate.

Among the many other applicants for the position of Chief of Police of Peterborough is Mr. Geo. Cochrane, of Lakefield. A rumor having become current in town that he had withdrawn his candidature, our reporter, seeing him in town on Saturday, approached him and the following colloquy took place:—

Reporter.—There is a rumor about town, Mr. Cochrane, that you have retired from the race for the Chieftainship of Police of Peterborough. Could you give me the facts of the case?

Mr. Cochrane.—I have heard no such rumor and there is no ground for it. I am a candidate for the position. If I get the place I shall do my best to fill it to the satisfaction of both the council and people of Peterborough.

Reporter.—I see you have been appointed to positions by the County Council and the village of Lakefield.

Mr. Cochrane.—Yes; I do seem to be considerably in request, but I did not seek either of these appointments. And you may say, if you like, that I am a candidate for the position of Chief of Police in Peterborough, and if appointed, that I will pull up stakes in Lakefield and come to to Peterborough to live.

Reporter.—All right; come and welcome; there's no danger of a newspaper man getting into your clutches.

On Ice.

They skated o'er the glassy rink
In ecstacy supreme;
He said it was an hour of bliss,
She said it was a dream.
And loving arm in loving arm
Sped on the happy pair.
Their souls as free, their hearts as light
As though they trod on air.
And happiness superlative
Their progress seemed to crown,
Until they bumped another twain,
And suddenly sat down.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

LIBERALS, LOOK ALIVE!

Now is the time to be alive to the importance of every Liberal name being put on the "perliminary" list—the basis of all future lists under the Dominion Franchise Act.

Tory newspapers do not need to appeal to individual members of their party, to take action, for Sir John's revising officers are paid by the people of Canada to work in the interest of the Conservative party, and Conservative "unions" are working night and and day to see that every Conservative vote goes on the first list.

Every Liberal elector has to look out for himself personally, if he desires to have a vote at the next general Dominion election. The EXAMINER has published the qualifications necessary to constitute a voter; but the grand qualification is to get your name on the first list.

If you are qualified, and are not on the assessment roll, you must send to the revising officer or his clerk AT ONCE a declaration of qualification.

You can obtain the necessary forms of application for the West Riding by applying to Mr. R. E. Wood, barrister, Mr. E. B. Stone, barrister, or at the EXAMINER Office, and for the East Riding from Mr. W. A. Stratton, barrister.

There is not a moment to lose. The first lists must be made up, printed and distributed before the first of March.

Don't delay; delay means disfranchisement.

Floods in California.

Twenty-Five Thousand Acres Submerged by the Breaking of a Levee.

STOCKTON, Cala. Jan. 31.—The cross levee which separated the lower division of Roberts island the middle division gave way yesterday, allowing the water to cover 35,000 acres of land, of which 13,000 acres were in wheat. The levee which surrounds the island broke at the middle section several days ago, flooding 12,000 acres in grain. This brought a heavy pressure of water against the cross levee. Efforts to strengthen it were futile. Most of the inundated land is owned by the Glasgow California Land Company, composed principally of foreign capitalists. The loss is estimated at $600,000.

Gladstone Goes to Osborne

The Idol of the People.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Mr. Gladstone left London this morning for Osborne in response to command of the Queen. At the railway station he was greeted with cheers by the people gathered there, and smilingly bowed his acknowledgements. He will return to London to-night. Mr. Gladstone received an ovation on his arrival at Portsmouth. He made a few remarks thanking the people for their cordial reception, and saying that his future life was certain to be very short.

Commanded to Form a Cabinet.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—Mr. Gladstone arrived at Osborne and received the personal commands of the Queen to form a cabinet. It is officially announced that Mr. Gladstone kissed the hands of her Majesty on receiving her commands. Both houses of parliament met to-day and adjourned until Thursday, pending the formation of a new cabinet.

DUBLIN, Feb. 1.—The Freeman's Journal states that it has reason to believe Mr. Gladstone has agreed with Parnell to join forces in parliament for the passage of a bill which shall establish an active parliament in Dublin to deal with Irish affairs, the new legislature to be so constituted as to add to the present safeguard of the integrity to the empire and the rights of the crown.

FEBRUARY 1.—The Legislative Committee of the City Council interviewed Attorney-General Mowat on Saturday, asking him for a charter for the city. Mr. Patrick Purcell was selected at a meeting in Glengarry Friday night to contest that constituency in the Liberal interest against Mr. McMaster, at the next election. Mr. R. A. MacDonald was in the chair.

It is estimated from the proportion of expense already incurred that the total cost for printing, revising barristers' fees, etc., for the preparation of the Dominion voters' list this year will be at least half a million dollars.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[The publisher of THE EXAMINER does not hold himself responsible for the facts asserted, nor the opinions expressed by correspondents.]

"Terrible Assasssination!!!"

To the Editor of THE DAILY EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I notice in your last night's edition, a communication under the above sensational heading, over the by no means sensational signature of one Geo. A. Morrison, with blood-curdling allusions to "stabbing in the dark" and other similar drivel. Will Mr. Morrison kindly enlighten the public as to the particular part in which he is stabbed. It could not have been a vital part for there is no vitality to spare in the concern he represents. What has been said or written that looks like "assassination?" He asks "those old liners," meaning no doubt, the agents of legitimate insurance corporations, to come out over their own signatures, as though any had come out over assumed names. All that I have seen on the subject—and as an "onlooker that sees most of the game," I notice pretty well all that appears—seems to have been duly authenticated and entirely lacking in the element of darkness, which Mr. Morrison employs with so much rhetorical flourish. Recently I read an article in your paper from the Monetary Times, scathingly criticising the "Association," which Mr. George A. Morrison represents. Is the Monetary Times not a responsible and solid publication, not particularly given to shady stabbing or nocturnal assassination? I also saw other cutting extracts, if I mistake not, from the Insurance Society, a respectable, reputable and responsible journal. Glib talk in buncombe style deceives no one. What the insuring public wants and looks for, is facts. If Mr. Morrison can convince the public that the concern he represent is solid, stable and established on sound principles, then the public will patronize his concern. But if, silenced by truth, Mr. Morrison allows the facts in such articles as were quoted from the Monetary Times and Insurance Society to pass uncontradicted and uncontroverted, then the public must assume that they are correct and will act accordingly. A public print is a dangerous place to air the special pleading, which the agent of an assessment company, with all that that title implies, is forced to use, to overcome the prejudices of the public in favour of legitimate insurance corporations, founded on equitable and recognised principles of insurance economy.

Your, etc.,
ONLOOKER.

Gen. Middleton at Batoche.

A Conservative M. P. Says He Was About to Retreat When the Boys Charged.

Dr. Orton, M. P. for Centre Wellington, a few days ago made a speech which is thus reported by the Dufferin Post:—

The Doctor concluded his address by giving an interesting account of the battles of Fish Creek and Batoche, at both of which he was present. Two incidents related by him have not been given to the public. On the night of the first day's fighting at Batoche, the officers began to suspect from certain preparations that there were being made that it was the intention of Gen. Middleton to withdraw the troops to the camp that had been left standing about seven miles in the rear. This created a strong feeling in the minds of the officers, [illegible] that this would be looked upon as a disgraceful retreat. They consulted together, and came to the conclusion that one of their number should be sent to represent their views to the General. Major Boulton was deputed to perform the task but returned unsuccessful. The officers then requested Dr. Orton to go to the General, thinking that he might prevent this retreat by representing that the condition of the wounded would not permit of their removal. The doctor accordingly went and asked the General for instructions about the wounded. The General ordered him to have them taken back to the camp. Dr. Orton replied, "Surely you don't intend to retreat, sir?" The General answered, "I don't see anything else; do you?" The doctor seized this opening and represented how this would be construed by the halfbreeds as a defeat, how the news of the retreat would fly to those tribes who were awaiting the result of the fight before deciding whether to remain friendly or not, how the whole Indian population would soon be up in arms, and that the officers and men would die where they were rather than be open to the imputations that such a retreat would cast upon them. The General called up Lord Melgund, and after a hasty conference, the orders for a retreat were cancelled, and the honor of the force was saved. Dr. Orton then described the celebrated bayonet charge at Batoche. Referring to the statement that General Middleton did not give orders for the attack, and that when he saw the charge being made, he cried out to the troops in dismay, "For God's sake stop firing," the doctor stated that the advance was made under orders from the General, and that his remark, "For God's sake, stop firing," was made to Capt. Howard, who, in ignorance of the advanced position of some of the troops, was discharging the Gatling gun in their direction.

Sweet Toothed Thieves.

On Sunday afternoon Mr. Jas. Phillips, a farmer residing in the 9th concession of Thurlow, Hastings county, reported to the Belleville police that two barrels of honey, 150 pounds each, and a buffalo robe had been stolen from his wood house on Saturday night. He said there were foot prints in the snow about the premises and the track of a light sleigh, which must have been made by the parties who robbed him of his honey. On Monday morning County Constable Phillips arrived in the city in charge of the prisoners, viz: Myron Jones and Geo. Lowden, charged with the theft.—Intelligencer.

At two o'clock p.m. on Saturday the first sod was turned at Brighton Harbour by Miss Jeanie Webb, daughter of the Managing Director, in the presence of over a hundred spectators. Sheriff Proctor made some appropriate remarks, predicting great things for the new road. M. P. Ketchum, Reeve of Brighton, said it would afford him pleasure to do all in his power to help the scheme in every possible way, and said that if the people of Brighton and the interested sections put their shoulders to the work they would soon have communications with their friends at Norwood and the surrounding country.

The Poets and Poetry of Canada

[No. 26.]

CHARLES G. D. ROBERTS.

"Poetry is unfallen speech. Paradise knew no other for no other would suffer to answer the need of those ecstatic days of innocence.—ABRAHAM COLES. The Evangel.

Within recent years Canada has produced a number of young men whose devotion to literature and scholarship, will, we trust are long bring the Dominion to the front and more firmly establish our claims to a national literature. Among these, the name of Chas. G. D. Roberts stands out prominently. From a very early period he has shown his powers as a writer and each year adds to his growing fame. Although a native of the maritime provinces his glory is the boast of the Dominion. This is as it should be. In literature, Canada must always show herself enthusiastic, liberal and patriotic, ready ever to extend applause and honor, wherever they are due and determined to stamp out the very appearance of provincial jealousy. Whether our writers belong to Nova Scotia or British Columbia, or Ontario, or New Brunswick, we should only enquire whether their work is broadly or truly Canadian, and then freely and gladly give credit to whom credit is due

A brief account of the early history of Mr. Roberts and a few specimens of his attempts in verse, will we feel certain, be appreciated by all who are interested in our country's literature.

Charles George Douglas Roberts is the son of the Rev. George Goodridge Roberts, the present Rector of Fredericton, N. B. He was born at Douglas Parsonage in the county of York, N. B., on the 10th of January, 1860. About thirteen years of his life, dating from the following September, were spent at Westcock Parsonage, in the county of Westmoreland, "the dyke country," at the head of the Bay of Fundy. During this time he received at his father's hands, the foundation of his education in ancient and modern languages, and general literature. In the year 1874 the family removed to Fredericton, his father having received the appointment of Rector, and here young Roberts pursued his studies at the Collegiate school, and greatly distinguished himself.

At the close of his course at the High School, in 1876, he took the Douglas silver medal as the best classical scholar, and on his matriculation at the University of New Brunswick, he also won the classical scholarship in the same year.

In 1877, he took the Alumni gold medal at his Alma Mater, and in 1879, he graduated, with honors in Metaphysics and Ethics. The same year he took charge of the Chatham Grammar School, and in August, 1880, he published his first volume of verse, "Orion and Other Poems." The work issued from the Philadelphia press, the celebrated Lippincotts being the publishers. It is very neatly printed, and the style, typography and general appearance of the book are excellent.

In December, 1880, Professor Roberts (for that is his present title) was united in marriage to Mary Isabel, daughter of Geo. E. Fenety, Esq., Queen's Printer, and Mayor of Fredericton. Next year he took his M. A. degree, and in February, 1882, returned to Fredericton as Principal of the York street school.

In 1883 he delivered the Alumni oration at the University Encænia on the "Development of Canadian Literature," and in the month of September, in that same year, he went to Toronto as editor of The Week, then first established. During the time he acted as editor, he did much to foster and promote a healthy national literature, and a number of his own articles on the younger American poets, were written in a very sympathetic and helpful spirit. We doubt if The Week has ever been conducted with such skill, as when he was at the helm, and we know few men at his age, could show such consummate prudence and wisdom in literary work.

Finding the position not altogether congenial, Roberts retired from the editorship in February, 1884. He is now Professor of English Literature at King's College, Windsor, Nova Scotia, and we fondly hope his position and surroundings will leave him ample leisure to do some literary work which may yet make his name known to, and honby every Canadian, who loves his country and desires our people to advance in all that makes a nation "great, glorious and free."

Many of Professor Roberts' poems were published in the Century and other magazines.

The late editor, Dr. Holland, spoke in the very highest terms of his productions, and specially of one "Memnon," written when Roberts was only 17; he declared it superior to anything he had received for the Century for months.

As a resident of Acadia, Professor Roberts has a splendid field in which to mine for suitable materials from which to burnish verse The story of the French in Nova Scotia reads like romance. The bold exploits, and stirring adventures, the hardships and triumphs interwoven in these old annals should stir the poetic fire and bring out,

"The light that never was on sea or land,
The consecration and the poet's dream."

Longfellow has shown what it is capable of—and his exquisite treatment of the subject should inspire some youthful poet, like Roberts himself, to follow in his wake. Acadian story has been glorified by the exquisite treatment Longfellow has given it. And the theme is by no means exhausted. As one has said, "Every dyke and ancient rampart and surviving Acadian name, and little rock-rimmed haven, from the wind-rippled, shifting sepulchre of Sable Island to the sunny levels of Chignecto, should be breeding ground for poem, and history and romance." We look for the near future to produce something of rare quality in literary circles from this fascinating region, and shall be much disappointed if the name of Professor Roberts is not closely linked thereto.

As examples of what Mr. Roberts has written, we quote the following, merely premising that his best and more laboured efforts are too long for our columns.

There is a ringing beauty and a delicate word-painting in these lines to "The Maple" which well deserve commendation. We should like the words set to appropriate music, as they vigorously pourtray the national emblem.—

Oh, tenderly deepen the woodland glooms,
And merrily sway the beeches;
Breathe delicately the willow blooms,
And the pines rehearse new speeches;
The elms toss high till they brush the sky,
Pale catkins the yellow birch launches,
But the tree I love all the greenwood above,
Is the maple of sunny branches.

Let who will sing of the hawthorn in spring,
Or the late-leaved linden in summer;
There's a world, may be, for the locust tree,
That delicate, strange new-comer;
But the maple it glows with the tint of the rose,
When pale are the spring-time regions,
And its towers of flame from afar proclaim,
The advance of winter's legions.

And a greener shade there never was made
Than its summer canopy sif-ed,
And many a day as beneath it I lay
Has my memory backward drifted
To a pleasant lane I may walk not again,
Leading over the a fresh green hill,
Where a maple stood just clear of the wood
And oh! to be near it still!

In description Roberts excels, his note is virile and original and the language he employs, is pure and graceful. Take as an example of his descriptive and poetic powers the following:

ODE TO NIGHT.

I.

The noon has dried thy dew-drops from my wings,
My spirit's wings, so they no longer soar;
And drooping more and more,
I pant, O night, for they soft whisperings
Of bounteous blessings, which thou hast in store,
For me and all who serve thee with due rites;
Not with a riotous, loose merriment,
That thy soft wrath excites;
But with sweet yielding to thy lavishment
Of warm syringa-scented breathings, blent
With trance-ell draughts of subtle-souled delights.

II.

Low-sighing zephyr, pulsing from the west,
Before thee sheds earth-purifying dew.
As priests were wont to do
With lustral waters, ere the victims dressed
For sacrifice, felt the keen searching knife.
Then, thy light fringed forager, anew rife
With thefts from all lush odors and sweet sounds,
He drowses on thy skirt;
Whilst thou, breast-full of new, sweet milk of life,
Loosest the robe thy bounteous bosom bounds,
With heart's ease blooms and marigolds begirt.

III.

Dear goddess, come. Thy feather sandalled feet
Tread out the dying crimsons of the day,
Whose warm, red-spirted spray
I'll find soft-changed to flushes rosy sweet,
Dowered by thee to my love's lips and cheeks;
My love, with whom is Covert from the freaks
Of Folly, so heart-vexing through the light,
With whom a safe retreat,
In whose dusk bower sour Envy never speaks
Nor poison drips from venomed fangs of spite;
Thither, dear night, we'll haste on happy feet.

We regret our space will not permit us to quote the splendid poem, "Ariadne," but we cannot resist the temptation of giving a few of the opening stanzas, which are, to our mind, exceedingly well done. With these we shall conclude our sketch to-day.

I.

Hung like a rich pomegranate o'er the sea,
The ripened moon; along the tranced sand
The feather-shadowed ferns drooped dreamfully;
The solitude's evading harmony
Mingled remotely over sea and land;
A light wind woke and whispered warily,
And myriad ripples tinkled on the strand.

II.

She lay face downward on the sighing shore,
Her head upon her bended arm; her hair
Loose-spreading fell, a heart-entangling store;
Her shoulder swelling through it glimmered more
Divinely white than snows in morning air;
One tress, more wide astray, the ripples bore
Where her hands clenched the ooze in mute despair.

III.

A wandering wind laughed over her, then slunk
Shamefast away, laden with her deep woe,
Smit with the consciousness that she had drunk
Grief's numbing chalice to the dregs, and sunk,
As deep as ever mortal soul could go,
To sleep's dim caves; while, like a wave-borne trunk,
Did her still body no life-promise show.

Subsidies to be Cancelled.

Proposed Action of the Federal Government—A Surprising Decision.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—It is stated that, owing to the unsatisfactory state of the public finances, the government have decided to introduce a measure at the coming session of parliament cancelling all subsidies granted in aid of railways which have not thus far been availed of, or where the conditions of such grants have not been complied with by any chartered railway companies. The system of granting Dominion aid toward the construction of local railways was commenced in the session of 1852, and at every session since many large grants have been made until the aggregate of the subsidies by Parliament for such purposes has reached about $24,000,000, exclusive of grants to the Canadian Pacific Company, and for roads to be built as public works. The government think that subsidies which have not been applied for up to the present should be cancelled and the public liabilities reduced to that extent.

High Taxation and Hard Times

Workingmen read this! After six years of protection, millions additional of Dominion taxation, the Mayor of Toronto, himself a protectionist, is obliged to ask for an appropriation of $3,000 for relief works. He said:

"He wished to call the attention of the committee to the urgent necessity which existed for at once proceeding with the work. A very large number of unemployed men, men who were very respectable, who have been working in factories, but in consequence of the factories shutting down or going on short time, had been deprived of the means of supporting themselves and families, had been forced to appeal to him for assistance. These men were not of the ordinary class of tramps. Looking at the matter in this light, the city cannot afford to overlook the necessities of these people."

In the meantime, our Conservative contemporaries, overlooking the condition of affairs at home, are burrowing in the columns of British newspapers to find evidences of distress in Britain!

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $130 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through sub-agents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to every one out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

J. R. STRATTON.

Wholesale Cheek Painting.

Eleven young women stood in a row behind the scenes on the stage devoted to a well-known burlesque entertainment. The eleven were a chorus. Their features averaged pretty. The eleven were not employed on account of talent, for they were little more than figurantes, and so the manager had easily insisted that they should be young and comely. When I saw them they had just emerged from their dressing-room, and were within ten minutes to appear before an audience. They looked well, except that their countenances were ghastly white.

"What on earth's the matter with them?" I asked. "Stage fright?"

"Not much," was the reply. "You couldn't scare them with an audience of Booths and Irvings. They've not had their bloom put on yet. Here is their painter watch him."

The girls ranged themselves, facing a strong light. A man with a palette and several brushes went up to the one at the end of the line. She stopped her tongue, shut her saucy mouth and held her face expressionlessly still. The artist dabbed a brush in the smutch of black paint on the palette and deftly shaped her eyebrows and rimmed her eyelids. Then he took up a brushful of red, spotted her cheeks and covered her lips. Stepping back a pace, he gazed critically at his job. The girl grinned so suddenly and mechanically that I got the impression that she had gone daft, but that was quite in the way of professional duty, and was intended to show how she would look when she smiled at the audience, so that he could see how to outline the red of her lips. This he did with a few rapid strokes. Finally he rubbed the color on her cheeks until it blended satisfactorily with the white groundwork, gave her a critical examination from a dozen feet, and she was ready for exhibition. She thereupon dropped off the end of the line, and the same operation, varied only as the difference of the subject required, was repeated on the next girl. The man's movements were wonderfully quick and dexterous, and the eleventh charmer was finished in a space of time that may as well be called a jiffy.

Fancies in Perfumes.

Everybody looks at the perfumery bottles in a drug store. There are all kinds —"White Rose," "Golden Lilly of Japan," "Frangipani," "Pond Lily," "New-Mown Hay," "Jockey Club," "Patchouly," "Forrest Flower," and all of the other fancy-named scents with an immense variety of cologne water. The most of these are in one, two, and four ounce bottles, prettily labeled, and with the corks covered with sheepskin and tied with a pink, a red, or a blue ribbon or a fancy cord. You can look at them and pick them up and shake them, but you can't smell of them. And there are always along in close proximity a lot of larger bottles, cut-glass concerns, very nice to look upon and with glass stoppers which are neither covered with sheepskin or tied into place.

Then the visitor has some fun. One by one the stoppers are removed and first the stopper and then the mouth of the bottles is applied to the nostrils. Next the stopper is replaced and the bottle shaken a little so that the stopper is moistened with the liquid and then the stopper is touched to the nose or rubbed along the upper lip. Then the finger is wet a little and rubbed across the vest or the front of the dress, and sometimes, if the druggist is not looking, a little is doused upon the handkerchief.

These perfumes are a very profitable stock of goods. There is always a steady demand for the nice smells, and there is a good-sized profit upon them. At holiday time the sales are still larger. The pretty bottles and the useful contents are nice remembrances, and are always acceptable. Sometimes they are snugly stored in fancy boxes with a cupid, or a flower, or something like that to make them look nicer. The perfumes are usually made from the essential oil of the flower, the name of which the perfume bears, and the oil dissolved in alcohol. There is a kind made also from deodorized kerosene oil, which, when scented, makes a delightful perfume which costs very little, and can be sold for a high figure and at a good profit.

In receiving visitors the president has peculiar habits in the management of his arm and hands. When he is pleased or contented to listen he holds his hands about six inches apart, with the back part of his hand against his coat. The fingers generally are quiet, but if they begin to work or contract he is growing tired. Then he will shift from one foot to the other. If the man bores him the arms gradually come forward. The move is gradual, but if the inflection continues the hands fall to the sides, thumbs in. If still the visitor persists in staying, the arms go out and the thumbs beat against his side. Then it is time to go.

The tomahawk with which Hannah Dunstan, the heroine of the Deerfield massacre, killed her Indian captors while they slept, and so made her escape, is in the possession of a gentleman at Derby Line, Vt., who received it as an heirloom.

Ethics of Rest.

Let every woman who finds her vital forces failing, who is growing nervous, as well as always weary, whose chief longing is for rest of mind and body, who begins to feel that life is not worth the living, stop now and here. Cut off all expenditure of effort that is not an absolute necessity, and curtail that necessity as much as possible. I do not mean that you should give up your worthy aims and purposes, but be sure that you can devote yourself to them safely.

Remember this: It is as important that you should keep a reserve of physical power on hand for future draughts, as that you should provide in a money way for sickness, accident and declining years.

So long as youth lasts you do not greatly feel this exhaustion of the physical forces, that is, your powers of recuperation are greater, yet every time you draw upon your strength to excess, you are obliged to go deeper and deeper into your vital resources in order to make repairs. And you never do get quite back to the old place, even though you are not conscious at the time of the fact. You find after a while that a night's sleep does not make you as good as new again, after "overdoing," but it takes another day of rest and night of slumber to enable you to get back your usual vigor.

You can not help it? I know that is true of some of you, that there are duties so absolute in their demands that you are compelled to do them so long as you are able to bear the strain, but by far the greater part could, an' ye would, diminish your burdens by a third. Social ambition in some cases the fear of not doing as your neighbor does a false idea of duty in others, a desire to accomplish much that would be pleasant to be able to do, the inability to say no to demands made upon time and energies, all of these things, singly or together, cause women to apply the lash when they find their physical powers lagging, and on they go until they fall down in their tracks. Emily Bouton in Toledo Blade.

Bowers Didn't Kneel.

A policeman who was going up Macomb street the other day encountered a gray-haired colored man hanging around a street corner with a club in his grasp. The matter looked suspicious, and the officer demanded:

"What are you up to now?"

"Waitin', sah."

"Waiting for what?"

"Fur de ole man Bowers to come out. Libs in de little brown cottage dar."

"What are you going to do with that club?"

"Dis club am to assist my remarks, sah."

"Are you going to hit him?"

"O, no. Fur de las' two y'ars de ole man has been slanderin' me. He says I'ze got three wives. He says I'ze a bilk an' dead-beat an' liar. De time has now arrove when he's got to take it all back in a lump. He'll cum out purty quick, and as soon as he turns de co'ner he'll find me an' dis club. I'll rush at him wid the upraised weepin' an' shout:

"'Ole man, you has slandered an' belied me! Git down on yer knees an' take it all back or I'll brain de top of yer head!'

"He'll claw right down fur de sidewalk an' beg forgiveness, sah, an' he'll nebber dare slander me no mo'."

The officer warned him to be careful or he would get into trouble, and then walked around the square and took post where he could see the performance. In a short time old Bowers came out. He was picking his teeth after a hearty meal, and walked like one well-satisfied with himself. When he turned the corner the waiting assassin rushed upon him with uplifted club and the speech he had prepared in advance, but somehow old Bowers didn't fall down on his knees as predicted and expected. On the contrary the watching officer saw him shoot out with his left, and the club-lifter took a tumble into the ditch and laid there while the other passed on. He was sitting up as the officer arrived and walked around him and remarked:

"Well, it didn't work, did it?"

The other looked up at him a long time, and then dizzily replied:

"White man, go 'long! When I is attacked wid dese faintin' fits an' falls in de street it makes me tired to be talked to!"—Detroit Free Press.

The Poet's Decoration.

A new Uhland anecdote is sure of a wide welcome. Although the poet delighted to take his subjects from the knightly and romantic middle ages, when feudalism was everywhere in force, he was essentially a poet of the people. The Prussian King, William IV., offered him the Order Pour le Merite, with flattering expressions of the royal regard. Uhland, however, declined to accept it. While he was explaining to his wife the reason which moved him to refuse the distinction there was a knock at the door. A working-class girl from the neighborhood entered and, presenting Uhland with a bunch of violets, said: "This is an offering from my mother." "Your mother, child?" replied the poet "I thought she died last summer." "That's true. Herr Uhland," said the girl, "and I begged you at the time to make a little verse for her grave and you sent me a beautiful poem. These are the first violets which have bloomed on mother's grave; I have plucked them and I like to think that she sends them to you with her greeting." The poet's eyes moistened as he took the posy, and putting it in his button-hole he said to his wife: "There, dear woman, is not that an order more valuable than any king can give?"—Pall Mall Gazette.

The trappings of the white elephant of King Theebaw are said to be worth $1,000,000. The royal regalia are reputed the most valuable in the world, especially in rubies and sapphires. Ruby mines exist just north of Mandalay, to which no European has ever been allowed access. The Burmese war is, therefore, likely to yield plenty of loot.

Subscriptions are being quietly yet diligently collected to erect a monument to Nathan Hale, the young American Revolutionary officer who accepted the perilous mission of studying the British position on Long Island for the information of Gen. Washington. He was captured and executed under the rigorous rules of war.

Dog Stars.

Astley introduced performing dogs at his amphitheater, but only in such tricks as are now to be seen in the concert halls: the Royal circus seems to have been the first place in which the dog appeared as an actor in a play written expressly to display his peculiar talents. The Roscii of the canine stage two in number, were called Geler and Victor, and such was their popularity that they held daily receptions, and people flocked in hundreds to gaze upon and fondle these canine phenomena. Dog pieces became quite the rage; they even invaded the classic stage of Drury Lane, and one saved Sheridan from bankruptcy, when Kemble, Siddons, and a magnificent company of two-legged players had been performing to empty benches. The actors who owned the animals were called "dog stars." They always traveled in pairs; one played the villain, the other the virtuous individual; the latter was attended by his faithful "dawg" who protected him from all the machinations of his enemy, the villain of the drama. At the windup the latter took "the seize," as it was called, that is to say, at a given signal the dog sprang at his throat, which was guarded by a thick pad, invisible, of course, to the audience, covered with red cloth; after turning round like a teetotum, and shouting "mussy, mussy"—they invariably so pronounced the word—he would fall and roll about in great agony upon the stage, the dog still keeping a tight hold, until he was supposed to be dead. Shakspeare's plays in their time have been made to assume many curious forms, but "Hamlet" as a dog piece is the most startling of all, yet this was actually achieved by one of these "dog stars" about five and twenty years ago in the provinces. He announced himself as "the only dog Hamlet," which he probably was, though the phrase, from a natural-history point of view, was a little mixed. The play was very much abbreviated, of course; the Prince of Denmark in every scene was attended by a very large black dog, and in the last the sagacious animal took upon himself the office of executioner by springing on the king and putting an end to his wicked career in the usual orthodox (dog) fashion.—London Society.

"The latest sensation in the Prince of Wales' set in London, whose name is on every one's lips, is Miss Margot Tennant. She is one of the three young ladies who, with Miss Chamberlain and another English girl, shared the proud distinction of causing H. R. H. to frown upon the rosebud ball given last season. She has red hair and is not a beauty, but a most brilliant horse-woman, and witty a faire fremir. It was her not which immediately attracted the gracious condescension which the first gentleman of Europe has since lavished upon her. At a gay dinner she was called upon to propose the Queen's health in two words. 'To Tum's dam,' she cried, jumping upon her chair. 'Tum,' be it understood, being the familiar name by which the portly Prince is known to his intimates." This story is evidently a malicious libel on the American girl uttered by Vanity Fair.

Skating as an Exercise.

From the Lancet.

Beyond question, skating is one of the finest of sports, especially for females. It is graceful, healthy, stimulating to the muscles, and it develops in a very high degree the important faculty in balancing the body and preserving perfect control over the whole of the muscular system, while bringing certain muscles into action as well. Moreover, there is this about it which is of special value—it trains by exercise the power of intentionally inducing and maintaining a continuous contraction of the muscles of the lower extremity. The joints, hip, knee and ankle are firmly fixed or rather kept steadily under control, while their limbs are so set by their muscular apparatus that they form, as it were, part of the skate that glides over the smooth surface. To skate well and gracefully is a very high accomplishment, indeed, and perhaps one of the very best exercises in which young women and girls can engage with a view to healthful development.

TAKING STOCK!

No duty devolving upon the business man is so important as that of "Taking Stock." Books have been called the merchant's repeating clock, to tell him how he goes. By taking stock and a comparison with his books, the trader is enabled to arrive at a reasonable computation of the business done during the year, and to tell whether the balance on the pages of his ledger shall be for or against him. It is not only the recognised duty of the active business man to "take stock" of his goods, his trade, his custom, but of his competitors. The universal application of the rule is shown in the particularity with which young ladies "take stock" of prospective matrimonial chances. In short tradition, business, usage, custom, convenience and other good and sufficient reasons, all corroborate the advisability of taking stock. We are just now taking stock, and will clear out any winter goods left over, at cost.

Mr. A. Comstock's New Shop.

Mr. Aaron Comstock, who for the past twelve years has carried on business as furniture manufacturer and dealer, in Taylor's block, George street, finding the premises too small for his increasing business, recently erected on his lot, south of the market, a large and handsome three story brick building, for factory and wareroom. Last week Mr. Comstock moved in his commodious new premises, where he will carry on business in future, with greatly increased facilities. The building is a fine three-story brick structure, 22x50 feet, capped with a mansard roof of the latest style. The show room occupies the whole ground floor, and is now stocked with a large display of select furniture. The walls and ceiling of the room are tastefully panelled with basswood, done in white, is well lighted by large windows, and is very bright, neat and attractive. The second flat is divided into two compartments. The front half is used as the undertaking department, while the rear part is used as a workshop. The third flat will be used as a store room and workshop. The walls and ceilings of both the upper storeys are panelled with unstained basswood. Mr. Comstock's premises are spacious and after the most approved style, and everything has been planned with a view to convenience. Mr. Comstock's residence, a large and handsome brick building is immediately in rear of the shop, fronting on Water street, where he may be found when not in the shop.

Candlemas Day.

To day (Feb. 2nd) is Candlemas Day, or the Festival of the Purification of the Virgin Mary. On this day the ceremonies in the Roman Catholic church are unusually impressive. Candles are blessed by the bishop and presented to the clergy and people. This custom is a very ancient one in the church, and was instituted at an early period for the purpose of obliterating some Pagan customs and bringing the people to the observance of Christian practices. In addition to the ecclesiastical observances of the day, is a particularly tenacious popular superstition. It is firmly believed as the Bible by some that the bear who has gone into seclusion at the beginning of the winter, and exists by sucking his superfluous store of fat through one of his paws, on this day adjourns his hybernation for a brief space, and emerges from his seclusion. If the sun shines and he can see his shadow, he retires in disgust and remains in hiding while the winter lasts. This is popularly supposed to be, as long as it has lasted up to the time of Bruin's making his meterological observations. So strongly do some persons believe in this indication, that they order a new supply of winter fuel on the serength of a few seconds of stray sunshine on Candlemas Day.

Opening of the P. A. A. A. Slide.

The members of the snowshoeing and tobogganing club in connection with P.A.A.A. formally opened their toboggan slide last night. During the afternoon a number of the officers of the club tramped out to the slide and busied themselve in hanging lanterns and getting the slide in readiness for the evening sport. About eight o'clock a large number of the members of the club, accompanied by their friends, repaired to the place of amusement. In the absence of the President, Mr. A. St. A. Smith, Vice-President, accompanied by Miss Wallis and Miss Smith, boarded the first toboggan, and amid the cheers of the assembled, shot down the incline and away across the snowy surface of the run. They were quickly followed by others. The fun became fast and furious and the rush of the toboggans, with their precious burdens, was kept up well into the night. The slide, which is prettily situated on the side of the hill between rows of evergreens, has, besides the natural elevation, an artificial slide erected to the height of about 30 feet, and has a run of nearly a quarter of a mile. The slide and course was gaily lighted with many hued Chinese lanterns, hanging from the boughs of the evergreens lining the runway. Torches and an immense bonfire also assisted in illuminating the surroundings. The merry party, many of whom were dressed in the club costume, all more or less covered with frost, as seen in the strange light given by the lanterns and flickering torches among the long rows of evergreens, was quaint and picturesque. There were present at the opening:—Ladies: Mrs. Wallis and the Misses Wallis, Mr. Robert Hamilton, Miss Crawford, Miss Rubidge, Miss Killally, Mrs. Aylmer, Mrs. E. B. Edwards and Miss Edwards, Miss Hatton, Miss Burnett, the Misses Smith, the Misses Hall, Miss Vair, Mrs. R. B. Landy and others. The gentlemen present were, Mr. A. St. A. Smith, Vice-President of the club, Messrs. Aylmer, E. B. Edwards, Mr. Wood, Mr Landy, R. W. Grubb, C. A. Lawford, H. Slight, J. Morris, C. H. Gaele, G. F. Orde, T. Clementi, Geo. Stevenson, F. J. Lewis, B. Tate, C. Minty, C. Newbald and others. All were delighted with the slide and the sport it afforded. The routes home were too numerous to mention.

Toboggan Carnival at Port Hope.

Port Hopers are trying to have a grand toboggan carnival. There is nothing to prevent the place from having a carnival (unless it is enterprise) as the town is blessed with many hills.

A Port Hope Paper on Protection.

The Port Hope Times says, in commenting upon Mayor Stevenson's action in appointing a policeman to protect the Salvation Army meetings from disturbance, "This is perfectly right. The meetings of the Army in their barracks or assembly hall should be protected from disturbance from rowdies; and the Army on the street should be just as particular not to disturb other people, and to do this they should leave their infernal machine in the shape of a big drum in their hall when they march through the public streets."

Ashburnham Entertainment.

Another popular ten cent concert was held yesterday evening in St. Luke's school room. The building was comfortably filled and the programme gave pleasure to all who were present. The first number was an instrumental duet by Misses Ludgate and S. Cameron. This was followed by a quartette, "Sweet and Low," by Misses Brundrett and Eva Tivey and Messrs. Manniog and Geale. Song, "Sing to Me, Robin," by Miss Ballantyne. Song, "Killarney," by Miss Brundrett. Song, "Jessie's Dream," by Miss S. Cameron. Reading, "Pat and the Gridiron," by Mr. John Barnham. Song, "My Cottage Home," by Miss Ballantyne. Reading, "The Child and the Prison," by Rev. W. C. Bradshaw; and a duet, "Whispering Hope," by Misses Brundrett and Eva Tivey. The programme closed by several young people rendering a short play entitled "The Sleeping Beauty." The dresses were most carefully and elaborately prepared and the acting was exceptionally good, considering the ages of the principal performers.

St. Paul Winter Carnival.

The Ice Palace Dedicated with Great Ceremony—A Brilliant Street Pageant

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 1.—The most magnificent street pageant ever seen in the north we witnessed here to-day. It was preliminary to the formal dedication of the ice palace to the winter carnival. There were 4,000 uniformed members of tobogganing, a cowhoe, and skating clubs in line, with torches and transparencies. The streets were lined with citizens and visitors. The streets along the line of march were handsomely decorated with triumphal arches at all the principal points, and were brilliantly illuminated with transparencies. The palace just completed is from ice blocks from the Mississippi river and blocks furnished by cities and towns in the North West.

CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance,

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

MONDAY, FEB. 1st.

The debate on the address was resumed.

Hon. Mr. Morris went into a statement of the Indian claim question.

Hon. C. F. Fraser was in good form, and in a speech of more than an hour's duration replied to the speech of Mr. Meredith on Friday last. He called attention to the statements frequently made in Conservative papers, and reiterated by the member for London, that the late Mr. Bethune had stated on the floor of the House that the Dominion had a right to pass a liquor act, even if it did not possess more rights over it than the Provincial legislatures. He read from the Mail of February 26th, 1884, the only speech made during that year by Mr. Bethune, showing that then that gentleman had no doubts whatever as to the Provincial rights and then contended that the Dominion possessed no rights.

Proceeding with his speech, Mr. Fraser spoke of the robbery by the Dominion government of the railways which had been chartered and subsidized by the provincial government, and pointing out that the main object of the railway corporations in procuring the legislation from the Dominion parliament had been to secure immunity from the effects of the acts of the provincial legislature compelling the companies to pack frogs and otherwise provide against accidents and granting compensation to those injured through a neglect of these precautions. These acts had been prepared by himself, and while in force had been of great benefit, but the courts had decided that they were now inoperative on railways declared to be for the good of the whole dominion. It was true an appeal was taken from that decision, but till the judgment was reversed the unfortunate persons who were injured through a neglect of the precautions were without edress.

The Speaker then began to read the address clause by clause. On the second clause being reached.

Mr. Meredith moved the insertion of the addition he had proposed on Friday, giving credit to the volunteers of other provinces for their efforts in suppressing the rebellion.

He hoped that in future the debates in the house might be less acrimonious than they had been in the past.

Mr. Mowat stated that in no legislative assembly which he had any knowledge of was the opposition so unfair as the gentlemen opposite to him, and he trusted they would in the future give the government fairer play than they had been given in the past. He then referred again to the boundary question, stating that while the privy council had decided that an award of the arbitrators was not legally binding it had at the same time declared the boundaries under that award were the true and right ones. He admitted that he had given up all claim to the territory outside of the award, but said he had only done so after the lords of the privy council had plainly intimated that they would not consider them at all.

Mr. S. White moved an addition to Mr. Meredith's amendment to the address, committing the House to the declaration that the pardon of those connected with the late rebellion would be desirable.

Mr. Ferris moved the adjournment of the debate and the house adjourned at 10.5.

Mr. Ermatinger has given notice of a bill to extend the polling hours for the provincial and municipal elections.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 2nd.

In the legislature to-day the North-West rebellion formed the bone of contention. A meeting of the council of ministers was held before the opening of the house, and in consequence of this the attorney-general rose after Mr. Lyon, the member from East Algoma, had been introduced, and made a statement of the stand taken by the government. He said the government could not accept the amendment of the member for North Essex (Mr. Sol. White). He could not endorse the action of the government at Ottawa. Mr. Mowat severely denounced the Ottawa government as being the parties responsible for all the blood which had been shed, all the treasure which had been wasted, and all the disturbance which had taken place during the rebellion. Mr. Meredith replied to the attorney-general. He went into the whole question of the trial and the after proceedings to show that Riel was sane and had been pronounced so by all the courts.

The debate was continued over the recess, the following gentlemen participating in it, viz.: Messrs. Ferris, Robillard, Baskerville, McMahon, Morris, Young, French, Baxter, Ermatinger, Clancy, Wood and White.

Mr. McMahon scored a point against the opposition by saying that they were asking for an approval of the erection of Riel, and at the same time asking for executive clemency on behalf of those who had urged him on in his course.

The amendment of Mr. White, involving the endorsation by the House of the Government's management of the rebellion and its consequences was negatived by a vote of 45 to 33.

Mr. Fraser moved a motion declaring that any expression of opinion of the executive acts of the Dominion Government was beyond the province of the local legislature, and an unwise and unwarrantable intrusion upon the domain of the Federal Government

A division was taken on Mr. Fraser's resolution, when it was carried by a vote of 46 to 31. Thus perished miserably the attempt of Mr. Meredith and his following to stir up strife between two provinces and to prostitute the provincial legislature to manufacturing political capital for the Dominion Government.

The address was then passed clause by clause and ordered to be engrossed. The [illegible] and library committees were appointed with the same members as last year.

The Provincial Treasurer gave notice that on Monday next he should move the House into committee of supply and of ways and means, and the House adjourned at 11.35 p. m.

Mr. Meredith will call the Government's timber policy in question at a subsequent stage of the session. Mr. Fraser, in answer to a question, stated that the proposals he had to present with regard to the new Parliament buildings did not involve any increased appropriation.

Imperial Politics.

The Grand Old Man Forms His Cabinet.

AN INNINGS BETWEEN THE OUT AND THE IN.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—Gladstone held a conference this forenoon with Salisbury. The subject under discussion was foreign affairs. The conference lasted twenty minutes.

POLITICAL CAST OF THE CABINET.

Mr. Chamberlain refuses the office of first lord of the admiralty. Mr. Collings will be given an important post. Mr Morley has accepted the chief secretaryship for Ireland, Earl Rosebery, the foreign portfolio, Mr. Charles Russell, the attorney-generalship and Mr. Cohen, the solicitor generalship

The Court Circular announces that Mr. Gladstone in the audience with the Queen on Monday, was appointed prime minister. Mr. Gladstone was unable to accept the Queen's invitation to stay at Windsor until Tuesday. It is rumored that John Naish will be Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and Mr. Hemphill Solicitor-General of Ireland.

PARNELL'S DEMANDS.

The Daily News says that Mr. Parnell will firmly demand that the local government question be settled by Parliament before the land question or that both subjects be discussed together and that he will strenuously oppose dealing with the land question first.

RETURNED WITHOUT OPPOSITION.

Lord Richard Grosvenor, liberal whip, will be promoted in office, and Mr. Arnold Morley will succeed him as whip. Mr. Gladstone will be returned to Parliament for Midlothian without opposition in the re-election necessitated by his acceptance of office.

THE NATIONALISTS.

DUBLIN, Feb. 2. —At a meeting of the league to-day, Sexton, who presided, predicted that at the next election the Nationalists would combine with the Liberals and return 89 members to Parliament. Ireland, he said, was satisfied with the result of the temporary power of the Conservatives, who had abolished coercion and introduced a land purchase measure, establishing the principle that the state should provide money for the extinction of the landlords. He advised Mr. Gladstone to avoid violence and disorder in Ireland by assisting distressed peasants with government funds and protecting them from eviction until a bill has been passed to buy out the landlord. He urged Irishmen to remain peaceful while there was a chance of Mr. Gladstone making efforts on behalf of Irish nationalism.

Ottawa Intelligence.

OTTAWA, Feb. 2.—Mr. Norquay, Premier of Manitoba, is still here. He says he is on public business, but does not want to give it away. It is asserted, however, that John is looking after some little job of his own, though he will no doubt saddle the costs of his trip on the Province of Manitoba.

Among the subsidized members of Parliament who have been overlooked by Mr. M. C. Cameron are Messrs. Smith, of Kent, and Wigle, of South Essex, who, it is alleged, are shareholders in the "Chatham Waggon Company," from whom large numbers of waggons and other agricultural implements have been bought by the Government for the Northwest Indians. The Chatham company also managed to get an elaborate advertisement and puff of their waggons inserted free of charge in the annual report of the Indian Department.

Mr. Montplaisier, M. P., who has applied for 50 square miles of timber limits, is here urging that his application be granted at once, as he has an offer to purchase, and hopes to make a handsome profit.

Marriage of Miss Gladstone.

The Prince and Princess of Wales Witness the Ceremony.

LONDON, Feb. 2.—Miss Mary Gladstone, daughter of Mr. Gladstone, was married this morning to Rev. Harry Drew, of Hawarden. The ceremony was performed in St. Margaret's church, Westminster. Mr. Gladstone gave the bride away. Among the persons of note present were the Prince and Princess of Wales and their sons and Lord Rosebury. The bride's dress was of white muslin, with Brussels lace. (Just think of it, muslin for the wedding dress of the daughter of the Prime Minister of the greatest empire the world ever saw. Why, that wouldn't do for a Canadian laborer's daughter's bridal gown.) She wore a wreath of orange blossoms and lillies. A crowd gathered outside of the church and cheered the wedding party on their arrival and departure. The weather was very pleasant and the sun shone brightly.

Lincoln county has determined to erect a new building for its industrial Home.

A boy in one of the public schools of St. Catharines was told by the teachers to put a broom in the porch. Instead of doing so he threw it into the road. It struck a young man in the eye, bursting the ball and entirely destroying the sight.

A Thumb Puncher.

"We don't mind the men," remarked a poulterer Wednesday after the rush was over, as he rearranged his rather mixed-rows of chickens, ducks, and turkeys, talking the while to a Philadelphia Press reporter. "It's these 'ere tarnal women folks as bother us. Some women is good enough to git along with, and don't make no fuss. The worst is the thumb-punchers. What? You don't know what a thumb-puncher is? Well, if you was in this business, you wouldn't want to learn. You see that turkey layin' there? Well, he looks worse'n he'd been knocked out in a prize fight, don't he? He's all black and blue. Thumb-punchin' did that; a little woman thin—had a nose on her like the beak of one o' them ducks hangin' there, comes up and squeals out, 'Le'm'me see the second turkey on the third row.' I puts down the bird. She rams her thumb into its side four or five times. 'How much?" sez she. 'Sixteen a pound,' sez I. Then she goes at it with both thumbs, right an' left, an' hammers that poor dead bird 'till it's all off color. Then she snaps out: 'Put it back, it's too tough. Wouldn't be surprised if its legs were stuffed with shot to make it weigh heavy. What's ducks?'

"'Madam,' I sez, as cool and perlite as a feller could under sich circumstances. 'Madam,' sez I, "them ducks can't afford to go through no scrimmage like that turkey got into.' She got mad right off and went away, sayin' that poor unprotected widdies had no rights."

"Ephlum, what makes so many cattails grow in dis heah pon?" "Well, I would say! Doan you know? Why, dey grows up from kittens dat people hez drowned in de pon', of course. 'Pears like you wimmen folks doan know nuffin 'bout agliculshah."—Life.

Liberals! see that your name appears on the PRELIMINARY Dominion Voters' List within the next ten days! Don't delay; delay means disfranchisement.

The Franchise Fraud.

Note for a moment the enormous expense involved in the preparation of the voters' lists under the Dominion Franchise Act, not to speak of the trouble and annoyance to individual parties, whose names, unless they personally looks after the matter, will be left off the lists. The change from the old way is utterally without justification. The preparation of the voters' lists is taken from the hands of honest, capable, independent and experienced municipal officers, and put into the hands of inexperienced partizan revising officers. The Act also disfranchises thousands of persons who under the more liberal Ontario Electoral Act, would be entitled to vote. The coming list will disfranchise thousands of Methodist ministers. Every Methodist minister, who has moved to a new field of labour, this year is disfranchised. They vote on income and Sir John's meddlesome Franchise Act requires that every income elector, must have resided one year in aplace previous to the January preceding the preparation of the lists, to entitle him to be registered as a voter. The more there is seen of the practical application of Sir John's Disfranchising Act, the more inexcusable and iniquitous it appears. The Act which involves an additional annual expense of half a million dollars, was not at all necessary. The Ontario Election Act was much more liberal in its provisions and gave the fullest possible enfranchisement short of manhood suffrage. In a public sense the Act was unnecessary, but in a political sense Sir John was fully convinced of its necessity. So lavish had been the corrupt expenditure of his government, that the public funds were run so low, that it was impolitic to make a further use of them for purposes of bribery, direct and indirect, as had been done in the past. Therefore Sir John seized upon the voters' lists and placed them under the care of officers of his own appointing, so that they might be manipulated in his interests, with a view to stifling a full expression of public opinion, escaping condemnation of his misgovernment and securing a partizan verdict in his favor. This is the possibility he has created, and it will be a certainty unless every Liberal in the country and every other honest citizen shall become alive to the importance of seeing that his name is placed upon the voters' lists for Dominion elections. There is no time to be lost; the preliminary lists must be prepared and printed before the first of March next. Liberal electors, do not delay; delay means disfranchisement; disfranchisement means national destruction in a few years, at the terrible pace we are now going.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If Ontario leads in woman's suffrage, New Brunswick has set an example in another direction. The Provincial Liberal government there, has appointed "Miss M. H. McGinley, to be registrar of deeds and wills in and for the County of Gloucester," a position which is usually prized by office seekers because of its lucrativeness. This appointment renders Miss McGinley eligible to be returning-officer at Dominion and local elections. Gradually, but quietly and surely are women pushing to the front, and destroying the monopoly in office-holding, which the lords of creation have so long enjoyed.

We shall not be able before long to tell what Sir Charles Tupper is. What he has been we know, what he does for his $10,000 a year and perquisites, we know not. As a politician, he has generally been regarded as a "Stalwart," but now it appears he has become a "halfbreed," or rather hybrid. The Mail declares that he has been "made a grand cross of St. Michael and St. George." It is to be hoped that this new process of cross-breeding will make our High Commissioner a little more anxious to earn his salary of $10,000. He is now a full-fledged G. C. M. G. These titles are singular things. Adolphe Caron was made a simple knight because he spent twelve millions in suppressing a rebellion, which he and his colleagues, by their oppressive misgovernment, created. George Stephen was made a simple knight because he spent a hundred millions of the people's money. Sir Charles Tupper, who only spent $50,000 on his residence and $10,000 a year, is made a "grand cross of St. Michael and St. George." It would be a fine thing if Her Majesty could institute an order to confer the title of "H. M."—honest man—on our Dominion Ministers and ex-Ministers.

Protectionists claim that the tax on coal is not a tax upon farmers, but the claim is not true. The railways of this country are the principal consumers of coal; and the tax on the Grand Trunk railway alone for this purpose is $300,000 annually. The principal patrons, says the Ottawa Free Press, of the railways are the farmers of this country whose product and purchases form the staple freight of Canadian trains. The increased cost of fuel means higher rates of freight on the railways and higher rates must necessarily come out of the farmers' pockets. Not a farmer's tax forsooth, that is just what it is everywhere.

Dr. Orton, ex-Surgeon-General of the Northwest forces, tells us that the victory of Batoche was won in spite of General Middleton—that if his orders had been carried out, that victory, instead of being a victory, would have been a retreat, and that the rebellion, which was ended then, would not have been crushed, and might have been still in existence. Yet we see that Sir Frederick Middleton gets as a reward for recommending a retreat—a retreat, mind, and to Cana- [illegible] a cash gift of $20,000, while the poor volunteers, who made, almost in the teeth of pusillanimous orders to retire, a charge, which, under the circumstances, has, for dash, exhibitions of personal courage, and success, few parallels, are rewarded simply with a gift of a few stray acres of wild land. And that on the condition that they do settlement duties, whereas most of them have been out of employment or in broken health, racked with rheumatism, crippled with wounds, and have not enough money to buy a plough-share. The gift of the land is practically no gift at all, because it can't be made available by those it was pretended to benefit. Under the circumstances, it is a hollow mockery. Therefore it comes to this: the Canadian volunteers who fought and won, got no reward except the benedictions of a proud and grateful country, while the General, who counselled retreat, puts $20,000 of the people's money in his pocket.

Bridgenorth.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. W. B. Kelly has recalled some of his men from his shanty in Harvey and commenced operations in his saw mill. Mr. J. Brumwell has his mill running on full time also. These changes will help to enliven our village during the remainder of the winter.

Now that the snow has rendered the ice on the lake impassable to skaters, our young people have adopted another kind of amusement. Quite a number took advantage of the mild weather last week to indulge in the pastime termed "sleigh-riding," and repaired to the "big hill" for that purpose, where, to judge from the appearance of the hill at present, a good time was had.

I am sorry to say that Mr. John Young, sr., met with a painful accident last week. I have not been informed how the mishap occurred, but it resulted in the fracture of one of the bones in his right wrist.

The Rev. Mr. St. Dalmas will hold a series of meetings in Union Temple this week.

Miss Annie Smith has left Bridgenorth for Peterborough.

Cecil Sucee has recovered from his illness.

Mr. Norton intends leaving Bridgenorth soon for a residence nearer town.

Two runaways last week, but no damage done in either case.

Halcyon days for this place at present, consequently your correspondent has not much to write about.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The Council met on Monday, the 18th day of January, and, after making the necessary declarations of office and qualification, took their seats. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

Moved by Mr. Garbutt, seconded by Mr. Middleton, that the timber on the tenth concession line between lot 17 and part of lot 18 be granted to Hugh McIlmeyl jr, on condition that he makes a good sleigh road on the centre of the road allowance therefor.—Carried.

The Council appointed John Black as auditor; the Reeve appointed Andrew Young.

James Tindle was appointed assessor, and R. Waram Collector for 1886.

The following claims were ordered to be paid, namely:—Geo. Ayotte, for work on road, $8.00; Gerald Fitzgerald, repairing scraper, 75c; James Middleton, for gravel, $4.60; Joseph Milburn, for digging drain across road, $5.82; and $7 to Miss Roberts to pay for support of Joshua Brown, an Indian, at Nichols Hospital for two weeks.

The Council then adjourned for two weeks.

The Council met on Feb. 1st, pursuant to adjournment, all the members present, the Reeve in the chair. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

A by-law appointing auditors, assessor, and collector passed its several readings and was signed and sealed.

The time for the cutting of timber on road between lots 24 and 25 in 15th concession by H. Stabler, was extended for three years. After verbally arranging the road divisions of the township, the Council adjourned for four weeks.

An Important School Question.

The case of McIntyre v. the school trustees of section eight, of the township of Blanshard, in the county of Perth, was argued on Monday, before the Common Pleas Division Court, Toronto, and is of some interest. The action is by a boy who was expelled for misconduct from school for damages for his expulsion, and at the trial before County Judge Lazers he recovered a verdict for nominal damages and costs. It seems that the school board met upon the case, and without notice to the father, arranged to allow the boy to return upon his rendering an apology. The father objected to this, and the board at the next session allowed the pupil to return after one day's further suspension. This was not objected to and the boy did return, but the board at another meeting cancelled its second resolution and went back to the first one, upon which action was brought. On Monday Mr. Shapley, for the Minister of Education and the school trustees, appealed from the judgment, raising several interesting questions under the Public School Act. Mr. Smith, of St. Mary's, supported the judgment. The court reserved its decision. The chief questions are (1) whether the School Board in considering a case of this kind is bound to give notice to a parent, and (2) whether once having suffered suspension under resolution of the board the pupil could again be punished for the same offence.

Belleville.

The mortgage on the Methodist Tabernacle of about $20,000, has been reduced to $8,000. As the building committee has been paying 7 per cent. on this mortgage, they are about securing a loan at 9 per cent. in the event of which the Star Company will be paid up.

The cost in the recent litigation amounted to $2,492.29, but the bill was reduced to about $1,000 and paid.—Ontario.

Bob Burdette on Curling.

"We went to the Granite rink (Toronto) and watched the curlers. Curling is a game that will probably never become a general or popular sport. The maddening excitement attendant upon this thrilling pastime, which seems to be its great fascination, debars any except the strongest heads and steadiest nerves from venturing into the seething maelstrom of its reckless gaiety. It is called curling because it makes your hair curl to watch it. A man takes a boulder of polished granite with a handle to it, and pushes it away from him. Then it slides along on the track. Two men with brooms walk along in front of it and sweep a clean place for it to slide to. Another man says "Ay, mon." He also remarks at intervals "Soup her oop." A stranger once in a reckless hour joined a company of desperate curlers. In an unguarded moment he said "man" instead of "mon." The frenzied curlers at once tied a "stane" about his neck and chucked him through a hole in the ice.

But then, nonsense aside, everybody knows, who knows anything at all, that a man must be to the manner born to appreciate and enjoy curling. A stranger intermeddleth not with the joy of curlers. The barbarian can never be taught to understand it, and so his life must ever remain incomplete. And even an alien can see that it is more of a game than chess. I hold it to be a solemn, self evident, heaven-born truth, that a man that will play chess for amusement would saw a cord of wood for a joke.

No Longer Jennie Leslie,

But Mrs. James Worfolk—The Young Man to be Discharged.

As a result of a marriage ceremony performed by Rev. Canon Dumoulin, in the office of County Crown Attorney Fenton, in the Toronto court house, on Saturday afternoon, James Worfolk, against whom a true bill was found for being an accessory in the Andrews abortion case, was discharged at the criminal assizes Tuesday. The contracting parties were Worfolk and Jennie Leslie, the girl whom he seduced, and the marriage removes any possibility of the girl giving evidence against him. Among those present were, Hugh McMahon, Q.C., crown counsel; F. Fenton, county crown attorney; W. G. Murdock, Worfolk's counsel; and N. G. Bigelow. The certificate of marriage, which was witnessed by Mr. Bigelow and the girl's father, was handed to the bride, after which she went away in the company of her father, while her husband was taken back to the jail.

Montreal's expenditure so far on smallpox account is $150,000 and there are yet a number of bills to meet.

The discussion aroused in Ottawa by Hon. Wm. Macdougall's lecture is bringing to light the fact that the sufferings of the North-west Indians upon their reserves during the current season have been absolutely frightful.

An Extraordinary Offer.

To All Wanting Employment.

We want Live, Energetic and Capable Agents in every county in the United States and Canada, to sell a patent article of great merit, ON ITS MERITS. An article having a large sale, paying over 100 per cent profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given for each and every county he may secure from us. With all these advantages to our agents and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every householder, it might not be necessary to make an "EXTRAORDINARY OFFER" to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it to show, not only our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its saleability by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents now at work are making from $150 to $600 a month clear and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, ABOVE ALL EXPENSES can return all goods unsold to us and we will refund the money paid for them. Any agent or general agent who would like ten or more counties and work them through subagents for ninety days and fail to clear at least $750 ABOVE ALL EXPENSES, can return all unsold and get their money back. No other employer of agents ever dared to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double the amount we guaranteed; and but two sales a day would give a profit of over $125 a month, and that one of our agents took eighteen orders in one day. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three one cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer. We would like to have the address of all the agents, sewing machine solicitors and carpenters in the country, and ask any reader of this paper who reads this offer to send us at once the name and address of all such they know. Address at once, or you will lose the best chance ever offered to those out of employment to make money.

A TERRIBLE NIGHT.

"How lonely the house is with Edward away!" said Mary Reeves to her friend, Isabel Morton: "I always feel as if the place were haunted unless he is here at night."

"There is certainly an 'eerie' look about this room," replied Miss Morton, glancing round the spacious apartment with its black oak wainscoting and old-fashioned, sombre furniture, on which the fire-light was playing fitfully, the candles on the mantlepiece only serving to emphasize the gloom of the background; "I wonder you do not have gas laid on and make your drawing-room a blaze of light on such occasions."

"That would cost money; we cannot afford to do so. You forget how very poor we were left owing to papa's debts."

"And his extravagance," thought Miss Morton.

"Well," she said aloud, "I hope and trust that Edward will only be away for one evening, or I shall be obliged to go away. The furniture in my room creaks in the most awful manner in the middle of the night, and the shadows are something terrific. If I hadn't a night-light I should go out of my mind."

"But it is the light which makes the shadows!"

"All the same, I should die without it. But for the consciousness that my room is between yours and Edward's I really could not stay here."

"It is a pity you came!" said Mary, shortly.

The entrance of the servant with a supper-tray put a stop to the conversation.

Oldby Manor was an ancient and large house, which had been handed down from the father to son, generation after generation. But while its revenues had decreased, the passion for spending money with its owners had steadily increased, so that by degrees the old acres and timber had been sold, and only the house remained. Money was spent on personal pleasure, gambling, horse-racing, and so on; very little was ever bestowed on the dwelling, and gradually it fell into decay.

There were long, rambling corridors, huge faded-looking rooms, ancient suits of rusty armor; altogether it was a fit habitation for a ghost, as Mary Reeves often said.

On their father's death, Edward found himself left with next to nothing, and one solitary domestic was all they could afford to keep, for the young man had a righteous horror of debt. Most of the rooms were locked up and deserted; it was hopeless to keep them clean and in a state of preservation, therefore, Mary and Edward made no attempt to do so, but devoted all their energies to keeping some five or six tolerably habitable.

Supper over, the girls drew their chairs to the fire and talked.

It was a wild night, the wind was blowing a hurricane, while a storm of rain and sleet dashed against the windows.

"Ugh! this is awful," said Miss Morton, whose fear was now growing; "I wouldn't live in such a place for any sum of money you could offer me."

"It would be a delightful place if it were renovated, and there were plenty of servants and company," returned Mary, sharply.

Now, Miss Morton was not only a very pretty girl, but an heiress in addition, and Mary had invited her down in the hope that she and Edward might eventually captivate one another, for he was a fine, handsome young man.

Up to the present moment, however, though friendly enough, they had not given any apparent token of mutual regard. In reality he loved her, but, being poor, was too proud to propose to so rich a girl:

"Oh, yes, if," said Isabel Morton.

The ivy was now tapping against the windows, making a horrible sound.

"Suppose we light some more candles and sit up all night?" she continued.

Mary shook her head. "We should look so washed out to-morrow, and you know Edward is going to bring his great friend, Mr. Parker." Isabel smiled. "And we must look charming in order to fascinate this rich and desirable young man!"

"Here is your candle," said Mary, rising: "Susan is gone to bed, and we must go also."

Isabel gave a shiver as the mantelpiece candles were blown out.

Stepping into the corridor, they heard the wind wailing along the passages and by the corners of the house. The girls said good-night and parted: Isabel feeling strongly inclined to ask Mary to sleep with her. The ivy made such a fearful noise against her casement that, after a pause, she heroically nerved herself to put aside the curtains and look out.

But the view added to her fears, for through the black night she could just see the tower of the old church near, and the glimmer of the white gravestones. She replaced the curtains, and, in fear and trembling, went to bed, leaving her candle burning in addition to the nightlight.

But sleep she could not, every nerve seemed alive. She was in a state of terror as the wind boomed down the chimney and almost extinguished the lights. More than once she knocked at the wall, hoping to arouse Mary, but that young lady was fast asleep and did not hear. Twelve o'clock struck, then one, two, three.

It was just after the church clock had solemnly sounded three that Isabel sat up in bed, her eyes starting with horror. For she had distinctly heard a loud report in the house, the report of a pistol, and she knew that there were no fire-arms in the house except Edward's, which were always locked up. Who then was this who, in the dead of the night, had invaded the premises?

The sound had aroused Mary, who came in the next minute in her dressing-gown, her face white with terror.

For a few moments the two girls clung to one another and said nothing. Then Mary spoke.

"We must go and see what it is."

"We can't," said Isabel.

"But suppose someone has attacked poor old Susan?"

"What good could we do? We can't go."

"If someone has broken in he will probably murder us also if we make no effort to escape," said Mary, whose spirit was now roused. "Let us dress and then look round."

With trembling fingers they managed to attire themselves hurriedly, and, in deadly fear, then, armed with the fire-arms, made their way towards Susan's room, which was at some little distance, near the kitchen.

Isabel's limbs shook she could scarcely walk, and yet she knew that it would have been worse to have remained behind. The armor on the walls clattered horribly, the windows rattled. Arm-in-arm the girls advanced slowly, Mary shading the candle she carried with her hand.

But within a few paces of Susan's room she stood still, appalled, for, from beneath the wainscot of the apartment adjoining, a stream of dark red blood was slowly oozing.

With a shriek they both fled down the corridor, throwing away the weapons, clinging to one another in mad terror, and trying to make their way to the front door.

Then Mary remembered the many and heavy fastenings to that door, and knew that her hands would refuse to undo them quickly enough.

"We must break one of the drawing-room windows," she said: and, after much stumbling over the furniture, they managed to traverse the large room.

With a desperate courage, Mary took up a footstool and dashed it through the glass. The aperture thus made admitted of the egress of both, although Isabel cut her hand somewhat badly. Quite unheeding this, she ran across the garden with Mary, the blood flowing on to her dress. But in her excitement she did not notice this, and felt no pain. It was not until the girls had left the grounds and gained the high road that they spoke to one another. The wind was still raging, the rain falling, and the road very lonely, but anything was better than remaining in that dreadful house where murder had been committed.

"Poor old Susan," said Mary, mournfully, "she was such a faithful good creature."

"Where are we going?" asked Isabel.

"We must make our way to the police station at Everton, the nearest town, for we are quite away from any neighbors here; most of them live in the by-lanes at some little distance."

The girls walked on steadily for three miles, their trepidation too great for conversation.

The morning began to dawn when lo! the clatter of horses' hoofs was heard, and the figures of two horsemen loomed dimly in sight. They would have passed by rapidly had not Isabel screamed, "Stop! stop! we want your help."

The two gentleman reined in their horses, and one dismounted.

Without another word Isabel threw her arms round his neck and sobbed. It was Edward. In great amazement he recognized her, quite at a loss to account both for her appearance and the warm greeting she had given him. And then he saw the blood on her dress, and in great alarm exclaimed: "Why, my darling, what is the matter? What has happened?"

Meantime, his friend had also dismounted, and was questioning Mary.

On hearing the facts, a brief consultation took place between the two gentlemen. Mr. Parker was in favor of taking the young ladies into Everton and returning with the police, but Edward urged that, as poor Susan might not be killed but only injured, it would be inhuman to leave her longer alone.

"If there are any ruffians about, you and I will have to show fight," he said; "we shall go quicker if we take the girls up on our horses."

So he lifted Isabel up in front of him, putting his arm round her waist, and Mr. Parker did the same for Mary, and, in spite of the dreadful circumstances, he discovered that she was a pretty girl, and that he was very comfortable.

"But how did you come here?" she asked.

"We took the night train, and discovered, too late, that it stopped ten miles from Everton. There was nothing for it but ride."

"You could have stayed at the inn."

"Ted insisted on going on."

The conversation between the other pair had become very tender, although on approaching Oldby Manor Isabel again began to shiver. They walked the horses up to the house and left them, making their way to the drawing-room window.

"So you two valiant young women were afraid to see poor Susan, afraid even to unbolt the front door," said Edward; but at the same time his face wore a look of grave concern, for he was aware there might be peril in store for them all.

The struggling light caused every object to look black. In silence the quartette wended their way through the corridors to a short distance from Susan's room.

"Now," said Edward, "if any ruffian comes out to tackle us, Parker and I will settle him, and you girls had better scream; screaming has rather a good effect on burglars, I believe."

He had a heavy stick in his hand, while Mr. Parker held a pistol.

The girls' hearts beat to suffocation as they saw the red stream, and the young men had a very uncomfortable sensation. Edward stepped across, followed by the others. He grasped the handle of Susan's door, turned it resolutely, and went in.

To all appearance the old woman was sleeping peacefully still in her bed, but the light was uncertain, and it was possible she might be dead.

He laid his hand gently on her shoulder, and shook her slightly.

"Dear, dear, dear!" she exclaimed, looking in wonder at the solemn faces around her, "whatever is the matter, Master Edward?"

"I am truly glad to find you alive and unhurt," he exclaimed, with a feeling: "have you not been disturbed in the night?"

"No, sir; but it looks as if I ought to get up with so much company up before me."

With hearty relief they left the room. But how was the blood to be accounted for?

Edward prepared to enter the room whence it had flowed, but Isabel threw her arms round his neck and implored him, for her sake, not to do so.

"I must, my darling," he said, resolutely; and entering, shut the door.

Silence ensued, a long, dreadful silence. None of the party moved until Mr. Parker said:

"It is absurd of Ted to have shut the door; I shall go and see what he is about."

The girls accompanied him. There was Edward, sitting down on a chair, convulsed with laughter, unable to speak.

"What is it, Ted?" asked Mr. Parker, looking anxiously around.

Edward pointed to a huge jar, his laughter still uncontrollable.

And then the explanation of their fright occurred to everyone. The room was a store room, a jar of pickled cabbage had fermented and burst, and this was the cause of the red stream!

* * * * * *

Oldby Manor is no longer eerie and desolate; it has been completely renovated, while merry children run about, and hosts of guests and servants fill the deserted chambers. Edward does not forget the joke against his wife, while Mary, who is now Mrs. Parker, declares that it is only a man who could see a joke in the affair at all.

Miss Kate Sanborn told the Critic's "Lounger" that the grasshopper on the cover of her "Wit of Women" is a katydid. "Miss Rose Cleveland," she said, "had a rose on the cover of her book, so I chose a katydid for mine. All my friends call me Katy, and this is the book that Katy did."

The moderation in drinking practiced by their American visitors tells heavily on the profits of the great hotels in London and other cities frequented by them. One proprietor felt that he had good cause for complaint when Mr. Mackay engaged an expensive suite of rooms for six weeks, and yet drank only three shillings and sixpence worth of wine during the time.

Organ Recital.

Prof. Parker's Organ Recital in St. Paul's church yesterday evening was a musical treat of rare excellence. The audience was not as large as the entertainment merited. The professor played his best, and was assisted in catering to the ear by some of the best local talent in town. The organ solos, were well chosen and given in masterly style (rivaling Rubenstien on his piano), the result of careful study and presistent practice. The music produced would have delighted the composers had they been privileged to listen. The choir of twenty-four chosen voices, sang their sweetest in several charming choruses, filling the church with strains of delightful music. Mr. Craven contributed two capital solos, or "arias" in good voice and style. Mrs. Chambers sang beautifully in her clearest and sweetest voice several solos. Mrs. R. H. Deanistoun also contributed two pretty solos in a sweet and sympathetic voice. Miss Stevens, Mr. Manning and Mr. Baguley, were the solosists in one of the choruses. The programme was as follows :—

Both Blanks.

The Police Court was a blank this morning, and the market was almost the same, although wood has been coming in pretty freely recently. There were also some meats offered. The frigid state of the weather evidently kept at home farmers, who had no wood to sell.

A day or two ago we gave a list of the performers who would take part in the entertainment. A great variety of first-class musicians compose this list, and it is probable that no concert with so unique, original and attractive a musical bill of fare has ever been presented to the public of Peterborough. Dont forget the date, Friday, February 12th. Tickets 25 and 35 cents. Don't make any engagement for the above date that will deprive you of the pleasure of enjoying this great ncert.

Peterborough Curlers W'n the Medal.

The three rinks of the Peterborough curling club who played at Lindsay yesterday with the Orillia club, in the draw for the Caledonian medal, defeated their opponents by ten shots and became possessors of the medal. The Lindsay curlers received both the visiting rinks and escorted them to the field of fight. The Peterborough men were hopeful and determined, while the Orillia men were confident of a victory, having swept everything before them this season. They last year won the Ontario tankard and the championship of Ontario, and have for a number of years been one of the foremost clubs in Canada. The rinks skipped by Messrs. W. G. Ferguson and George Dunsford, opposed by J. McCosh and W. N. Harvey, took the ice during the morning. The playing was keen and excitement high. The ice was "tricky" and some peculiar play was the result. Mr. J. McCosh scored an eight-ender over Mr. W. G. Ferguson, a feat unparalleled in the history of the oldest curlers present. Mr. Ferguson changed the order of events by scoring a seven-ender over Mr. McCosh, which is also a very spare play. When the first two rinks had played the result was Skip Ferguson's rink three shots ahead, and Skip Dunsford's rink one shot behind. Although Peterborough had two shots to the good, the Orillias were confident of winning, as Mr. Main, who opposed Dr. Boucher in the afternoon, had played eighteen games this season and won every one. The Orillias secured the first end, securing three. From that time forward the Peterboroughs led, at the close of the game, Dr. Boucher's rink leading their opponents by eight shots. The following are the rinks and scores :—

PETERBOROUGH.		ORILLIA.

Mr. Jas. Keith, of Lindsay, as referee, performed the duties devolving upon him impartially and to the satisfaction of both clubs. At the finish of the game the contesting rinks parted the best of friends after showing their appreciation of each other in the usual way. This morning the victors tell of their glorious fight in a disinterested tone, and praise the Orillia curlers to the skies. The medal will in all probability remain one of the club trophies.

Hastings.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The members of the Canadian branch of the Harlem Commons Syndicate must feel gratified at the way the shares are being disposed of, in and around Hastings. On Friday eight were sold, and Saturday was quite a boom, as it was the last day they were to be sold at $50; after that day there will be a very few to dispose of at $100 per share.

What is Needed

By every man and woman if they desire to secure comfort in this world is a corn sheller. Putnam's Corn Extractor shells corns in two or three days and without discomfort or pain. A hundred imitations prove the merit of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor, which is always sure, safe and painless. See signature of Polson & Co. on each bottle. Sold by medicine dealers. d25-6t-w5-1t

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

Nerviline, What is it?

Polson's NERVILINE is a combination of the most potent pain relieving substances known to medical science. The constant progress made in this department of science points upward and onward. Nerviline is the latest development in this movement, and embodies the latest discoveries. For neuralgia, cramps, pains in the head—external, internal, and local—Nerviline has no equal. CARD OF THANKS.

PETERBOROUGH, Jan. 2d, 1886.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance.

Expulsion of the Poles from Germany.

The expulsion of the Poles from Germany, announced by Prince Bismarck in his recent speech, is one of the most cold-blooded and atrocious acts of oppression on a long-suffering people, that could well be imagined. The people of the provinces of Prussia, which formerly constituted a portion of the ill-fated Polish kingdom, have never taken kindly to German rule. Their representatives form a distinct party in German politics, just as the Irish do in English affairs. Bismarck, with an utter disregard of the suffering and hardship involved, has expelled a large number of Poles of foreign birth from German territory, and has announced his intention of following up this merciless policy by expropriating the lands of Polish proprietors, driving out the inhabitants and filling their places with German settlers. The Poles are not to be blamed for their restlessness under German rule and their desire to restore their ancient kingdom. The brutality of Bismarck in ordering a wholesale eviction will fail in it object and will only intensify the spirit of nationality he seeks to crush.

It is surprising that an intelligent, freedom-loving, and intellectual people should submit so patiently to the rule of such a heartless despot as Bismarck, who makes war as relentlessly on liberty of speech and publication among Germans as he does against the persecuted remnant of the Polish nation. But, like many other people, they are so blinded by the glamor of military glory and a pseudo-patriotism that they are prepared to tolerate many things in their rulers which are contrary to all enlightened and progressive principles of government. It is not wonderful that socialism and anarchism make headway where such heartless cruelties as Bismarck has been guilty of are perpetrated in the name of public order and national safety.—News.

Board of Education.

First Meeting of the New Board—Mr. Jas. Stevenson Again Appointed Chairman—Mr. Jas. Stratton Appointed Inspector for the Year—An Extra Fee Imposed on Non-resident Collegiate Institute Pupils—The Five Per Cent. Balance Demanded From the Town Council—The Property Committee Authorized to Procure a Proper Site for a School in the North Ward.

A meeting of the newly elected Board of Education for the town of Peterborough, was held in the Council Chamber, yesterday, at four o'clock, pursuant to statute.

The members having taken the necessary declaration of office, filed their certificates and took their seats.

There were present, Messrs. Jas. Stevenson, A. Rutherford, R. W. Krett, R. Weir, J. B. McWilliams, J. R. Stratton, Dr. Burnham, W. H. Wrighton, John Sawers, Jas. Henry, D.W. Dumble and Jas. Kendry.

The Secretary called the meeting to order and reported the new members elected, Geo. B. Sproule, H. Deane and J. B. McWilliams by acclamation, Mr. Errett by vote and Mr. Jas. Henry appointed by the Separate School Board, and Messrs. Jas. Kendry and A. Rutherford appointed by the Town Council. Mr. McWilliams was the only new member, taking the place of Mr. M. Millar, who did not seek re-election.

Mr. Dumble rose and said changes were sometimes desirable, but under the present circumstances he thought it would be unwise to change their chairman. They might go farther and fare worse. He moved, seconded by Mr. Kendry, that Mr. Jas. Stevenson be chairman for the ensuing year.

There being no other nomination the Secretary declared Mr. Stevenson elected.

Mr. Stevenson, on taking the chair, in a short speech thanked the members for the honor conferred upon him for the 20th year. He regretted the County Council had refused to give a grant to the Collegiate Institute. He did not look for much more help from that source. They would have to take some steps to make up the deficiency. There was hope that the County Council might change their attitude in June; in the meantime the county should pay for their school privileges. He hoped the year would be a prosperous one. He was confident Dr. Tassie would bring the school to what it should be. He thought they had, on the whole, a very efficient staff of teachers and, under proper management, the schools would flourish. They would, of necessity, be called upon to build a school in the north end of the town. He was confident of the support of the Board in advancing the interests of the school.

INSPECTOR APPOINTED.

Moved by Mr. Errett, seconded by Mr. Weir, that Mr. Jas. Stratton be appointed Inspector for the current year and that the duties and salary be the same as last year.—Carried.

Mr. Errett moved that an adjournment be made until 8 o'clock this evening.

Mr. Kendry moved in amendment, seconded by Dr. Burnham,—that the business be now gone on with.—Carried.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Moved by Dr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Wier,—that Messrs. Dumble, Henry, Errett, Rutherford, Wrighton and the mover and seconder be a committee to strike the Standing Committees for the year.—Carried.

The committee took a back seat for five minutes and reported recommended that the following be the Standing Committees for the year.

SUPERVISION COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Stratton, Burnham, McWilliams, Henry and Denne.

FINANCE.—Messrs. Errett, Wrighton, McWilliams, Sawers and Kendry.

APPOINTMENTS.—Messrs. Stratton, Dumble, Henry, Burnham, Rutherford, Erett and Weir.

PROPERTY.—Messrs. Wrighton, Sproule, Cox, Sawers, Kendry, and Rutherford.

Mr. Dumble moved the adoption of the report.

Mr. Sawers moved in amendment, seconded Mr. Stratton, that Mr. Denne's name be added to the Committee on Appointments.

Moved by Mr. Kendry, as an amendment to the amendment, that the whole Board be the Committee on Appointments.

Mr. Sawers thought Mr. Henry should not be on the Committee on Appointments; neither should Mr. Errett, as he was an interested party.

Mr. Dumble thought there was nothing to disqualify Mr. Errett, and to appoint the whole Council a committee looked suspicious and showed a want of confidence.

Mr. Stratton said the law which gave the Separate School the appointing of a representative on the High School Board also defined his duties, and in that law there was no expression given that the representative was disqualified from acting on such committee. When matters pertaining to the High School were under its consideration he would have a voice, and only then. He was certain Mr. Henry knew his position and would act accordingly.

On a vote being taken, the amendments were lost, and the motion to adopt the report was carried.

SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

Moved by Mr. Stratton, seconded by Mr. McWilliams, that the School Supervision Committee be requested to ask for tenders from the bookstores for the necessary stationery, chalk, pens and pencils for the use of the schools for the current year, and that they purchase the quantity required.—Carried.

EXTRA FEES.

Moved by Mr. Errett, seconded by Mr. Dumble,—Whereas by an agreement entered into by and between the Board of Education of the Town of Peterborough and the County Council of the County of Peterborough, it was agreed that, on condition of said County Council granting the sum of $750 per year to the said Collegiate Institute, the pupils attending said Institute, properly belonging to the said County and resident outside of the town limits, were to be admitted to said institution at 50cts. per month, the same as resident town pupils, and whereas the said County Council at its last sittings refused to continue said grant, therefore for the purpose of providing against a portion of said loss to the income of the Board, caused by the withdrawal of said grant, the fees to be paid by County pupils (of the County of Peterborough) attending the Institute, shall be one dollar per month, (in advance), commencing the 1st of February, 1886, and that the Principal is hereby directed to collect the same till 1st July next.

Provided that if said County Council, at its next sittings, shall restore said grant of $750 a year to the Board, then the several sums paid by such pupils in excess of rates paid by the town pupils, who continue in attendance at said Institute, will be refunded them.

Mr. Errett said he had changed his mind on this subject since this matter was before the Board last. He thought that the pupils now attending the school should not be interfered with, as they were not to blame for the action of the county council. They came here feeling that the fees would be the same as last year and it would be a great hardship to some of them to impose heavy fees in the middle of the term.

Mr. Stratton said he also had changed his mind. When this matter was last before the Board he voted for and urged very liberal terms for county pupils, notwithstanding that the council had refused a grant. He had thought that the county would return the favour bestowed on their pupils by this Board, but he had been disappointed. Now, he would deal with them fairly, but on business principles. He was not in favour of allowing 57 pupils to attend the Institute from the county unless they or their representatives paid a little to assist in maintaining the Institute. He believed the County Council, in refusing the grant, were not representing the will of the people. However, he said we had to deal with things as they are and the motion of Mr. Errett placing the fees at one dollar per month was not sufficient, considering that one third of the pupils were from the county. He thought that by adopting the amendment he was about to move, this board by June would be able to know the opinion of the municipalities, inasmuch as the pupils would have an opportunity of working up those in favor of the grant to so express themselves to their representatives. The County Council individually were in favor of the grant, but they seemed to think that their constituents were opposed to it, and so they voted accordingly. He moved,

That whereas there are now attending the Peterborough Collegiate Institute pupils, of whom about 117 are residents of the town, and 57 are residents of the county, and whereas it is just and equitable that the expenditure of the said school should be fairly and proportionately divided between the town and county, according to the benefits derived, and whereas the expenditure of the said school will be about $4,700 yearly, over and above the school grants, and the County Council of Peterborough has refused to grant to this Board the sum of $750 as requested, or in fact any sum towards the maintenance of such Institute for the current year, and it is desirable that the Collegiate Institute should be retained in its present high state of efficiency,—this Board therefore resolves that pupils attending the Collegiate Institute, not being residents of the town, pay the following fees, viz: For the terms between the Christmas vacation and the summer vacation, the sum of $15, of which one half shall be payable on the first school day after the Christmas vacation, and one half on the 1st day of April following; for the term between the summer vacation and the Christmas vacation the sum of $10, of which one half shall be payable on the first day of September, and one half on the 1st day of November in such term. These fees to be collected from all pupils not residents of the town, except those from Ashburnham, who shall be admitted on the same terms which existed immediately prior to the County grant last year. But should the County Council in its next session in June, see fit to reconsider their present motion, and make the same grant to the Collegiate Institute as last year, then all fees collected under this resolution, over and above the usual monthly fee, paid by resident pupils, shall be refunded to the pupils from whom collected, in the County of Peterborough. This resolution to take effect on and after the first of March. Mr. Wrighton seconded the resolution.

Mr. Rutherford said he would admit that they had entered into a contract with the pupils, but it was with the understanding that they should get a grant from the County. The County had stood on its dignity long enough and it was time the Board stood in its dignity. He thought the Government should pass a law compelling counties to pay for their school privileges. The county would be away in the background if it was not for the town. He would be in favor of an indignation meeting. He believed the majority of the people in the county were in favor of giving a grant. There were many people in the county who were more enlightened on the subject than their representatives at the County Council. He was not in favor of educating farmer's sons and daughters at the town's expense. He thought Mr. Stratton's motion was a move in the right direction, and would support it. He was surprised at Mr. Errett making the motion he had as he was in favor of a high tariff of fees a short time ago.

Mr. Errett said he was of the same opinion yet, and was in favor of high rates of fees. He did not object to Mr. Stratton's motion, but he considered it would be a breach of faith with the pupils to impose a higher fee this term. They had passed a resolution fixing the fee. Parties acting upon this resolution had sent their children to the school. He would be willing to support the amendment if it did not come in force until next term. It was a question as to whether they should break faith with the pupils or lose the amount of the difference.

Mr. Rutherford remarked that they should break faith as the County Council had done.

Mr. Dumble agreed with Mr. Errett. He came to the conclusion that the Board was not called upon to educate the pupils from the county for nothing. Imposing a higher rate might cause a large number of the pupils from outside the town to leave the schools. The larger the attendance the larger the staff and the institution, and the larger the institution the more benefit it would be to the town. He held a list of the non-resident pupils attending the Collegiate Institute, with the names of the municipalities to which they belong, which he read as follows:—

COLL. INS. NON-RESIDENT PUPILS.

LIBERALS, LOOK ALIVE!

Now is the time to be alive to the importance of every Liberal name being put on the "perliminary" list—the basis of all future lists under the Dominion Franchise Act.

Tory newspapers do not need to appeal to individual members of their party, to take action, for Sir John's revising officers are paid by the people of Canada to work in the interest of the Conservative party, and Conservative "unions" are working night and and day to see that every Conservative vote goes on the first list.

Every Liberal elector has to look out for himself personally, if he desires to have a vote at the next general Dominion election. The EXAMINER has published the qualifications necessary to constitute a voter; but the grand qualification is to get your name on the first list.

If you are qualified, and are not on the assessment roll, you must send to the revising officer or his clerk AT ONCE a declaration of qualification.

You can obtain the necessary forms of application for the West Riding by applying to Mr. R. E. Wood, barrister, Mr. E. B. Stone, barrister, or at the EXAMINER Office, and for the East Riding from Mr. W. A. Stratton, barrister.

There is not a moment to lose. The first lists must be made up, printed and distributed before the first of March.

Don't delay; delay means disfranchisement.

The Dominion Finances.

Let us look at the fiscal and financial policy. They declared that Mr. Mackenzie's expenditure was too high, and promised to reduce it. They have increased it about 50 per cent. They declared his taxation burdensome, and promised not to raise it. They have raised it about 50 per cent. They condemned his taxation as unequal, and promised to readjust it. They have redressed the inequality by imposing great sectional taxes, enormous burdens on prime necessaries of life, and rates of duty on important staples used by the poor about twice as high as that laid on the rich. They declare his deficits scandalous and disastrous, but notwithstanding the vast increase in taxes they have produced magnificent deficits of their own. (Hear, hear.) And think for a moment what these deficits would be, had you still the misfortune to be taxed as highly as in Mr. Mackenzie's time. Think of it, and measure the failure of these men in finance! They blamed Mr. Mackenzie for proposing a modest surplus of $300,000, and declared that he had no right to levy that large sum in excess of the actual demands of Government, and should reduce the taxes at once. They by their great added duties collected surpluses of $20,000,000, of which they boasted as an evidence of statesmanship; and they refused to reduce the taxes, though we warned them of the result. The result is now before you—a reckless increase of the public charge, until it has reached and passed the capacities of the enlarged revenue, and you are face to face with enhanced obligations, vast taxation and an empty exchequer. They complained of Mr. Mackenzie's increase of the public debt, created in fulfillment of their own settled policy. They have enlarged that debt beyond the wildest conjectures of 1878 or even 1882, and have thus, apart from the heavy charge of redemption, absorbed all the benefit derivable from the lowest rate of interest over the world. They have drawn from the people in duties and deposits, and permanently sunk, enormous sums which would otherwise have gone into circulation; and they have thus increased the stringency and clogged the wheels of trade. They promised by a system of restriction and taxation to legislate into great and permanent prosperity the manufacturing and agricultural industries. We predicted that their system would result, as to manufacturers, in the abstraction for a varying period of inordinate profits from the people, and then in an unwholesome stimulus and an unwise application of capital; that with our small population a glut would soon ensue; and that there would follow demoralization of trade and distress alike to manufacturer and operative. Look at the main glories of their policy, the cotton industries, the woollen industries, the sugar industries, for examples, and read in their records the fulfillment of our prediction. They have regulated the flour milling industry to death.—Hon. E. Blake.

Beer in Scott Act Counties.

OTTAWA, Feb. 3.—The annual meeting of the Ontario Brewers' Association was held at the Russell House to-day. Representatives of the brewing industry throughout the Province were present. A list of proposed amendments to the liquor law so as to allow of the sale of ale and beer in Scott Act counties was considered. The matter will be brought before Parliament at the next session.

Board of Education.

to the town of about $200 a year. It was a complicated question. The principle of Mr. Stratton's motion was right, but he thought the Board would have to let the fee remain as it is for the present. If the County Council do not make a grant in June, they would know how to act. He thought the government might deal with the matter. It would be in the interest of the town to leave the fee as it is.

The Chairman said he had had some conversation with the Principal of the Institute on the subject, and Dr. Tassie was of opinion that if the fee was raised, a number would be obliged to leave. Amongst these would be two boys from Douro who ranked high in the school. The Principal expressed his willingness to pay for these sooner than that they should leave. He thought that raising the fee would be breaking faith. Mr. Strattons motion was perfectly right, but it would be unfair.

Mr. Rutherford said he would be in favor of allowing Ashburnham, Lakefield, and Norwood pupils to attend the school at the same rate as residents, as Messrs. Burnham, Strickland and Stephens at the County Council had voted for the grant.

Mr. McWilliams said he had an amendment which would settle the matter.

Mr. Stratton said he would agree to amend his motion by making the rate $2 a month if the Board were in favor of the change. Mr. Dumble had assumed and calculated that all the non-resident pupils would leave. He did not think they would, but was of the opinion if they did, they would influence the township Reeves to vote for a grant, by letting them see they were injuring their own interests. Ashburnham should have the same privilege as residents. Mr. Burnham had done all in his power to get the grant for the Board. He did not believe the majority of the county were opposed to a grant. The reeves of townships most benefitted by the school were the most opposed to the grant, viz.: the Reeves of Douro, Keniamore and North Monaghan. If his motion was carried and the fee imposed, they would know where to find them in June.

Mr. Dumble said the fee could not be raised for February.

Mr. Rutherford said the County Inspector strongly advocated a grant to the Institute and the county were very much to blame for not taking the advice of their best informed servant in this matter.

Mr. McWilliams said he would move an amendment to Mr. Stratton's amendment, making the fee $2 a month payable in advance. The object was that there were many who would be greatly inconvenienced if compelled to pay for a quarter in advance, who would be able to pay $2 a month.

Mr. McWilliams then moved as an amendment to the amendment, seconded by Dr. Burnham, that all after the words "residents of the town," in the amendment be struck out and the following substituted.—And Ashburnham, pay the sum of two dollars per month in advance. But should the County Council in its next session in June see fit to reconsider their present motion and make the same grant to the Collegiate Institute as last year, then all fees collected under this resolution over and above the usual monthly fee, paid by resident pupils, shall be refunded to the pupils, who reside in the county from whom collected, and this resolution does not take effect until 1st of March.—Carried.

The amendment as amended by Mr. McWilliam's motion was then carried, making the fee $2 per month, payable in advance, for all pupils attending the Institute from outside the town and Ashburnham, on and after the 1st of March.

NO. 4 WARD SCHOOL BUILDING.

Moved by Mr. Kendry, seconded by Mr. Sawers, that the property committee be authorized to take steps to procure a proper site for the erection of a school for No. 4 Ward, and report to this Board. Carried.

BALANCES DEMANDED.

Moved by Errett, seconded by Mr. Wier, that the Secretary be instructed to demand from the Town Council, all balances of assessment for this Board, due last year and the year before.

Mr. Errett said the amount had been collected for school purposes, and the Board was entitled to it.

Mr. Stratton said the amount had been credited to the Board by the Town Clerk, as shown by his books.

Mr. Rutherford thought the Board should apply to the Council for last year's amount; as the amount for the year before had been credited to them, they should not ask for it twice.

Mr. Dumble said if the Board got the money it was all right, and there was no use higgling about it. He wanted to know if the Secretary had been notified that the money had been credited to them.

Mr. Errett said the Board would be charged with striking a rate when they did not get the amount collected. It would appear upon the Town Clerk's books as money collected for school purposes, and it should be used for such, and not go into the general funds of the town.

Mr. Stratton said it appeared to him the Board got the money all the same, but he would be satisfied that Mr. Errett's motion should pass.

A vote was taken and the motion passed.

Referred to Supervision Committee.

An account from the Times Printing Company for advertising the annual statement was received.

Moved by Dr. Burnham, seconded by Mr. Sawers,—that $25 be divided between the papers for printing the annual statement.—Carried.

COMPLAINTS.

Mr. Dumble informed the Board that several complaints had been made to him about the janitor. The schools were not kept in proper order. He suggested that the chairman speak to the janitor on the subject. The janitor, besides being a standing nuisance, was also impudent and discourteous.

Mr. Stratton enquired what mode of school punishment was supposed to be inflicted. A boy attending the Central School had been struck over the head with a ruler and was badly cut. It must have been an accident, as the boy would not stand to be punished.

Mr. Dumble said the Principal of the school was the person to inflict punishment, and a strap was provided for the purpose.

Mr. Rutherford complained that by the rules of the school pupils were kept out in the cold for ten or fifteen minutes at a time, during prayers and at the noon hour. He thought they should have some room to go to.—Referred to School Supervision Committee.

The meeting then adjourned.

Living in Washington.

Washington life in any form is costly. It was not so in the old times, or as late as the seventies, but at last the rich and fashionable visitors have done their perfect work in this city, as in Paris and Newport. One way to live in Washington, of course, is to go to a hotel, and this way is not so very much costlier than others, after all. Another way is to buy or rent a house outright. But by far the larger part of the visiting contingent seek a suite of rooms, either furnished or unfurnished, as the case may be, with board. A suite of two or three furnished rooms in any desirable location will cost a man and wife all the way from $80 to $150 a month. Very stylish apartments will run still higher. Board ranges from $20 to $150 or more a month for each individual. There is [illegible] peculiar to Washington, which is extensively used, but which cannot be conscientiously recommended. This is to take a suite without board and have meals brought to one's room by a caterer. There are many of these caterers here, and they do their work as well as is possible in the nature of the case. They charge only about $25 a month apiece, and furnish an abundance of good food as expeditiously as they can. But the inconveniences and drawbacks of the plan are obvious. The food has to be cooked at the caterer's headquarters and carried in trams to his patrons' homes. Then the table has to be set and the viands extracted from the vehicle and placed upon the dishes. By this time all the cooked articles have become cold and must be heated again over the fire or an alcohol lamp. All the courses are brought in at once, and while one is being eaten the next is cooling and becoming spoiled. In fact, the whole meal is spoiled before it reaches the house. Capital Letter to Boston Traveller.

A Fish Story.

Hostetter McGinnis had just returned from fishing on Onion creek, and was telling Parson Surplus Eel all about it.

"You should not tell such awful lies about the number and weight of the fish you don't catch," remarked the parson.

"It's not my fault. I am not to blame, Parson Eel."

"Who is to blame?"

"The fish, of course. If they had bit as they should I would not have to lie. You ought to go out on Onion creek and try your luck, parson."

"Why so, Mr. McGinnis?"

"Because, I think you would make a big haul. Didn't you ever read about that miraculous draft of fishes that Peter and the other apostles had when they went fishing with a seine in Galilee bayou? You are a heap smarter man than Peter ever dared be. When you go I want to go along with you, and we will have a high old time, you bet."—Texas Siftings.

"Mystery gold" is an alloy resembling gold in appearance and weight, and withstands the jeweler's test of strong acids. Its analysis is given as follows: Silver, 2.48; platinum, 32.02; copper, by difference, 65.50. Strong boiling in nitro acid, even when an article made of it is left in it for some time, has apparently no effect upon the alloy, which is coming extensively into use.

The Bachelor's Soliloquy.

To be, or not to be, that is the question—
Whether 'tis better in the main, to suffer
The slight discomforts of unmarried fortune
Or to take arms against this life of bubbles,
And by proposing, end them! A wife! to flirt
No more; and, by a wife, to say we end
The heartaches and the thousand nervous shocks
That bachelors are heir to. 'Tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished. To try to keep Accounts! perchance outrun—aye, there's the rub,
For in that dream of bliss what bliss may come,
Which now we shuffle off with little toil,
But then must pay. There's the prospect
That makes men shy to venture on a wife.
For who would bear the quick farewells of time,
The comic song, the fast man's company,
The pangs of secret love, the coquette's play,
The solitary lodging wherein burns
The impatient spirit at its lonely fate,
But that the dread of something past a jest—
That undiscovered station, from whose bourne
No bachelor returns, mars the will,
And makes us rather bear the ills we have
Than fly to others we know not of;
Thus caution does make cowards of us all,
And in a state of weak irresolution,
Our fix'd intentions fail and come to naught,
While enterprising girls with wit and beauty,
Thus on our guard to attract us vainly try,
And languish in dejection.

FASHIONS IN SHOES.

How the Fancies of Men and Women for Foot Coverings Have Changed.

There have been notable changes in the fashions of footwear within a generation. In earlier days males wore long top boots the year round almost exclusively, only varying in thickness. Even in this respect the variations were frequently limited to a process of oiling or "greasing." The women stuck quite persistently to low-cut shoes, or, to speak precisely, to slippers for Summer, and buskins for Winter. These dainty slippers laced with galloon upon the ankle produced a bewitching effect. Occasionally one saw a woman in bootees. These were the pioneers of sidelace gaiters which came along later. Of course there was some better protection required to overcome the discomforts from deep snows and weariness of travel, for which the facilities were then so meager, and these were afforded by the ubiquitous woolen socks which were worn over the shoes and ankles. Save in large cities or villages very few of the new rubber shoes were worn. These were luxuries seldom indulged in, because of the cost and of the lack of knowledge as to their repellant qualities, as well as to the labor required in confirming the ungainly things to the contour of the shoe. In the course of events customs have changed materially. With the incoming of women's gaiter boots men began to grow more partial to shoes, and gradually discarded the long-leg appendage. The prevalence of hoop skirts among women rendered a species of protective footwear necessary, while on the other hand the style of tight-fitting trousers with men made the legs of boots an incumbrance. Rubber shoes, meanwhile, have become cheap and popular, so that both sexes are on a plane of equality in the matter of covering for the feet.

Alluding to oiling or greasing boots in early time for Winter service recalls the cheerful fireplace where the operation was conducted. This was before the era of stoves, when sitting around the ample wood fire of a Winter's evening was a signal for conviviality, with such wholesome refreshments as apples, pumpkin-pie and sparkling cider, and such amusements as checkers, fox or geese or 12-penny morris. The operation of greasing was usually performed with melted beef fat, though many affected neatsfoot oil as superior. The task was usually allotted to one of the youngsters who rubbed the grease in with bare hand so long as the leather thoroughly heated by the fire, would soak it. This proceeding rendered the surface impervious to water, kept it soft and pliable as well, and helped to exclude cold. The objection to this treatment was that boots could never be polished, but plain country people didn't do that much, unless it might be some young men with a taste for sparking.

The custom of measurement shoemaking that formerly prevailed so extensively is worth mentioning. Sale work, called derisively "slop work," was rarely seen or handled. A shoe store in the most populous towns was a place where ready made shoes could be procured, though the largest portion of its customers left their measures, which were in turn transferred to various cordwainers to be attended to. Many of these latter made periodical visits to the house of customers and supplied their wants. The nicest boots were found among the importers. We had not then acquired the facility for producing a boot equal in style and fit to the French article.

When shoes began to supersede boots, over-gaiters came into use and have been worn ever since with scarcely any change. Not a few persons use them. There was not much difference in contour or construction between the gaiter of 1840 and that of 1885. At one period an alteration was tried, a steel spring was substituted for buttons, but it was an unsuccessful experiment, and was followed by a return to the original method.

The immediate predecessors of india-rubber shoes for wear in cities where paths were prepared during the snowy seasons, were articles technically described as "galoches." They were, in fact, leather over-shoes, save that the protection came to the sole of the foot rather than to other parts. The prototype of this shoe was the ancient "clog," which, indeed, was worn as a shoe or foot covering, instead of as an extraneous protector. In later years the "patten" of England was kindred to the "galoche." There was always something natty in the appearance of this article, and the facility with which it could be doffed was in its favor as well. Yet, woe to the individual who attempted the use of a new pair upon icy walks where the hard and smooth soles beguiled frequent downfalling to the uninitiated. The original vulcanized rubber shoes had a leather bottom, and it constituted an objection hard to overcome because they were so slippery. The use of rubber bottoms came as a boon to the appreciation of this specie of footwear. From the Shoe and Leather Reporter.

About Finger-Nails.

"Few people understand how to cut their nails," said the young lady manicure. "A knife or scissors should never be used. I trim and shape the nail with a small file, and then carefully smooth down and bevel the roughened edges with emery board, which keeps them from breaking and trains them to a symmetrical growth. Another important point where people neglect their nails is in allowing the skin to grow out on the base of the nail. This should be carefully pushed back with a blunt instrument at least once a week. I soak the hands of my customers in tepid water a few minutes before I do this, so as to soften the cuticle. This is necessary, as otherwise it is liable to break. It requires great care as the base of the nail, which is very sensitive, may be bruised or the delicate edges of the skin broken. Another place where care is needed is at the sides of the nails, where it leaves the fingers. Lack of attention to this either hardens the end of the finger or produces the untidy and painful hangnails which disfigure so many hands. In filing the nails the file should always be drawn from the finger and toward the end of the nail."

"What are the hardest things to overcome in operating on hands that have been neglected?"

"There are several things. Mothers sometimes make a practice of cutting their children's nails almost square with a pair of scissors. That hardens the ends of the finger and produces a misshapen nail. It can be overcome, however, in time. By filing the nail from the sides it can be narrowed by degrees to that filbert shape which is considered the height of beauty. The finger will be blunt, but even that will be remedied to some extent. Then we have the people who bite their finger-nails close off. They are hard customers to deal with, the nail is deformed and brittle, and care has to be taken in dealing with it. Manicures use a preparation to stop the biting and then correct the other defects by degrees."

"With whom do you do your best trade?"

"Well, here, in Pittsburg, so far, it has been mostly with society ladies. Have had very few customers from the working classes yet. Suppose that is because they have not yet learned that there is a manicure in the city. In New York, however, we treated fully as many working girls—that is, those who did work hard and wearing upon hands as any other. The hands of such persons must of necessity be hard to keep in order, but there is no one who appreciates the beauty of a nice hand and pretty nails more than they. Do you know there are several diseases of the finger-nails?" she continued. "Well, there are. One is called onychia parasitica, which is much to be dreaded. It acts upon the nails by thickening and drying them. They lose their polish and grow rough and brittle. With a powerful glass the little parasites which cause the trouble can be seen growing in among the component parts of the nail. The nail has a dirty brown color, streaked with a darker color, and the nail is raised up and thickened. The disease is rare, and can only be treated by a skillful physician.

"The white specks on the nail, which we were told as children indicated gifts, are really a nail disease, resulting, I think, from slight diseases. Hang-nails are where the nail adheres to the cuticle, and proves more than anything else the use of the manicure's art. Hypertrophy often afflicts the nails, causing an excessive growth and a dull, yellowish color, and often produces extreme pain from ingrowing nails and other irritation. This can be remedied by a skilled manicure, but cannot be cured."

It Belonged to Another Road.

"So Vanderbilt is dead," said the freight brakeman. "I saw Billy once, and at that time I wished I hadn't. It was when I was a brakeman on the Central. One day we were shifting cars at a little station near Syracuse, when a special car, with locomotive attached, came in and stood on the main track near where we were at work. Special cars were not very uncommon, and we didn't pay much attention to this one. Pretty soon I was making a coupling, but the infernal link wouldn't fit. I tried it two or three times, and the engineer got out of patience backing up for me so many times, and I began to get mad myself. Then I gave it another trial, but still it wouldn't work, and then I took the link and gave it a sling into the creek, and swore into the bargain. In about ten seconds I heard some one calling me, and, looking up, saw a plug-hatted, side-whiskered man standing on the platform of the special car. I knew him as soon as I laid eyes on him—it was Billy Vanderbilt.

"'See here, young man,' says he; 'I've been watching you. Do you know whose property you have been throwing into the creek?'

"'Yes, sir,' says I, trembling and expecting to be bounced the next minute.

"'Well, whose was it?'

"'The Pennsylvania Railroad's, sir,' says I.

"'Oh,' replied Vanderbilt, and then he went into his car and shut the door. I wasn't bounced either."—Chicago Herald.

President Eliot's Curiosity.

President Eliot, of Harvard College, is a man of marked ability as an executive officer. He is weak on the scholarly side. His communication to the world that General Grant had never heard of Oliver Twist reminds me of a rattling good story on himself, the authenticity of which I can vouch for.

When Bonamy Price, professor of political economy at Oxford, was being entertained in Cambridge, Price and Eliot were thrown together at dinner. Bonamy, who was an intolerable bore, and on his old hobby, "The Basis of Civilization, What Was It?" loudly declared that the only one who had successfully answered the question was a young girl—of Cambridge, Eng. So that I may arouse no unnecessary curiosity, let me say at once the answer to Professor Price's conundrum was simply this: "Progressive Desire." But valuable or not, Price did not choose to divulge the wonderful answer on the occasion in question. He merely propounded it as something every one should know. The Boston men laughed uneasily, as if to say, "Oh, yes, we know it," and the subject of conversation suddenly changed.

The next day President Eliot sought out Price, and, after a little conversation, began in an embarassed way to broach something.

"Professor Price, I was much interested in the turn the conversation took last evening."

No answer from Price except a slight raising of the eyebrows.

"You spoke, I believe, of a young lady, who, who—"

A downward look from Price.

"Who successfully answered the question, 'What was the true basis of civilization?'"

Price nodded in the affirmative.

"I forgot to ask you about it at the time," continued Eliot in the agony of his literary pride, "but I have been haunted by the idea all night. Would you mind telling me what is the true basis of civilization?"

"No, sir," answered Bonamy promptly, "find it out for yourself!" San Francisco Ingleside.

Ladies' Hair.

A "sweet disorder" in the arrangement of the hair is not only allowable just now about the temples and upon the crown of the head, but it is considered very proper and "stylish" to allow numberless short stray zephyr locks to fall carelessly from either side of the graceful French twist which carries the most of the high hair to the front and sides of the head. The fashionable young lady thus coiffured naturally gives the idea to people not yet instructed in this new art of hair dressing, that she has either quite forgotten to make her usual toilet, or has recently encountered a gale. The struggling wisps, nevertheless, are noticed upon every other "society girl" one meets just now. They are fashionable, and we know what fierce violent objections may quickly be crushed out and overruled by that magical assurance. Critically, however, the "latest style" in hair dressing is an untidy one, but no more so than the wearing with the most carefully made and handsome toilet of a dingy and soiled undressed glove—a fashion which still obtains with many best dressed people.—N. Y. Evening Post.

Industrial Exhibition.

Peterborough is progressing, and in the way of manufacturers her progress is so marked that it is proposed to hold an Industrial Exhibition at an early date. The Ladies Aid Society of the George street Methodist church is at the bottom of it. It is proposed to hold an exhibition of articles made by the single members of the congregation, which will embrace the young men employed in our manufactories; and of course, if any young lady can be found in town who can make a shirt or stocking or crazy quilt or any other sort of bric a brac needlework, she is eligible to compete. Prizes will be awarded the most deserving artizans of both sexes, and the articles will, after the exhibition, be sold and the proceeds applied to the organ fund. The old folks will not be excluded. Any person not eligible to compete in the bachelor and spinster class, may send in a quarter of beef, a ton of coal, or cord of wood, a sewing machine or organ, or any other vendible article, to be sold, for the benefit of the organ fund. Under the vigorous management of the ladies, the exhibition promises to be as successful in outcome as it is original in conception. Further information as to details will be be supplied here after.

In yesterday's issue was reported five cases which appeared before the Medical Board of Examiners, but the noon train from the west brought an additional number of disabled North-West volunteers, who were examined in the afternoon.

Trooper Cook, of Peterborough, of French's scouts, wounded in the knee at Batoche. This wound is a relic of the horrors of war and was sickening to behold. The gallant trooper was a surveyor and gave up $100 per month to go to the front. He is permanently disabled and the highest pension he can receive is 65 cents per day.

Private Andersou of "G" Co., Peterborough, heart disease, a bad case, brought on by over exertion. The examiners rated his injuries equal to the loss of a leg, arm and eye.

Private Archibald McLean, of Millbrook, rheumatism brought on by over fatigue and exposure on steamer Northcote.

Private McGill, of Millbrook, acute rheumatism, from exposure and over exertion.

Lieut. R. J. Bell of "H" Co., injury to eye sight, caused by explosion during the march. The Board gave the claim their favorable consideration.

Sergt. W. T. Watts, of "H" Co. rheumatism.

Sergt. Geo. Wilson, "H" Co., brain fever.

The result of the long and rapid marches made by the Midland Battalion is beginning to show. The over-exertion and fatigue are telling seriously upon the men of moderate constitutions.

Private Samuel Bell, who was examined by the Board at their first meeting, was again urgently recommended to the Government as deserving of every consideration.—Intelligencer.

Mr. Gladstone's Cabinet.

Official Announcement of the Members Thereof.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The new Cabinet is officially announced as follows:—

Mr. Gladstone, prime minister and first lord of the treasury.
Sir Farrer Herschell, lord high chancellor.
Earl Spencer, lord president of the council.
Mr. H. C. E. Childers, home secretary.
Earl Rosebery, secretary for foreign affairs.
Earl Granville, secretary for the colonies.
Earl Kimberley, secretary for India.
Mr. H. Campbell-Bannerman, secretary for war.
Sir. Wm. Vernon Harcourt, chancellor of the exchequer.
Marquis of Ripon, first lord of the admiralty.
Mr. J. C. Chamberlain, president of the local government board.
Mr. G. O. Trevelyan, secretary for Scotland.
Mr. A. J. Mundella, president of the board of trade.
Mr. Jno. Morley, chief secretary for Ireland.

The following appointments have been made under the new administration; Earl Sydney, lord stewart of the Queen's household; Mr. Arnold Morley, patronage secretary; Mr. Charles Russell, attorney-general.

The composition of a new cabinet has caused a great surprise. It is thought to show marks of a compromise.

No definite appointments to minor offices have been announced.

The Daily News considers the new ministry a strong one and specially approves of the appointment of the Earl of Rosebery and John Morley. It says that the selection of the Earl of Kimberley for the Indian Secretaryship is the only choice that is likely to meet with negative approval. The absence of Lord Hartington from the cabinet the News says is a matter of regret which may, however, at no distant date be removed.

"Are you going to stop here awhile?" asked a reporter of a prominent European at the Union Depot. "O, no," was the reply; "I have just got in from New York, and leave in half an hour for Chicago." "You stay a few days in Chicago, I suppose?" "O, no; merely change cars for Omaha." "And then you explore the Great West, probably?" "Not at all. Get dinner, perhaps, at Omaha, and then start right back, and leave New York for England on the first vessel." "Then your visit will be somewhat hurried?" "O, yes, a little; you see I only want to gather materials for a book on America, and for three or four lectures."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

Standing at the corner of Main and North streets yesterday one of our first citizens—one, by the way, whose name was a few weeks ago prominently mentioned for the mayoralty—said to another gentleman equally well known: "I have been in a study for some days past over a curious fact that so many of our best people, those of highest station and who reside in the most aristocratic precincts of the city, make a practice of going in and out of back doors." "O, nonsense," was the reply, "that isn't so. I'm a pretty close observer myself, and have never noticed anything of the kind." "You haven't, eh? Then just you watch the street-cars."—Buffalo Courier.

Don't be Duped.

Smokers will further their own interest by insisting upon having the "Cable," or "El Padre" brand of cigars, which have stood the test for a quarter of a century, and not allow greedy and unscrupulous dealers to persuade them to take other brands which pay them a larger profit, the consumer being a loser thereby.

DEAR SIR,—Please accept my best thanks and convey the same to the officers of the Equitable Life Assurance Society for the satisfactory payment of the $2,000 for which my late husband's life was insured. I feel the more grateful because evil disposed persons, filled with envy and malice, did all in their power to prevent the payment of the claim. But the action of the Equitable illustrates the justice of the claim and proves to the world that the Society is not only equitable in name but in practice. I have therefore great pleasure in recommending both yourself and your Company to all who desire reliable insurance.

THE CHOICE OF A WIFE.

Women who Lift Men up and Those Who Drag Them Down.

The First of a Series of Sermons on the Marital Relations, Preached by the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage at the Brooklyn Tabernacle.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 10.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage preached this morning in the Brooklyn Tabernacle, the first of his series of sermons on "The Marriage Ring," the subject being "The Choice of a Wife." In the series will be treated the following subjects, of the greatest importance to every person: "The Choice of Husband and wife," "Clandestine Marriage and Escapades," "Duties of Husbands to Wives," "Duties of Wives to Husbands," "In Matter of Religion, Should the Wife Go with the Husband, or the Husband Go with the Wife?" The Wrong Ways of Woman," "Costume and Morals," "Competent House-wifery," "Sensible Young Womanhood," "Women Who Will Pass Life Single," "Influence of Sisters Over Brothers," "The Modern Novel and Woman," "Boarding-house and Hotel Life," "Treatment of Man Servant and Maid Servant." The hymn sung on the occasion was:

"The morning light is breaking.
The darkness disappears."

An organ solo was rendered by Prof. Henry Eyre Browne, who selected the first sonata in D minor by Ritter for his musical theme. After expounding a passage of scripture Dr. Talmage took for his text: Judges xiv, 3: "Is there never a woman among the daughters of thy brethren, or among all my people, that thou goest to take a wife of the uncircumcised Philistines?" Dr. Talmage said:

Samson, the giant, is here asking consent of his father and mother to marriage with one whom they thought unfit for him. He was wise in asking their counsel, but not wise in rejecting it. Captivated with her looks the big son wanted to marry a daughter of one of the hostile families, a deceitful, hypocritical, whining and saturnine creature who afterward till she quit him forever. In my text his parents forbade the banns, practically saying: "When there are so many honest and beautiful maidens of your own country, are you so hard put to for a lifetime partner that you propose conjugality with this foreign flirt? Is there such a dearth of lilies in our Israelitish gardens that you must wear on your heart a Philistine thistle? Do you take a crab apple because there are no pomegranates? Is there never a woman among the daughters of thy brethren, or among all my people, that thou goest to take a wife of the uncircumcised Philistines?

MADE FOR HIM A WORLD OF TROUBLE

Excuseless was he for such a choice in a land and amid a race celebrated for female loveliness and moral worth, a land and a race of which self-denying Abigail, and heroic Deborah, and dazzling Vashti, and pious Esther, and glorious Ruth, and Mary who hugged to her heart the blessed Lord, were only magnificent specimens. The midnight folded in their hair, the lakes of liquid beauty in their eye, the gracefulness of spring morning in their posture and gait, were only typical of the greater brilliance and glory of their soul. Likewise excuseless is any man in our time who makes life-long alliance with any one who, because of her disposition, or heredity, or habits, or intellectual vanity, or moral twistification, may be said to be of the Philistines.

The world never owned such opulence of womanly characters or such splendour of womanly manners or multitudinous instances of wifely, motherly, daughterly, sisterly devotion, as it owns to-day. I have not words to express my admiration for good womanhood. Woman is not only man's equal, but in affectional and religious nature, which is the best part of us, she is 75 per cent. his superior. Yea; during the last twenty years, through the increased opportunity opened for female education, the women of the country are better educated than the majority of men; and if they continue to advance in mentality at the present ratio, before long the majority of men will have difficulty in finding, in the opposite sex, enough ignorance to make

APPROPRIATE CONSORT.

If I am under a delusion as to the abundance of good womanhood abroad, consequent upon my surroundings since the hour I entered this life until now, I hope the delusion will last until I embark from this planet. So you will understand, if I say in this course of sermons, something that seems severe, I am neither cynical nor disgruntled.

There are in almost every farmhouse in the country, in almost every home of the great towns, conscientious women, worshipful women, self-sacrificing women, holy women, innumerable Mary's, sitting at the feet of Christ; innumerable mothers, helping to feed Christ in the person of His suffering disciples; a thousand capped and spectacled grandmothers Lois, bending over Bibles whose precepts they have followed from early girlhood; and tens of thousands of young women that are dawning upon us from school and seminary, that are going to bless the world with good and happy homes that shall eclipse all their predecessors—a fact that will be acknowledged by all men except those who are struck through with moral decay from toe to cranium; and more inexcusable than the Samson of the text is that man who, amid all this unparalleled munificence of womanhood, marries a fool. But some of you are abroad suffering from such disaster, and to halt others of you from going over the same precipice, I cry out, in the words of my text: "Is there never a woman among the daughters of thy brethren, or among all my people, that thou goest to take a wife of the uncircumcised Philistines?"

There are thousands of American pulpits, among them this pulpit, guilty in the fact that on some of the subjects on which men and woman need practical advice, they have been silent or teaching them only in forceless circumlocution. About the a question in which so much of time and all of eternity are involved, what almost universal silence in the Church, so that there are not ten people in this house who have ever heard a discourse upon this theme; and the first one I have ever heard in the one I am preaching. We leave to the flippant novel, or the spectacular play, or the jingle of a doggerel rhyme, that which ought to burden the most tremendous sermon a minister ever preaches, from the day when he takes ordination to the day when in judgment he meets his God. And so, in this course of sermons, I am going to hitch up my best team to the whiffletree, and put the coulter of the plough clear up to the beam, and go straight on from fence to fence, however many nests of moles and serpents may be ripped up by the furrow, and however many alarmed people may cry "Whoa."

That marriage is the destination of the human race is a mistake that I want to correct before I go further. There are multitudes who never will marry, and still greater multitudes who are not fit to marry. In Great Britain to-day there are 948,000 more women than men, and that, I understand, is about the ratio in America. By mathematical and inexorable law, you see, millions of women will never marry. The supply for matrimony is greater than the demand, the first lesson of which is that every woman ought to prepare to take care of herself if need be. Then there are thousands of men who have no right to marry, because they have become so corrupt of character that their offer of marriage is an insult to any good woman. Society will have to be toned up and corrected on this subject, so that it shall realize that if a woman who has sacrificed her honor is unfitted for marriage, so is any man who has ever sacrificed his purity. What right have you, O masculine beast! whose life has been loose, to take under your care the spotlessness of a virgin reared in the sanctity of a respectable home? Will a buzzard dare to court a dove. But

THE MAJORITY OF YOU WILL MARRY

and have a right to marry, and as your religious teacher, I wish to say to these men, in the choice of a wife first of all seek divine direction. About thirty-five years ago, when Martin Farquhar Tupper, the English poet, urged men to prayer before they decided upon matrimonial association, people laughed. And some of them have lived to laugh on the other side of their mouth. The need of divine direction I argue from the fact that so many men, and some of them strong and wise, have wrecked their lives at this juncture. Witness Samson and this woman of Timnath. Witness Socrates pecked of the historical Xantippe. Witness Job, whose wife had nothing to prescribe for his carbuncles but allopathic doses of profanity. Witness Ananias, a liar, who might perhaps have been cured by truthful spouse, yet marrying as great a liar as himself—Sapphira. Witness John Wesley, one of the best men that ever lived, united to one of the most outrageous and scandalous of women, who sat in City Road Chapel making mouths at him while he preached. Witness the once connubial wretchedness of John Ruskin, the great art essayist, and Frederick W. Robertson, the great preacher. Witness a thousand hells on earth kindled by unworthy wives, termagants that scold like a March north-easter; female spendthrifts, that put their husbands into fraudulent schemes to get money enough to meet the lavishment of domestic expenditure; opium-eating women—about 400,000 of them in the United States—who will have the drug though it should cause the eternal damnation of the whole household; heartless and overbearing and namby-pamby and unreasonable women, yet married—married, perhaps, to good men. These are the women that build the low club-houses, where the husbands and sons go because they can't stand it at home. On this sea of matrimony, where so many have wrecked, am I not right in advising divine pilotage?

Especially is devout supplication needed because of the fact that society is so full of artificialities that as to whom they are marrying, and no one but the Lord knows. After the dressmaker, and the milliner, and the jeweler, and the hair adjuster, and the dancing master, and the cosmetic art have completed their work, how is an unsophisticated man to decipher the physiological hieroglypics, and make accurate judgment of who it is to whom he offers his hand and heart. This is what makes so many recreant husbands. They make an honorable marriage contract, but the goods delivered are so different from the sample by which they bargained. They were simply swindled, and they backed out. They mistook Jezebel for Longfellow's Evangeline, and Lucretia Borgia for Martha Washington.

The worst predicament possible is to be unhappily yoked together. You see it is impossible to break the yoke. The more you pull apart the more galling the yoke. The minister might bring you up again, and in your presence read the marriage ceremony backward, might put you on the opposite sides of the alter from where you were when you were united, might take the ring off of the finger, might rend the wedding veil asunder, might tear out the marriage leaf from the family Bible record, but all that would fail to unmarry you.

A Successful Remedy.

Dr. Dorenwend's German "Hair Magic" has proved itself to be a first-class remedy for gray, and thin hair. The sale of it is rapidly increasing everywhere. Where the roots of the hair are not altogether destroyed, it will make it come in thick and strong, and restore the gray hair back to its natural colour. For sale by all principal drug stores. J. Tully, agent for Peterborough.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

Fifth Parliament—Third Session.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 3rd.

The House held only a twenty-minute session to-day.

Hon. Mr. Fraser introduced a bill to provide compensation to workmen.

Mr. Mowat, in reply, said the Government had decided to appoint commissioners and inspectors in Scott Act counties, but the other matters urged by the deputation had not been considered.

THURSDAY, FEB. 4th,

Another brief session to-day.

The report of the committee appointed to strike the standing committees was presented.

Several reports were presented, and in reply to Mr. Carnegie's painful solicitude for the report of the Agricultural College, Hon. Mr. Ross said the report would be ready in a few days.

The House adjourned.

The Late Principal Barron.

An Old Worthy of Toronto who Has Just Gone to Rest

The late principal Barron, to whom the following reference from the Globe applies, was the father-in-law of Mr. A. P. Peussette, barrister of this place, and father of the Mr. J. A. Barron, Lindsay, barrister. He He has also an honored place in the memory of many persons in this town, who enjoyed the privileges of his instructions at the Boarding School he conducted with so much ability at Gore's Landing. Referring to him the Globe says:—

For 25 years he was a master at Upper Canada College, and under his tuition and training, at one time or another, came most of the middle-aged men who to-day boast of being old College boys. Mr. Frederick William Barron was a typical master of the old school. He was strict and severe, but thoroughly just and impartial. He balanced the scales so evenly in school matters that no boy ever attempted to question the justness of his approbation or punishment. As an educationist he was thorough and painstaking, glorying in first laying, as he often called it, "the ground-work." He was much attached to boys, and led them in their sports and games, and endeared himself to his pupils by his anxious interest in them, in and out of school. His ancestors were Irish, but he himself was where he was educated at the public school, after leaving which he entered Cambridge. In 1834 he sailed for Canada, and settled near Stratford. He soon discovered the life of farming would be uncongenial to him, and applied for one of the masterships of the U. C. College then vacant. He was at once appointed, and from then until 1859 he remained in active connection with the College. For 13 years he was Principal. In 1859 he removed to Cobourg, where he assumed control of the Grammer School at that place, resigning it a few years later to carry on a private "Church of England school." He then removed his school to Gore's Landing, on Rice Lake, where he carried it on until about three years ago, when he finally gave up teaching. The sudden cessation from an exceedingly active life seemed to affect him, and his health soon began to fail. He is who are fast passing away as prominent in entertainment and amusement. He married twice. His first wife was Eleanor Thompson, daughter of the late William Thompson, who sailed for Canada on the same vessel as Mr. Barron. By her he had several children, three of whom only are living. His second marriage was to Mrs. Gore, of Gore's Landing, who survives him. He was a prominent Mason, and will be buried with Masonic honours.

BORN IN ENGLAND

REMEMBERED BY OLD TORONTONIANS

"Sarah" as an Investment.

Mr. Carnegie has resumed active operations. The House yesterday, (Thursday), was again permitted to hear his familiar petition for a return from the Agricultural College. He will run this for the remainder of the session alternately with his timber license enquiry. The Mail estimates the cost of the Legislature when in session at $5,000 a day. At that rate the time occupied by Mr. Carnegie during the last two sessions of the Assembly in trying to locate a grievance in connection with the Agricultural College represents an expenditure of not less than $50,000. Mr. Carnegie's total cost per session, vide Mail, does not fall much below $100,000. At this rate he is by odds the worst investment the Province has.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1886.

Liberals! see that your name appears on the PRELIMINARY Dominion Voters' List within the next ten days! Don't delay; delay means disfranchisement.

THAT FRANCHISE ACT

The following is the opinion of the Montreal Herald, an independent journal with Tory leanings, regarding the "difficulties and injustices" of Sir John's disfranchising measure:—"The difficulties and injustice of the celebrated Franchise Act are now becoming apparent, and the expense of operating it is likely to be quite as great as that estimated when friends as well as foes endeavored to induce Sir John to withdraw it. It is necessary for each voter to examine the Assessor's list. If his name if not on it he must either post to the Revising Officer's clerk, or he must serve a notice on the Revising Officer before March 1st, stating his qualification and making his claim. If he does not do this the trouble and expense of attending the Division Court must be incurred. The time has now arrived for attending to these matters, and the public are beginning to realize how much better it would have been had the Herald's suggestion been carried out, and all the frivolous distinctions removed. The spirit of the Canadian constitution is manhood suffrage; this act as well as the Ontario and some of the Maritime Province acts is very nearly a manhood suffrage act, but for some inscrutable reason Sir John insists upon quibbles and distinctions that can have no worthy object. It is a disfranchising rather than an enfranchising act, because it raises difficulties and creates formalities having the effect of keeping men off the voter's list. The country has not so much money to spare at the moment that it can afford to spend nearly half a million dollars on a constitutional experiment, the only effect of which can be to deprive many thousand men of a vote that the constitution intended they should exercise."

A CONCERTED PLAN.

The Dominion Government is not at all easy respecting the results of the policy it has pursued in dealing with the Northwest rebellion and its outcome, and are seeking by every means in their power to procure endorsations of their policy. Apparently orders to this effect have been issued from headquarters, and the rank and file are ready to obey them. The first local indication was the attempt of the Reeve of Lakefield to convert the County Council of Peterborough into a political club, and to cause it to prostitute itself to endorsing the course of the Dominion Government. But the whitewashing job failed of accomplishment. Sir John's lieutenants in the local house made a similar attempt, and therein made a base at abuse of the position they occupied, to make political capital for the Dominion Government. Without entering into the merits or demerits of the amendments to the address, moved by Mr. Meredith and Mr. White, it may be pointed out that they were utterly, out of place, and irrelevant to the duties of the local legislature. An Anglican or Presbyterian Synod or a Methodist conference would be just as proper a place to introduce such resolutions; and these bodies, because they rejected them could do so without committing themselves to endoration or disapproval of the sentiments they contained. They would have no business to deal with them. Neither had the Provincial legislature with the motions in question. The latter body would be as well justified in pronouncing upon the soundness of the Apostles' Creed, the truth of the doctrine of Predestination or the wisdom of the Itinerant System; and should it, in the exercise of consistency and with due regard to the scope of its legitimate functions, vote down any resolution which any hamptious and scheming member might introduce, it would simply pronounce upon the impolicy of such a motion without regard to enforcing or condemning its sentiments. To show the real object of the motions, the interpretation of the vote, made by the Tory organs may be given. They declare that in rejecting the buncombe amendments the House voted that Riel was unjustly hanged. They ignore the resolution of Hon. Mr. Fraser which declared that it was improper to express an opinion on the subject without the evidence, which Hon. Mr. Blake declared it was his intention to demand on the opening of Dominion Parliament. The trickery employed was unworthy and unstatesmanlike, but no more than could have been expected of Mr. Meredith and following, who have even shown a desire to play into the hands of Sir John, regardless of the interests of the Province of Ontario. Mr. Meredith and the Tory organs must hold the people of Ontario as little better than fools, if it is to such false and illiberal inferences or thought the latter can hide their sullen countenance to such despicable trickery. They are striving to do what Mr. Blake declared he would not do—erect a political platform on the Regina scaffold. Desperate must be the cause which needs such support.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Henry Cargill, Reeve of Greenock, and formerly of Nassagaweya, has been nominated as the Tory candidate for the Commons for East Bruce.

Speaking of the address delivered in London, Ont., by the Hon. Edward Blake, the New York Sun says his advice "is the perfection of political wisdom, and the more thoroughly the Canadians follow it the better it will be."

The Montreal Star says: "It is sincerely to be hoped that Mr. Joly can be prevailed upon to enter the Dominion Parliament. There is no one whose presence would be more welcome to the people at large. A gentleman without fear and without reproach, he would do honor to any legislative body in the world."

One of our ablest lawyers has just passed away in the person of Mr. Joseph Doutre, Q. C., of Montreal. Mr. Doutre was brought into the greatest prominence by the Guibbord case, which agitated the whole country a few years ago. In that case he was counsel for Institut Canadien and finally obtained a decision of the Privy Council authorising the interment of Guibord's remains in consecrated ground. He was also one of the counsels on the British side before the Halifax Fishery Commissioner in 1877, when the award of five millions was obtained from the United States for the use of Canadian Fisheries. A few years ago he published a digest of the British North American Act, which is now the standard authority on Constitutional law.

An Uninteresting Calculation.

There is no end to the fanciful conceits which may be framed in regard to large sums of money. The recent death of W. H. Vanderbilt has enabled the curious architects of such fancies to indulge in a variety of surprising and grotesque illustrations, which they have produced for the purpose of giving to the mind some adequate notion of a sum so vast as $200,000,000 in money. The old calculation, as to how long it would take a cannon-ball, speeding through space at the rate of 6,000 feet a second, to reach the sun and distant stars, are recalled by these unique statements in regard to the height that Vanderbilt's pile of money would reach, or the breadth of ground that it would cover, if it should be all heaped up or spread out at once. It is to be remarked that all the calculations of this character relate to what Vanderbilt left behind, not to what he took with him.

A "lightning calculator," in the New York Times, produces the following statements for our edification:

If this sum of $200,000,000 were in standard silver dollars it would present such features as this:

Put lengthwise, dollar after dollar, it would stretch a distance of 4,672 miles, making a silver streak from New York across the ocean to Liverpool.

Piled up, dollar on dollar, it would reach a height of 355 miles.

Laid flat on the ground, the dollars would cover a space of nearly 60 acres.

The weight of this mass of silver would be 7,160 tons.

To transport it would require 358 cars, carrying twenty tons each (this is the capacity of the strongest freight cars) and making a train just about two and a half miles long.

On ordinary grades it would require twelve locomotives to haul this train. On roads of steep grades and sharp curves, fifteen or twenty locomotives would be needed.

In $1 bills this $200,000,000 fortune would assume such shapes as this:

The bills stretched lengthwise would extend 23,674 miles, or nearly the circumference of the earth at the equator.

Piled up one on another, close as leaves in a new book, they would reach a height of twelve miles.

Spread out on the ground they would cover 746 acres, or nearly the whole surface of Central Park, including ponds and reservoirs.

A safe deposit vault to contain these bills would require to be 23 feet long, 22 feet wide and 20 feet high.

If we admit all this without hesitation or incredulity, we may then ask what of it? Vanderbilt's wealth appears of colossal proportions. Vanderbilt himself is nothing.

Great Cæsar dead and turned to clay.
Might stop a hole to keep the wind away.

While the mathematician of the New York Times was working out his problems as to Vanderbilt's money, the heirs of Vanderbilt aided by the police were engaged in the ghastly task of hiring a guard to watch his remains in order to prevent them from being stolen from the vault in which they were inclosed, like those of Stewart, the other hundred millionaire, who died a few years ago.

The Louisville Courier-Journal tells the following incident of the late Mr. Hendricks' boyhood: "A boy, the son of a poor widow, attended the seminary. One cold November morning the boy came to school barefoot, as he had no shoes. During the forenoon there was a heavy snowstorm. At noon the barefoot boy went to the front door when school was dismissed, but turned back to re-enter the school-room, as he could not go out into such a storm in his naked feet. Young Hendricks knew all about his poverty, and, following him into the school-room, insisted on taking off his shoes and lending them to the poor boy to wear home. 'You can send them back by sister Nannie, whom I will get to go home with you.' The boy accepted the proffered kindness, and Hendricks sat in the school-room in his stocking-feet till his sister returned with his shoes."

Birds are said to leave the vicinity where cholera prevails.

Grape plants are to be taken from this country by the Austrian government, in the hope that fresh vines will resist the destroying insects.

Strange Traffic.

"This Phil Armour may be a very smart man," said the long-haired passenger from Wisconsin, "but I have a scheme which will make a million dollars while he's making a cent—a million to his cent I say."

"What, you?"

"Yes, me. I'm the very man that's got the scheme. Got it right here in my head, too. Still I won't promise not to give it away. I'll tell you what it is. You promise? All right. Well, to begin with, wheat is a great staple, ain't it? The wheat crop of the northwest regulates the price in the world according to its quantity, doesn't it? As soon as farmers get their crops harvested they thresh it out, don't they? The wheat comes in as fast as it is needed and can be shipped, and so the price is regulated, not by what is offered, but by the quantity raised, ain't it? Now, see here. Suppose I get up a company; we incorporate under the laws of several states; we send out 1,000 agents, who travel all over the northwest during the first seven months of 1886; they each see ten farmers a day, or 10,000 altogether, or 80,000 a week, or say 1,500,000 farmers during the seven months; they get each one of them farmers to join our association, taking stock to the extent of his wheat crop, whatever it may be; every farmer agrees under penalty not to sell a bushel of wheat until the price touches $2 at Chicago, and to give the association all he gets over $2 a bushel; these 1,500,000 farmers will grow four-fifths of the wheat crop of the country, and thus we'll have the 1886 crop in our pool; there'll be no wheat offered in the market, and to be had for love, food or money; the price will go sailing up to about $5 a bushel in less than ten days after threshing begins; the world must have wheat, and we'll have a corner on about all the wheat in America. We'll make such regulations as to the quantities to be sold that we can keep the price at about $3 all fall and winter. Millions in it? Why millions are no name for it. The farmers will fall over each other in their haste to get into our association. We'll be the absolute masters of the grain market, and if the crop is 500,000,000 bushels we'll make about $500,000,000. Our expenses will be only two millions. And that ain't all. We'll sell railroad stocks short, because if the roads can't get any wheat to carry they'll have to pass their dividends, and down will go their shares five points at a jump."

"Great scheme."

"Great scheme! Why man, in two years I'll be able to buy Chicago. I'll build a palace the walls of which shall be $20 gold pieces. But say!"

"What!"

"Lend me half a dollar till after I get my company started, will you?"—Chicago Herald.

SCIENCE VS. BULL DOG.

A New Invention for Getting Rid of Poets, Canvassers, and the Like.

Every reader of the comic newspaper must from time to time had his attention forcibly attracted to the withering contempt and fierce hatred openly entertained by the comic editor against the aspiring poet, whether of the spring or love-lorn variety. The poet, in fact, would seem to hold the same relation to the comic editor as does the red flag to the bull. Week after week, in the comic editor's "Answers to correspondents" may be read such bitter replies as the following: "What ought we to give for your poem? Well, ten days, we should think;" or again, "You should take a long course of Russian baths to get this poetry out of your system; if that doesn't succeed, try a watery grave." Issue after issue of the comic newspaper contains chuckling references on the unhappy fate which has overtaken some poet visiting a comic newspaper office, or teems with dark hints as to trap-doors through which poets are hurled down into mysterious depths, bloodthirsty insinuations as to bulldogs who keep watch over the editorial sanctum, or portentous allusions as to graves which may ere long stand in need of being kept green. "The poet's lovely widow," suggestively remarks one comic editor in this connection, "strews flowers over his tomb; the wily editor still keeps that bulldog in his room."

Now, it is doubtless trying to be almost daily brought in contact with haggard and lank young men—for as such is the poet always pictured by the comic editor—who are addicted to such habits as making "scarcely" rhyme with "nearly," or who, with a monotony that is undeniably ire-provoking, rave over their year of "angel forms," "tender daffodils," and "the flowers that bloom in the spring." Still the sanguinary methods confessedly adopted by the comic editor can not but be deprecated by all truly Christian and peace-loving persons; and it would seem that some means by which he might rid himself of his persecutors could surely be devised without resort being had to mayhem, homicide, and kindred crimes.

Such a means has been afforded by the recent invention of Prof. Grimkopf, of Boston. For a long time past, it appears, the professor has had the eye of science, so to speak, turned upon the poet and others of his race, and to his enlightened mind the bulldog and the trap door have seemed but crude and brutal methods unworthy of the civilization of the age. One day he came across the story in a local newspaper of a merchant who had succeeded in ridding himself of the importunities of a swarm of female book canvassers by a somewhat novel and ingenious method. Whenever the merchant in question heard a female voice behind him exclaiming in dulcet strains: "Won't you please look at this beautiful illustrated work in ninety-nine parts, only 25 cents a part?" he would surreptitiously let loose a number of mice deftly concealed in a cage beneath his desk. The success of the scheme it was recorded, even surpassed expectation. Linking this idea with the scarecrow of the rural districts, Prof. Grimkopf arrived at the deduction that if the unwelcome visitor could be disposed of by a moral instead of a physical shock a decided step in advance would have been attained. Following out this train of thought, he was inspired to an invention which will indubitably prove of the highest value.

This invention consists of an apparatus capable of evolving an apparition somewhat similar to that which might be produced by means of a magic lantern and a canvas. Its workings are described as follows: A poet enters the editor's sanctum. The latter, concealing his hatred in the consciousness of his triumph, softly, almost unctuously, remarks: "Poet, sir? Ah, pleased to see you! Married or single, sir?" If the poet murmurs that he is single the comic editor forthwith sets in motion an attachment on the right-hand side of his desk, and immediately there appears on the wall facing the poet the life-size figure of Mr. John L. Sullivan, in alarmingly pugilistic attitude, with the words emblazoned above his head: "The fighting editor is in." The terror inspired by this apparition has been demonstrated to be fully as effective in leading to a poet's disappearance as if a trap-door were actually opened beneath his feet.

The comic editor's end is thus attained without any approach to battery or bloodshed. If, on the other hand, the poet replies that he is married, the comic editor applies himself to an attachment to the left of his desk, and instantly there is an apparition of a fierce mother-in-law, with a wintry and sarcastic smile, from whose ghostly mouth are to be seen issuing the words: "I have come to pay a nice, long visit, dear." This apparition is declared to be even more effective than the preceding one. In one instance in which the test was applied, it was attended by striking results. The victim, casting one horrified glance at the apparition, rushed precipitately toward the stairs, and, clearing them at a bound, disappeared, and strange to say, has never been heard from since.

Prof. Grimkopf's invention, it is understood, is capable of being applied to other branches of life besides the coming newspaper offices. Apparitions suitable to protecting the head of a public department against the pertinacious office-seeker and the merchant against the wiles of the book women can, it is announced, be furnished on application. Private residences even are to be protected, and the apparition of a tramp at work is declared to be specially efficacious against lusty mendicants. The invention can scarcely fail to net its owners a large fortune, and it is now to be hoped that the reader of the comic newspaper will no longer be shocked by reading of poets being hurled through trap-doors, or of their being torn to pieces by the cruel fangs of the editorial bulldog.—Brooklyn Eagle.

OLD SETH KINMAN.

The Famous Hunter Tells Some Interesting Stories—His Trip to Washington.

A goodly company was gathered about old Seth Kinman, the famous California hunter, in the comfortable reading-room of the international hotel last evening, says the Alta California. Seth was in the best of story-telling moods, and perhaps many present enjoyed the entertainment more than the hero of the moment, who, as he recalled the ancient incidents, appeared to bask in the genial rays of the long ago, when his eye was keener, his step firmer, and his hair a little darker than to-day. Old Seth was born in Union county, Pennsylvania, Sept. 29, 1815, consequently he is now a little past 70. He is fully six feet tall. His hair is long and white, and his full beard the same. His eyes are, however, remarkably bright, and he is unusually active for one of his advanced years. His features are those of a typical hunter, bronzed and wrinkled, but reflecting the glow of health. He was dressed in a long buckskin sack, heavily fringed and neatly embroidered with green silk around the flowing collar and about the cuffs. He wore pants of the same material, and his feet were incased in moccasins. His head was covered with a high white sombrero.

When Buchanan was elected president Seth made up his mind to go to Washington.

"You see," said he, using his index finger to emphasize his remarks, "I kinder thought, after the long rassel I'd had on the borders fightin' bars and Injuns, that I'd like to take a furlough and go to Washington. Wall, I picked on the cheer business as a purty good racket, and at it I went. I'd done favors for Col. Buchanan, who had command of old Fort Humboldt in other days, and one day I told him my scheme. He says: 'Go ahead, Seth, and I'll go to Washington and present the cheer.' Well, to make a long story short, we got thar in due time, and the day was sot for presentin' the cheer. We all marched into the east room. There was a big crowd of starchy-lookin' people thar, I tell you. It kinder kerflummuxed me at first, cause I want used to no sich crowds as that. But I straightened up and waited for the colonel to begin his little piece. Wall, after it was all over, old Buck he got up and shuck me by the hand and made me feel to hum. Bimeby all the women crowded around me and began cuttin' off relics in the shape of strings from my clothes. They got so thick after awhile that I had to skin out. Darned if I warn't scorter orn I would be if a hull pack of bars were on to me. The cheer was made of buck horns. I had my old fiddle thet I made outer a mule's skull, and Buck asked me to give him a tune, and I did. Oh, I had a good time thar. That was in '57.

"When Abe Lincoln was elected I made up my mind I'd give him a cheer too. I knowed him, for he and my father fit together into the Black Hawk war. When I started to Washington I took an Injun along to exhibit him. I give shows on the way. That darned Injun peered out on my hands at Oswego, N. Y. The people fed him so much that he fairly busted. You could a cracked fleas upon his stomach when he croaked. Well, Old Abe got wind o' me and sent for me. Christ. Lloyd, who was clerk of the Pennsylvany house of representatives then, went to Washington with me from Harrisburg. I said to him, 'Now, old man, I'm goin' to present this cheer to Abe myself. I don't want nobody to waw-waw for me this time.' And I did. Old Abe was jest tickled to death, too. He shuck hands with me, and on the sly he took me outen the east room an' gave me a pull at some nice old bourbon. Then afterward I showed him old 'Cotton Bale;' that's the name of my old Kaintuck rifle, and he took it up, sighted it at a imaginary bar, and said: 'Seth, thet's the kind of artillery I was raised on.' Then I brought out my fiddle, and he sot me to playin', and I give him 'Gray Eagle,' 'Old Zip Coon,' 'Gal on a Leg,' and the 'Arkansaw Traveler.' He jest roared all the while. Poor fellow! I was in Ford's theatre the night he was hit.

"Yes, I give a cheer to Johnson, too. I met him in Brown's hotel shortly after Old Abe war shot. He treated me handsomely. Thet cheer was made outen a grizzly bar. I had it rigged so the head o' the old grizzly'd pop out from under when you sot down into it, and show its teeth. Johnson was pleased with it, and wanted to know why I had fixed the head in thet way, and I told him it was to keep the office-seekers from gittin' near him. I played the old fiddle for him, too.

"And I give Hayes a cheer also. It was made of elk horns. I didn't go to Washington to give it to him. I presented it at Columbus, O., when he was guv'nor and just after he was nominated. Some big-wig wanted to know if he couldn't make the speech, and I said, 'No, sir, ye can't. I ain't much posted on grammar nor Webster, but d—d of I can't make Hayes understand me.' An' I did, too, for after he was elected he 'pinted me to an agency in Idaho under Guv'nor Ballard. Wall, I tuck sick in gittin' thar, and had to come to California. I was allus sorry I didn't git into the pfiace, too, for I heerd afterward that that was thunderin' big stealins in that ere agency. Mr. Hayes didn't ask me to take anything, but I got all I wanted afterward."

This was the last chair Old Seth presented. He now has at the International two chairs, one made of elk horns and the other of whalebone. The first he intends presenting to Cleveland next spring.

"It's the last cheer I ever did make," said Seth, with evident satisfaction. "It's the boss, and don't you forget it." He is a great entertainer, and loves to spin his interesting yarns.

Hot Water For All.

A well-known engineer of this city has devised a plan for mitigating the severity of winter and spring in the North Atlantic States and warming the blue noses of our friends in Nova Scotia. The great warm current called the Gulf Stream surges by us on its northeasterly course, but it is commonly believed that the British isles and southwestern Europe get the benefit of it. With this stream almost within our reach we shiver and freeze through the winter months and that horrible season called spring, because a river of ice water from the glaciers of the pole pushes it away from our coast. Mr. Goodrige, the philanthropic engineer to whom we refer, proposes to dam this polar river in the strait of Belle Isle and turn its waters eastward into the wide Atlantic. This strait, which separates Newfoundland from Labrador, is at one point only ten miles wide and 150 feet deep. There he would invest $40,000,000 in a dam.

He suggests that the interposition of this obstacle would raise the temperature of the coast from Newfoundland to Cape Hatteras. Invalids could pass their winters at Cape Cod or on Block Island, the St. Lawrence Gulf and river would become navigable throughout the year, and the Newports of the future would lie on the shores of Nova Scotia. Giving free rein to his imagination, he sees the deflected polar current striking the Gulf stream off the banks of Newfoundland, bending it southward, and compelling it to waste its warmth upon the shores of Africa, while the perishing Britons fly to their Indian empire to save their lives.
